To Correspondents.—It is very important that the correspondence of a journal should be sprightly, pithy, appropriate and interesting. Such communications are respectfully invited, but articles that are too long or irrelevant must be curtailed or declined. No discourteous controversy can be admitted, but the paper is open to the discussion of all proper topics of public interest.

Postal card reports from lecturers, Lodges and friends of temperance will be thankfully received. The Rescue desires to represent all the temperance organizations of the coast and adjoining states and territoties.

PLAIN COPY.

When you write for the Rescue, the best paper to use is white in sheets of 8 or 9 inches long by 5 or 7 wide: that is a very handy size for the printer to work from. Write on one side only; rather use a good pencil than pale ink. Please write plainly too, especially when you give names. Don't harass the printers with puzzling copy. Not much original poetry desired.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died—In Guerneville, on Saturday, November 27th, 1880, John Pool, of Guerneville, Sonoma County, Cal., a native of Illinois, aged 55 years and 3 months; an earnest, faithful worker in the temperance cause, and long a member of Enterprise Lodge, No. 356.

No eulogy can affect our deceased brother, nor would we indulge in common place praise as a form; but as the course of the "tried and true" is not only to be admired, but imitated, and as those with whom he was connected by ties of brotherhood for long years, cannot but wish to have the virtues which endeared him to them recorded, we render the following just though imperfect tribute:

For more than nine years he was a pillar in our temple, yet his faithfulness, zeal and unflagging love for the cause of temperance, our order at large and his own lodge, was so marked, that not only in our immediate circle, but in the community, his name was a synonym of all that a Good Templar should be; his honesty, sincerity and oneness of purpose carried conviction to those he was ever seeking to draw within our walls; and the loving words so often dropping from his lips allayed many a heart burning, and brought peace where anger and resentment had been aroused, and harmony when discord sometimes invaded our usual quiet relations.

Our brother csnnot be forgotten; his memory is embalmed in our hearts; the words we utter are not the echoes of empty ceremony, but their full import is felt.

We recommend the draping of the charter and that the usual badge of mourning be worn for thirty days.

We offer our deepest sympathy to the bereaved, and to those of them who meet with us around the same altar, we would say, though our bonds in the past have been strong, yet this, our common loss, shall draw us closer together.

We advise that the above be spread on the minutes, a copy sent to the friends of the deceased and one to the Rescue for publication.

GUERNEVILLE, DEC. 8.

Editor Rescue:—In a late issue of the Rescue I see you gave notice of the marriage of a Lodge Deputy at Angels Island, and advised other Lodge Deputies to go and do likewise. The advice was good and has been followed by our worthy Officer under the good of the Order, at the last meeting of Enterprise Lodge No. 356. Bro. H. H. Peckinpah, L. D., and Sister P. A. Willits; W. R. H. S., were introduced and duly united in the bonds of matrimony, by Father Walker. After the ceremony was performed, the W. C. declared recess for congratulation; a few minutes being passed in offering the bride and groom the well wishes of the Bros. and Sisters, Lodge was called to order and sang the ode "Now Bound by Honor's Sacred Laws," then a recess declared for further social converse, during which the bride and groom's cakes were brought in and distributed.

Altogether it was a very enjoyable time for those present; for as usual when any thing good is on hand, some of the members are absent: so the best way is for all members to attend every night and then they miss nothing.

Now the ball is in motion: Lodge Deputies keep it a going. Yours, etc., Templar.

LETTER FROM H. R. HUGHES.

Sonora, the county seat of Tuolumne, is a beautiful mountain town, nestled among the hills, whose slopes are adorned with cottages. embowered mid trees, vines and flowers.

All the business men complain of hard times, but are unable to see that their thirty-two bars that bleed the people to the tune of one hundred and fifty dollars per day, are the only cause of their dull, hard times.

Oh! blind business men, when will ye see that this drink traffic is at war with every legitimate business?

Prospected Blanket Creek, but found no prospect of organizing at present, and drove on to Groveland.

Put up with the genial Savory of the Washington Hotel, who, though keeping a bar himself, treated me very kindly and advised the boys to join the lodge. Mr. Foot, the proprietor of the other hotel, kindly tendered me the use of his fine hall for my meetings. Succeeded in organizing Groveland Lodge with twenty charter members notice of which has appeared in the Rescue.

From there to Coulterville, fifteen miles in a drenching rain. Coulterville Lodge is gaining members at almost every meeting.

Conferred the degrees, and lectured, meetings small, on account of the storm. At Merced Falls the lodge meets regularly, but has been troubled to get a suitable place for meetings. The members have true grit, and will make a good lodge.

At Hopeton there is no prospect of re-organizing; they have not met for months; no population to work on, and they will surrender their charter.

At Snellings, noted for "chills and fever" and bad whisky, lectured to about thirty persons; ten members of the lodge present, who desire to re-organize; made arrangements for another meeting on return, and will try to re-organize and give them a new start.

Passed through Hornitos; made arrangements for a meeting on my return. Meetings have been small on account of the cold, foggy, damp weather

Lecture this evening at Mariposa. It has a dozen places where liquors are sold. It holds so many families that it seems very hard to get the right material to take hold and help organize, although they frankly admit the necessity of such an organization. Fraternally yours,

Mariposa, December 4th, 1880.

Congress assembled on the 6th. Mr. Page is already at work preparing to bring up a bill to restrict chinese immigration to 10 per ship. Bill introduced by Convers to make the salary of the President $25,000 a year, payable monthly. The Atty. General suggests the enactment of more stringent election laws to prevent fraud and violence. The President in his message recommends General Grant to be made Captain General.

INTELLECTUAL ENDOWMENTS.

"One man there was, and many such you might Have met, who never had a dozen thoughts
In all his life and never changed their course;
But told them o'er, each in its customed place,
From morn till night, from youth till hoary age.
His reason rose: So weak his memory,
The name his mother called him by, he scarce
Remembered: and his judgement so untaught
That what at evening played along the swamp,
Fantastic, clad in robe of fiery hue,
He thought the devil in disguise, and fled
With quivering heart and winged footsteps home.
The word philosophy he never heard,
Or science: never heard of liberty,
Necessity, or laws of gravitation:
And never had an unbelieving doubt.
Beyond his native vale he never looked;
But thought the visual line, that girt him round,
The world's extreme: and thought the silver moon
That nightly o'er him led her virgin host,
No broader than his fathers shield. He lived—
Lived where his father lived: died where he died;
Lived happy, and died happy, and was saved.
Be not surprised. He loved, and served his God.

There was another, large of understanding,
Of memory infinite, of judgment deep,
Who knew all learning and all science knew;
And all phenomena in heaven and earth,
Traced to their causes; traced the labyrinths
Of thought, association, passion, will.
And all the subtile nice affinities
Of matter traced: its virtues, motions laws:
And most familiarly and deeply talked
Of mental, moral, natural, divine.
Leaving the earth at will, he soared to heaven,
And read the glorious visions of the skies:
And to the music of the rolling spheres
Intelligently listened: and gazed far back
Into the awful depths of Deity;
Did all that mind assisted most could do;
And yet in misery lived, in misery died,
Because he wanted holiness of heart.

A deeper lesson this to mortals taught,
That not in mental, but in moral wealth,
God excellence placed! and only to the good,
To virtue, granted happiness alone.
Admire the goodness of Almighty God;
He riches gave, and intellectual strength
To few, and therefore none commands to be
Or rich or learned: nor promises reward
Of peace to these. On all He moral worth
Bestowed: and moral tribute asked from all.
And who that could not pay? Who born so poor,
Of intellect so mean, as not to know
What seemed the best: and knowing might not do?
As not to know what God and conscience bade?
And what they bade, not able to obey?
And he who acted thus fulfilled the law
Eternal and its promise reaped of peace:
Found peace this way alone: who sought it else,
Sought mellow grapes beneath the icy pole:
Sought blooming roses on the cheek of death:
Course of Time—Pollock.

"I had my misgivins, boss," the waiter said to the landlord, "when he sat down, dat he was carrying moah whisky dan was good for 'im, but he was puffectly quiet and behaved himself well enough an' I didn't pay no attention to it tell he picked up a baked potato and hole it car'fully over the aig glass wid his left hand, and begun to hit de end of de potato wid his spoon. He hit it right hard three or four times, an' den he whack it once or twice on de aige of de plate, and lookin' solemn as an owl all de time, he call me up to him and say as p'lite and dignified as a President. 'Wattah,' he said, "I wish you would jest fix dis biled aig for me, if you please; I'se lorse a good deal of sleep last night, and I'm a little narvous dis mornun,' he says, but I know I hadn't done ought for to laugh, boss, but I hope to die ef I could help it." The Burlington Hawkeye.

THE SALOON.

BY JOHN ARNOUP.

Wealth properly used is one of the great means to happiness. Yet the fact is everywhere forced upon us that the increase of human happiness has not kept pace with the increase of wealth. Every nation of the older continent is an exponent of this truth. In this western hemisphere, rich America with her free institutions, her progressive arts and sciences, and her innumerable advantages over other nations of the earth, pleads no exception to this unwelcome fact. While money can be made a power for good, it can alse be made a power for evil. When money is used either by individuals or by nations to uphold and perpetuate vice, the result will be misery. When it is used to inculcate and practice morality, the result will be happiness. There is no separation possible of these acts from their consequences. Glance at another truth. Man makes institutions, he surrounds himself with law-courts, churches, schools, museums and colleges. These institutions thenceforth help to make and mould the character of man. He is thus both the creator and creature of the circumstances surrounding him. With all the boasted enlightenment of this age, men are using the preponderating mass of the wealth of the world in maintaining institutions of vice. Look at our modern saloon. The world never saw so gigantic and appalling an example as these strong drink fountains present for our sad contemplation. Two hundred years ago, Defoe, in writing of the ale-houses of England, said:—

> "Where God erects a house of prayer,
> The devil builds a chapel there.
> It will be found upon close observation,
> That the latter has the larger congregation."

But the ale-house of his time was a mild and inoffensive thing compared with the saloon of to-day. The devil has been very busy since Defoe's time in saloon matters. The friends of education and the church have permitted the arch-enemy to outstrip them in every direction. And now, after much observation and patient investigation, we assert that the moral and religious advancement of this age is an impossibility without the destruction of the modern saloon.

It is a mistake to say that the saloon merely supplies a want—it creates a want—it is a temptation to drink—it begets vice, pauperism and misery. Look at San Francisco. What can the churches scattered here and there with their occasional hours of praise, effect against 2176 saloons open every day, and dealing out damnation far into the night, while ministers and other active Christians are sleeping on their downy pillows. Other cities and towns are suffering from the like infliction. This whole country is like a sick man on his bed rolling from side to side seeking to throw off this horrid incubus.

Away with that compromising twaddle which we sometimes hear on the temperance platform, "that we are not to blame the men who sell but those who buy the drink!" There is trickery and dishonesty in other businesses beside the whisky traffic. But the liquor business has more bad men in it than can be found in all other trades put together. It has a tendency to break down every noble principle and every good feeling in a man who engages in it. It is a cursed business, and every man that is engaged in it is engaged in a cursed business. The saloon ranges downward from the costly-furnished, brilliantly-lighted room to the dirty drug-cellar, but the same deadly drink is passed over the bar in both places. The barkeeper may be a ruffian steeped to the lips in brutal selfishness or he may be a dandy apng the manners of a gentleman, but he is still the dispenser of that which is the deadly enemy of man. Every saloon is a devil's light-house, lighting humanity on the road to hell.

The fact that government legalizes this traffic shall not shield it from one word of condemnation. There was a time when this government legalized the sale of human flesh and blood, but the government did not thereby make that traffic the less sinful, in the sight of God and all good men. That stain has been wiped from the stars and stripes. Believe it, the hour will come when the still bloodier stains of drink shall be blotted from out the starry banner and proudly shall it wave over a sober and righteous people. Our eyes may not see that happy day, our ears may not hear the glad shout that will from all corners of the earth rise up to heaven in honor of the victory. But ours is the glorious toil of battle. The duty of the hour is plain. These saloons must be made hideous in the sight of men. The church must proclaim the truth that he who lives from the sale of strong drink as well as he who becomes rich thereby, lives and accumulates wealth at the expense of ruined bodies and souls. God and humanity demand this duty from the Christian pulpit. And oh ye "powers that be," who sit in high places and fulminate city ordinances for the suppression of the curling wreaths of smoke that arise from a few opium dens, can ye not see the black clouds of incense that every hour are rising up from hellish saloons? Show us one pale face—one trembling hand—one palsied brain—one blighted life from the effect of opium, and we will show you a hundred, ay, a thousand, from the effect of drink. These saloons are cancers on the body politic. They are sapping the wealth, the health, the virtue and happiness of society, and there is no salvation for man until they are cut out from the social system. Talk of respectable saloons! As well tell us of honest rascality, virtuous vice or respectable sin. In every well constituted community there should be a moral sentiment of the strongest condemnation for every man who engages in the liquor traffic. Let there be written upon the brow of every such citizen in characters plain to the moral vision of all men, "Trader in misery, crime and death." Then, and not till then, will our law-makers make it a crime to keep open the saloon.

THE RESCUE

Capt. A. D. Wood formerly editor of the Rescue is again at the helm. In his salaam "the editor says:"

"It shall be its aim to deserve and secure a cordial welcome to the family circle, on the ground of its worth as an advocate of truth and purity and honesty and as an interesting, instructive, useful household journal, not limited to the discussion of only one subject, but free to give an intelligent and impartial utterance upon any question of the hour, which concerns the moral or material welfare of its readers."

It has always been a mystery to us why the temperance people do not better support their organ. It is stalwart and fanatical enough to satisfy the most fastidious. The tens of thousands of members of the various temperance organizations ought to be ashamed of themselves to neglect their organ. Look at the success of the Gazette. We have published it for ten years, during all that time we have never had a solicitor to solicit subscriptions or advertisement. Yet its patronage increases from year to year. In resuming your position again at the helm, Captain, may you have a long and prosperous voyage.—Wine Dealers Gazette.

Glad to hear from an old friend and having failed in former years in a persistent effort to make him a convert, will now energetically renew the attempt. Now is a good time while Moody and Sankey are here, to think about coming over.

"Bad cess to it!" exclaimed Mike O'Flaherty, upon learning that Garfield was elected, "Shure, an, now we'll be ruined by Chinese cheap labor." When asked where he worked, Mike replied, "I haven't worked a stroke for five years, but me old woman takes in washin', and Garfield wants the haythen Chinese to take the bread out of our mouths."—Morristown Herald.

Rallying cry of the old parties: "The Chinaman for the work, the white laborer for the beer shop."

It is of a high order of literary merit, and is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. GRAND LECTURERS' APPOINTMENTS.—Bro. William Crowhurst, Grand Lecturer, will lecture under the auspices of our order at the following places and dates: Pacheco, 10th instant; Clayton, 11 and 12; Antioch, 13; Judsonville, 14; Brentwood, 15; Byron, 16; Oakdale, with District Lodge. 17, 18 and 19; Modesto, 20, Salida, 21; Point of Timber, 22d, Eden Plains, 23d. Lodges are requested to make full arrangements for these lectures in their own communities as also in neighboring towns where there are no Lodges. A hall or church should be procured, singing provided and thorough announcement made.

OUR BOYS IN BLUE.—Henry Wilson (Military) Lodge, No. 1, located at Fort Grant, Arizona Territory, is composed of 27 members. The Lodge Deputy, Bro. John O'Brien, sends up a collection of thirteen dollars as the collection made by him for the benefit of W. C. T. U, and N. T. S. publication funds, This is a per capita of nearly 50 cents, and takes the palm so far as the largest proportionate contribution. We are constrained to give the names of those contributing to this collection, as a sort of roll of honor. The list is as follows: Albert Bertram, H E. Becker, M. Kelley, J. Willson, W. S. Davis, Elizabeth Davis, John O'Brien, H. Gerken, C. Burket, each of whom contributed one dollar; T. J. Stewart, I Kalmus, E. Rogers, Robert H. Crawford, each of whom contributed half a dollar; T. Ginty, W. Vanderwater, O. Sanftleben, C. E. Orme, W. Frear, J. Sullivan. R. Griffith and John Boyce each of whom contributed twenty-five cents. In addition to the foregoing a donation of $5 is sent to the Orphans' Home Fund.

WHO IS IT.—We have so often requested correspondents to give the name and number and address of their Lodge with every communication they write, that the subject may be considered to have lost freshness and originality, and in fact be come stale. However, we have an order this week without date, signature, or anything else to indicate where it came from. It is headed "order for Lodge supplies," then follows: 1 doz W. S. reports, 1 book each of propositions, W. T. receipts and warrants, and "supplies for Degree Temples" 1 doz. ode cards, ritual, set of officers' cards and roll book. We cannot fill the order because we know not where to send it to. If the party sending the order will now send name and address, also name and number of the Lodge, the order will probably be filled and forwarded, otherwise in due course we presume the G. W. S. will be charged with dereliction of duty! If correspondents could but realize and would only remember that their own communication is but one of hundreds received in the G. W. S. office and that quoting the name, number and location of their lodges invariably would greatly facilitate the business of the G. W. S. office. we believe they would do so.

ORPHANS' HOME RECEIPTS.—Dr. I. S. Halsey, G. W. T and Treasurer of the Boards of Trustees and Lady Managers of the Good Templars' Home for Orphans, reports the cash received by him during the month of November last as follows: Support: R. O. Wagner, $45; A. Melvin, $24: W. Prossier, $20; R. W. Briggs, $10; Mrs. Ray, 10 50: Mrs. S. E. Miller, $8; S. H. Riley, $12; Mrs. Isabella Eden, $10; J. H. Neely, $24; Sol Smith, $18; Solano County, $27; Sutter Lodge, I. O. G. T., $25. Total for support, 233 30. Donation from Mrs. Thomas, $6 24. Miscellaneous: sale of wheat, (151,079@$1 55) $2,341 72; Vallejo Board of Education, $70; sale of Home Journal type, $25; Rebate of insurance on wheat, $10; railroad fares returned, Lucie Culliva, $4 95; Lizzie Wall, $4 50. Total receipts for the month, $2,695 92.

THE NEW CONSTITUTIONS.—The new (1881) edition of the Constitutions, By-Laws, rules of order, etc. for Grand, Subordinate and District Lodges together with the digest of decisions, are now ready for distribution, and over one thousand copies have already been distributed on advance orders filed. The new books make a closely printed pamphlet of 84 pages and contain all amendments to the constitutions of the Grand, District, and Subordinate Lodges to date, together with the Digest of decisions, revised so as to include all decisions etc., made at the last session of the Grand Lodge. The Digest of decisions alone comprises seven pages more of decisions than did the last issue of the constitution. The book contains a blank form for a personal certificate of membership, directions for making regalia, the Good Templars platform, a price list of all supplies etc., etc., making the most complete edition of that work ever published. The paper used is tinted book, and a handsome title page embellishes the whole work. The price remains as usual $1 75 per dozen and $12 per hundred, where one hundred or more copies are ordered at one time.

CALAVERAS.—Bro. W. W. Hughes of Angels Camp writes, "our Lodge is in good condition and gaining strength, numbers and influence. Other Lodges in the county are also doing well. Murphys Lodge will give an open meeting on the 18th, and a grand time is expected. The work moves on and the principles of the order are finding a warm place in the hearts of the people in these mountain towns.

AS OTHERS SEE US.—Says the National Temperance Advocate of N. Y. City: The Grand Lodge of Good Templars of California is fairly entitled to be called the "Banner Grand Lodge" of the world. The Report of Proceedings of the Grand Lodge, held October 5, one hundred and sixty-eight pages, is before us, making one of the most complete pamphlets which come to our office. The reports of officers and the general appearance of the pamphlet are such as to command respect of all classes and assure attention to its contents. The Grand Worthy Secretary, Geo. B. Katzenstein, is a model secretary, and his able and business-like reports are models worthy of imitation. In addition to items given in The Advocate last month we give the following resolution, which was adopted:

Resolved, That a standing committee of five be appointed to be called the Committee on Statistics." The duty of said committee shall be to gather all the information possible in relation to the liquor traffic in our State that will tend to show its effects on society, morally, socially, politically and financially. Said Committee shall specially collect such facts as show the revenue the State derives from the sale, manufacture and production of the raw materials from which alcoholic drinks are made; and also the expenses it imposes on the State in the support of pauperism and the loss of productive industry; the support and prosecution of criminals, and the damage done by these criminals to society, and such other facts as show the tendency and effects of the liquor traffic on the various interests of the State, and the amount and results of drunkenness. Said committee may so divide among themselves the topics they are to investigate that they may make either an individual or collective report. They shall receive no compensation for their services, but the necessary expenses incurred by them to an amount not exceeding $100 shall be paid by the Grand Lodge."

A committee on "Wine-Growing," appointed one year ago, reports that the estimate of wine produced for the last four years has been from 6,000,000 to 10,000,000 gallons annually. The present estimate is 12,000,000. There are 75,000 acres planted in vines in the State, 4,000 persons grow ing grapes, and 6,000 men employed in manufacturing wine; capital invested, $30,000,000. It is estimated that there are more than 20,000,000 acres of land in California suitable for wine-growing.

The Grand Lodge decided to build a new school building in connection with the Orphans' Home, and a large amount of money was pledged for the object. A plan for a Mutual Aid Association was also adopted which does not embrace "fat offices" for anybody.

Captain A. D. Wood was appointed editor of the Weekly Rescue, and it is expected the paper will be able, radical, breezy, and fairly bristling all over the coming year.

IS ALCOHOL A POISON?

It may seem strange to some to hear a question asked about which to them there is no doubt. Were there no others, I might not ask it; but nearly half our people act as though they knew that alcohol was not only not poisonous, but a healthy beverage. It is for such that I pen these few lines. Let us look to different authorities:—

A substance, which brought into contact with the skin, mucous surfaces, nerves, blood cells, or other organs of man, alters their normal condition by virtue of some special inherent quality.—Dr. F. R. Lees, F. S. A., England.

Toxicologists generally class poisons under three heads:—1. Irritant or acrid poisons which inflame the tissues. 2. Narcotics, or sedatives, which lessen the action of the nerves, and if taken in sufficient quanties destroy action and feeling. 3. Narcotico-Acrids, which possess the double effect of the two first classes. In the first class we find as examples the Spanish-fly and sulphuric acid. In the second, opium, prussic acid and chloroform, and in the third, tobacco, deadly night-shade, strychnine and alcohol.

Any one of the substances of this third class both inflames the tissues and lessens the action of the nerves. Please remember that all who specially treat of poisons agree about these general characteristics of the above named substances.

We have all observed how deadened are the nerves of the drunken man. And should we doubt the power of alcohol to inflame, we can soon satisfy ourselves by taking a mouthful and holding it for a little time, if the burning sensation will allow. Saturate a cloth with it and place it upon your arm with an oilcloth over it, so that it cannot escape by evaporation, and it will produce a blister.

We have each observed enough to convince us that scientific research asserts the truth when it proclaims that alcohol is destructive of health and even life itself. This proves it to be a poison. Experiments tried upon dogs and rabbits show that two and a half ounces of alcohol injected into the stomach of a medium-sized dog will kill with about the same symptoms produced by prussic acid.

You may ask why this anxiety to establish the fact that alcohol is a poison? Let me answer. You admit it to be a poison, and you must condemn its use as a beverage. Its tendency is to injure, and it improves its opportunity at every dram. Its nature is to inflame, on touching the tissues, and it is faithful to its own character. The injury may be little or great, depending upon the quantity taken, and something upon the vital forces of the individual taking it, but injury nevertheless it is, if it be a poison which is taken. Nature remains true to her own laws and by them there is no variableness or shadow of turning. Poisons may be useful as medicines, but never as food or drink. The very nature of a poison is to destroy, not to repair or build up. Food repairs the waste and furnishes material for enlarging and strengthening, but poisons from their own natures are the opposite to these. You may as well expect fire from ice or ice from fire as to expect any other opposites to agree and produce the same effects. Food is the carpenter who builds and repairs; poison the demolisher who is idle, except when engaged in destroying. When you require an injury done to the system, to avoid a greater evil, you are justified in inflicting it, but then it comes as a remedy for disease, not as nutriment. A blister may be beneficial, though it injures the system, for it may save a greater trouble, but you will hardly claim that it is advisable for the healthy to be constantly applying the blister. Just as reasonable as to claim that any other injury is beneficial to a healthy person. Reason must either strike alcohol from the list of poisons, or condemn its use as a beverage.

SAN FRANCISCO,, December 1st, 1880.

R. THOMPSON, G. W. C. T., I. O. G. T., Cal.—DEAR SIR AND BROTHER:—Having been elected by the last Grand Lodge to the office of General Superintendent of Juvenile Work, and appreciating the importance of this department, I deem it my duty to resign the office, as the employment of my time in the field as Grand Lecturer precludes that attention necessary to upbuild and advance the juvenile interests, which are of great and lasting importance to the Good Templar Order and the cause of temperance. I remain in F. H. and C.,

LEARNING TO DRINK.—A very zealous and efficient Sunday school teacher, who had gathered up a class of boys previously neglected, was one morning, after the regular lesson, talking to them about the great evils of intemperance. Suddenly she said, "Boys, I wonder how people learn to drink?" A bright little fellow, son of a physician, said, "I know; by tasting." Do not forget this. "Touch not, taste not, handle not," and you will never become a drunkard.

CHINESE LABOR.—Rally round the grogshop and beer dive, John; they are the only friends you have. Put out the grogshop and "Johny must go." Keep up the grogshop and Johny must stay.

WHO IS THE RUMSELLER?

ANSWERED NEGATIVELY.

[By Prof. Foster.]

1. He is not a maker of anything useful.

The Carpenter takes the lumber, handles his tools and toils all day. At the end he gives to the community the chair, the table, the sofa, the chest of drawers or other article he has made. This article is from raw material of comparatively high value from its usefulness and service to people.

The Shoemaker takes the leather, cuts it into patterns, sews it together, and labors all day at his work. At night he gives the community a pair of shoes that can be worn, that contributes to comfort and helps the wearer to produce something in return. The Blacksmith makes the implement of use from iron—the tailor the clothes we wear—the cotton manufacturer the fabrics we use—the iron founder the stoves and furnaces so indispensible to us.

All these and their follow workers are honest toilers whose labor contributes to the comfort, necessities and progress of the community.

The Rumseller makes nothing useful. He stands lazily behind his bar, trusting to the appetite he forms, the attractions he spreads, to find customers, and to them he passes Alcoholic liquors which stupefy the senses, weaken the will, whet the passions, enervate the mind, disease the body and destroy the soul.

2. He is not a supplier of anything necessary to health, happiness or purity.

The Grocery and Provision man supplies people with tea, coffee, eggs, butter, ham, fruits, sugar, fish, flour, all of which contribute to the sustenance of our bodies, the happiness of our homes, and enable us to grow strong, to work and earn and enjoy.

The Dry Goods man supplies us with cotton, silks, wollens, carpets, threads, blankets, and innumerable other articles, which clothe us, keep us warm, beautify our person and our home, and so conduce to the welfare of the people.

The Book-seller supplies us with news, thoughts, histories, philosophy, and such like food so necessary to our mental growth. And so on all through the chapter.

But the Rumseller stands lazily behind his bar, trusting to the appetite forms and the attractions he spreads, he to find customers, and to them he passes Alcoholic liquors, which warm no one, feed no one, clothe no one, beautify no one, add no good thought, no good impulse, but which rob many a man and many a home of all happiness, all prosperity, all hope.

3. He is not a patron and encourager of labor.

The cotton manufacturer calls for workers. Set him down in a community and lo! the idle are employed and the busy hum of industry succeeds to the lazy stillness of indolence, and men are employed, wages are paid, homes are full of plenty, business prospers.

Set the sewing machine manufacture down in your city, 400 men are called for, early and late they are busy, the forge glows, the molten iron runs inio its mold, the countless machinists polish, drill, put together and beautify, and all the time wages are paid, families are supported, wants are supplied, prosperity is afoot and happiness sings her endless song.

But the Rumseller stands lazily behind his bar, trusting to the appetite he forms and the attractions he spreads, to find customers, and passes to them Alcoholic liquors, to steal the mechanic from his work, the laborer from the mill, the workman from his place in the foundry or factory, and in addition take his wages for nothing, aye, worse than nothing. If he gave him nothing, the laborer would only be out of his money. He gives him drink, and the laborer is out of both money and time; lies drunk in the rumseller's or the police cells, and the place in the factory is vacant, the daily wages for the home is lost.

4. He supplies no mental food and develops no intellectual faculty.

The teacher studies at his home, devises ways and methods for instruction, is alert to invent and constant to enforce, and for six hours per day works with the young brains and hearts of the children, and all to present information, to inculcate habits of thought and work, to develop mental powers, and make intelligent, competent and cultured citizens. He holds up the bright ideal of excellence, he implants the noble and quick ambition, he opens the closed portals of knowledge and brings the hidden and wondrous things of nature before the alluring eye of man. He guides the unskilled hand and directs the unskilled eye until nature's best moods are caught and transferred to canvas, a perennial delight to all beholders. He imparts precision to the touch and taste to the execution until sweet strains of music are drawn from the silent pipe of the organ and struck from the ivory key of the piano.

But the Rumseller stands lazily behind his bar trusting to the appetite he forms and the attractions he spreads, to find customers, and to them he passes Alcoholic liquors, which deaden the quick action of the brain, paralyze the skilful touch, poison intellectual ambition, sensualize the bright ideal, and degrade the god-like mind.

5. He adds no moral stimulus and develops no spiritual powers.

The preacher communes with God, is taught of his wisdom, studies the chart of life, spends his time in meditation and thought, and all to feed and stimulate and help us develop our spiritual natures, He extols the tenderness of love, the strength of moral rectitude, the grandness of patience, the rewards of virtue and the abiding riches of character. He takes men by the hand and leads them from sorrow, affliction and sin and earthly evils, up to the joys, the rewards, the purity and heavenly blessings of the better life. He ministers to all ills, advises in all trials, helps in all difficulties, and spends his life in the service of his fellow-men.

But the Rumseller stands lazily behind his bar, trusts to the appetite he forms and the attractions he spreads, to find customers, and to them he passes Alcoholic liquors, which rob the soul of its purity, quench all aspirations after God, be cloud the spiritual sense, sap the very foundation of rectitude, destroy character, fill the mind with sensuality, and chain the better nature to vice which renders hope impossible and Heaven unattainable.

We find, then, that the Rumseller

(a) supplies nothing useful.

(b) supplies nothing neccessary to health, happiness or prosperity.

(c) is not a patron or encourager of labor.

(d) supplies no food or stimulus for mental improvement.

Let him step down then from the company of honest toilers. He has no place among manufactures, traders, shopkeepers, mechanics, teacher or preachers. All of them would do better work if he were not; each of them meets him as an obstacle to their full success.

(What he is and where he ought to be classed, Leaflet No. 4 will tell.)

SOME RESULTS OF THE DRINK TRAFFIC.

It is estimated that 120,000 people in Britain, and from 60,000 to 100,000 in the United States are annually slain by the use of alcoholic liquors.

The civilized commercial nations of Europe and America spend every year three billions of dollars in drink, to bankrupt and pauperize themselves and each other, and to destroy each other's industries and commerce.

Very nearly all the crime and vice and pauperism in civilized countries, is due to the drink traffic, and could be exterminated by a prohibitory liquor law well enforced.

The same is true of the greater portion of the taxes.

The Liquor trade is a sufficient reason for the frequent commercial revulsions and hard times, which the country experiences. There exists no other agency which could prevent constant general prosperity in the United States.

It has been unmistakably proved that all alcoholic liquors as beverages or medicines, are not only utterly useless and valueless, but that they are injurious and destructive to morals, health and life and fulfil no toher purpose.

The following persons belong to the non-producing classes of the country, in consequence of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors.:

Manufacturers of intoxicating liquors	40,000
Retail liquor dealers, including clerks	510,000
Drunkards	600,000
Paupers	300,000
Criminals	200,000
Insane and Idiots	20,000
Police	30,000
Total	1,700,000

CALIFORNIA W. C. T. U.

One very important branch of our labor, as a society, is the instruction of the young in temperance principles. This is a work in which the Good Templar Lodges and their members are, or ought to be deeply interested. We believe that a vast amount of information can be acquired by the pupils of the public schools, if some inducement is held out to them.

The subject to their minds is comparatively a new one; one which very few teachers, and very few parents have presented in its true light. In order then to stimulate them to exertion, we have developed this plan, which we hope will be adopted by every lodge, and Union throughout the State. Let every society offer a prize for the best two essays on temperance, which shall be written by the pupils of the nearest public school, of such ages as the lodge shall direct, their originality to be attested by the teacher.

They can then be read "for the good of the order," and a committee be appointed to carefully examine the work of the young aspirants.

My experience as a teacher has taught me, that exercises out of the beaten track, are productive of great good, in awakening new trains of thought, With the added stimulus of a moneyed prize, every effort will be made by teachers and pupils. to gain the coveted reward. Temperance papers will be searched for news, temperance pledges will be learned, temperance sonnets will be quoted, and teachers, directors and superintendents will each be attacked for temperance items.

In this work children and parents will be interested, the whole community will discuss the subject, and the lodges themselves will assume a new value in the eyes of the people.

I sincerely hope that lodge members who read this article will not fail to present this matter at their next meeting.

The blacksmith of old, who advised us to "strike while the iron was hot," not only understood his own business, but the folly of leaving for to-morrow, the work of to-day. Hoping that all Christian temperance workers, will interest themselves in this matter, I subscribe myself, Yours, in F. H. & C.,

CALIFORNIA STATE WOMAN'S SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.

The Association meets at half-past 2 P. M., every Saturday, in Red Men's Hall, 318 Post Street, opposite Union Square. WOMANS SOCIAL SCIENCE.

EDITOR RESCUE: In your last issue you gave the place of meeting only of the Social Science Association which is now at 32 O'Farrell street, will you state the object in your next? The association is an educational and industrial union, which reaches forth the right hand of fellowship to every deserving woman. It does not boast of exclusiveness and conservatism, both children of wealth and feudalism, but it keeps an ever open door and generous heart at 304 Stockton street, our own dear home, which is warm and bright with God's non-excluisve sunshine, where the quality of the brains and heart is of more value than the quality of the fiber of the coat and hat. We are going to open up out-door industries in this state to women, commencing with silk culture. I have already several hundred acres of land given me in different parts of the state for the purpose of cultivation, Every Thursday from 12 M. to 2 P. M., we give a hygienic lunch in our commodious dining room. Tuesday at two o'clock there is a silk-culture school in the parlors and in the evening a French conversazione. During the week there will be sections and classes in German, Spanish, music, Literary and physical culture, elocution and decorative art. Beside the practical, there are to be merry gatherings for social conversation and the graceful interchange of pleasurable thought, things which are too often pushed aside in the mad rush for place and power. These re-unions are on the second Thursday evening of each month, from 8 to 11 o'clock. Literary people and artists are especially welcome. We aim to have the receptions as much like the French salon as possible. The last Friday evening in each month we give a musical and literary entertainment. The first (given last week) was a decided success. We know no failure, for the spirit is in our work. MRS. J. W. STOW.

HIT SOMETHING.

In this temperance work we are quite too apt to make random shots. For example in the use of tracts, we get a lot, perhaps a miscellaneous package and we think they must be good for they are "tracts" so we scatter them miscellaneously. When the women's leaflets were first published a good natured fellow hearing they were good sent for some packages, and then he went around distributing leaflets, and thus he reported: "I gave one to everybody I met until they were all gone. I gave one to Dennis' barkeeper, and you ought to have seen how astonished he looked;" "which one did you give him?" inquired his listener. He had not thought of that. "Was it on "Juvenile Instruction," or "Courage my Sister," or on "Tract Circulation?" He could not tell but he began to feel as if the tract might have had some ideas that would not hit anything in the person to whom he had given it.

It is not an easy matter to fit the meaning of a tract to every man you meet, and if you could do so, it might not be possible to give it to him without giving offence, but an intelligent temperance worker can soon find out the prevalent evil in his commuuity, set himself to find out the tract that is best suited to hit evil, something that we would like to have everybody read. Temperance people should read it, so that they can know what you are trying to do and help you, and especially help on the talk. Everybody should read it, because these temperance questions concern everybody and in the case of a tract like this, which you are distributing throughout this entire community, you can get indifferent people to use it, and so enlist them as you could not by any direct appeals. Distributing in audiences is a good plan, especially if you can call the attention of the audience to it, and thus induce them to read it, perhaps by exciting their curiosity. A tract is worth nothing if not read.

I saw a brewer's paper the other day, which contained a letter from V——a in California saying that since the people there have changed from whisky drinking to beer drinking they do not have so many murders as they did before, seldom any resulting from beer drinking. If I lived in V——a or any similar place, I should take especial pleasure in showing up the mischief done by beer. I would put number 13 of the Beer Series, "Crime caused by Beer" into the hands of everybody and set them to talking about the matter. I would hit beer just there and I would hit hard.

By the time that was fairly out and discussed, I would have another ready to suit, and I would keep following up that subject until the people understood beer.

In this way you can make tracts tell. Whatever the tipple you can by such methods bring great power to bear against it. You can also help by lectures and debates, etc., etc. When you get people to understand thoroughly the nature and effects of one kind of alcoholic drink, it will be an easy matter to convince them, as to the others. But in order to any such work as this, specimens are necessary. A set of the Beer Series of Handbill (one of each number,) and tracts are 6 cents, a set of cider or wine tracts are 5 cents; a set of Union leaflets 18 cents. These will do nicely to begin with, samples by which you can select ammunition suited to the kind of game you wish to bring down. Be at least as wise as the hunter of the forest, suit your ammunition to your game and be sure you hit something. In my temperance work in the East I have made a speciality of circulating these specimens in sets, and I shall be glad to do the same (at the above prices) for any of the readers of the Rescue, if they send to me at my new address, 54 Bible House, New York.

JULIA COLMAN.

SCOTTISH WINE, SPIRIT, AND BEER TRADE DEFENCE ASSOCIATION.

A meeting of the General Executive Council of the Scottish Wine, Spirit, and Beer Trade Defence Association was held in Glasgow. A discussion took place as to the effect of the passage of the Local Option resolntion in the last session of Parliament and the bills likely to be introduced into Parliament next session affecting the trade. Various probable measures were discussed, but the general feeling seemed to be that, keeping in view the fact that since the passing of the Cameron Act, while the population was still increasing, licenses were as a rule being diminished, there was no necessity for further restrictive measures against renewal and granting of licenses as at present; and, on the other hand, to throw the licensing system open to all applicants, and thereby very materially increase the present number of licensed houses, would be highly prejudicial to the public interest and unjust to the trade. The proposal to have a special Licensing Board elected for the purpose of granting or refusing licenses was deemed uncalled for and highly objectionable. The elections would produce a new element of discord and confusion in every district, and would be the cause of much additional expense to the ratepayers, and the new Boards, when elected. would in all probability be composed of men with extreme views as to their special duties, and utterly unqualified to administer the laws specially affecting the trade with any approach to judicial regularity and impartiality.

GOOD TEMPLAR'S PLATFORM.

1. Total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage.
2. No license in any form, under any circumstances, for the sale of liquors to be used as a beverage.
3. The absolute prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors for such purposes; prohibition by the will of the people, exercised in due form of law, with the penalties deserved by a crime of such enormity.
4. The creation of a healthy public opinion upon the subject by the active dissemination of truth in all the modes known to enlightened philanthropy.
5. The election of good, honest men, to administer the law.
6. Persistence in efforts to save individuals and communities from so dreadful a scourge, against all forms of opposition and difficulties, until our success is complete and universal.

OUR PRINCIPLES. We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory Law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance Men and good citizens of the country y desire to accomplish it.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT, in 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW
OF MAINE.

Dr. Willard Parker says: "It has been demonstrated that the use of alcohol when employed moderately, as many young men often use it, as they think with impunity, makes the average of life thirty-five and a half, while that of non-users reaches an average of sixty-four and one-sixth years, a difference of about twenty-nine years to each individual; a thousand individuals, 29,000."

LOCAL OPTION.

Our good radical brother Hastings of Wisconsin is exercised over the fact that the Good Templars of this State are talking of local option, while professing the most emphatic prohibition sentiments. It would be the last stage of folly to accept local option if we could as well secure entire prohibition for the State. It is admitted that it is about as easy to convert a reasonable man to the doctrine of total as to that of local prohibition; but there are a good many that can never be converted to either. We know perfectly well that an attempt to enact a prohibitory law for the State now, would result in the most contemptible failure; but we don't aim for anything short of that in the end. Our chances are good for securing the enactment of a local option law which will be completely prohibitory where adopted, and there are perhaps two hundred localities in this State that would vote no license next summer by sweeping majorities. When that is done the example of prosperity, in those respectable townships which abolish their pauper factories, will induce others to follow their lead, and in time we hope at last to conquer the stronghold of Satan in San Francisco.

On the other hand suppose we accept nothing but total abolition, it appears to us here that it will be a very hard case to permit the continuance of the ravages of the traffic all over the rest of the State simply because we must insist on having all or nothing and keep the whole country in misery till San Francisco is ready to give up her drunkenness.

Not radical enough; well, Bro. H., if you have anything more radical than the Rescue hopes to be, please set it out and let us have a look at it; but we are going to try and have a third and a half and three-fourths of this State under a radically prohibitory local option law pretty soon, and the rest of the State and the United States as soon as we can induce them to follow.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS.

Mr. Richard Grant White, in the North American Review, opens a crusade against the public schools. He says they are worse than a failure and none of our institutions are so "unworthy of confidence and pride." Their "tendency threatens to be disastrous and is already deplorable." Of course when the accuser assumes the positions of witness, judge and jury, it is very easy to prove anything: and Mr. White introduces some statistics of crime in some of the Southern States, which he compares with those of some New England States, where the public school has had the fullest and fairest trial, and because according to his showing there is a larger percentage of crime, suicide and insanity in the latter, it must be attributable to the public schools.

Well, it is not a very serious calamity that, in a population of fifty millions, one more lunatic should break out, but it would be a pity if his folly should be catching. A sane man bringing such a charge against an institution, that is the pride and glory of the country, would naturally proceed to show the manner in which the public school system operates to produce crime, but he makes the mere coincidence of crime the consequence or result of an institution which, in no possible way, can have any tendency to promote or originate crime.

In Vineland, N. J., where the public school has had a fair and impartial trial, there has been all but an utter absence of either serious or trivial crime since its foundation in 1861, and for more than ten years it has had a population of ten to twelve thousand, not of a picked class of people, but from all parts of this country and from various European States.

There are counties and townships in many other States where the public school has had its very fullest development, and where no grogshop has been permitted for ten to twelve years and the prisons in all such places are almost entirely empty; when occupied at all, the culprit is generally an importation from some other State or from a grogshop county. The State of Maine has little use for prisons comparatively, since the Maine law has been made effective in 1872; and probably no use at all for them for the native people of the State.

Mr. White concludes that public farms and public workshops, to train citizens "to get their living honestly and respectably," would be a better system of education than that of the public schools. Then if he should live to see this proposed experiment tried for 20 or 30 years he could as reasonably attribute a large increase of crime, etc., if such were the result, to the previous influence of the public schools of to-day.

It would be singular in an age, in which so many glaring wrongs and injustices have a recognized existence and unquestioned tolerance, if we should have a school system that very closely approaches perfection: but to attribute the prevalent crime to a system which has no relationship whatever to crime, indicates at least a temporary neglect or disuse of those reasoning faculties which, it may be supposed, have been pretty fairly distributed among men, at least to the extent of enabling them to distinguish a difference between the shelter of a roof and the open sky when it rains.

Other fanatics have charged the prevalence of crime, with equal justice and candor to the Christian religion, to the teachings of the bible, to republicanism, to the marriage relation, to the disuse of brutal savage punishments inflicted by parents upon children and to a variety of subjects equally impossible to have any connection with crime. It is singular indeed that there should be any hesitation for a moment anywhere, on the subject of the cause of crime and hoodlemism. It were quite as reasonable to argue as to the source of the noonday light, whether it comes from the sun or from the bottom of the sea.

There can be no doubt that vicious children from vicious homes attend the public schools and exert a demoralizing influence upon the better children there, and thus mischief is done; but it is by no means due to the public schools; as well charge the crime of drunkenness to the temperance societies who cannot succeed in reforming every body; as well charge all sin to the churches because they dont convert every body.

Other conditions remaining the same, and the public school abolished, let us consider how the private school would improve upon the present system. There is now no inducement offered to conceal or condone the villainies of the wicked pupils; in the private school it would become, under a sharp competition, the interest of the proprietors and teachers, to hold on to all the pupils they could get, and it would seem, that the dangers of evil associations would in nc wise be diminished, except in some few choice exceptional and expensive schools. The past history of private schools and colleges is by no means a record of snowy innocence, nor in any way can they be presented as a contrast to the public school in virtuous results.

It is claimed by good authority that ignorance furnishes 8 or 10 times the proportion of pauperism that education does, and we all know that the great body of criminals are of those who have not attended the public schools. And when we all know that there are in the towns and cities of California and in most of the other States, from 10 to 30 grogshops for every one public school, and that they are open night and day and all the days of the week, and every one of them a school of vice and crime and nastiness for young and old, the journalist who charges the public school system as being the generator of the prevalent crime, either outranks the oyster in mental obtuseness or must be the bond slave of a debasing appetite for strong drink, which has altogether corrupted his moral nature.

CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

The Morey letter emanating from one ring of political thieves and the equally infamous lie concerning Neal Dow, which was published by the other, together with the seething mess of nauseous falsehood and wretched slander which filled the political papers for some months previous to the election, are sturdy arguments for Civil Service Reform. Worse and worse have become the resorts to savage criminality on one side to get the offices, and on the other to hold them. If a contest for 100,000 offices is going to be made every four years and the spoils are to go to the conquerors, it must surely and necessarily lead ultimately to the last extremity of fraud and trickery, ending finally in force and anarchy. We have arrived already to a condition very nearly approaching that of the hindoo population of India, where the man who can afford to pay thirty-one perjured witnesses, invariably gains his case against an adversary whose purse gives out at the thirtieth.

The political brigand makes the argument that if there is no prize of spoils, active workers will not exert themselves to elect a candidate. Surely if the men who will not assist the election of a worthy candidate unless actuated by a bribe of prospective office or spoils, should stay at home on election days, or during the campaign, it would give us the best promise we have ever had of the nomination and election of good men to office.

Their threat of non-interference at elections, if the desired reform is inaugurated, suggests the parallel of a gang of burglars, threatening that if a new and effective system of safes and iron fastenings should be adopted, they would abandon their profession, go home, quit stealing and be honest.

No attempt has ever been made to deny or disprove the saying of a distinguished public man, that he who makes two ears of corn grow where only one grew before, is a benefactor to the human race. If that is true, he is an equal if not a more eminent benefactor, who arrests the destruction of a useful ear of corn already grown and prevents its prostitution into a poisonous pauperizing agency for the destruction of human life and industry. And what is the appropriate designation of the man who makes only one ear of corn grow where two ought to and destroys and prostitutes one of every two that does grow?

MUTUAL AID.

EDITOR RESCUE:—I have been waiting to see if any member of the order had any remarks to offer in relation to the Mutual Aid Association. None appearing, I will introduce a few upon that subject:

It is desired that it be understood that no fault is being found with the plan as far as it goes; it appears to be well arranged, but not quite universal enough to suit my ideas. All right up to sixty years of age. Perhaps this is as far as any other Aid Society insures. Our Order is different from any other in existence.

In other orders a member pays his, or her fees and dues, and there business ends Frequently for years not a dime being required but the term dues.

In our order it is different; we have many members who are over the requisite age for insurance. The majority of these members have advocated the cause of temperance for twenty, thirty, or probably more years; during this period they have been called upon to assist the cause in various financial ways, and now they have become too old to share the advantages which a recruit will be entitled to.

Recruits to our Lodges—young people and people inexperienced in temperance work are entitled to, and can have all the present advantages of the order, while the old servants can take a back seat.

Now, sir, I think this condition could have been averted, simply by establishing a division for all members over sixty years of age; members of this division to pay two dollars each upon the decease of a member of this division, and giving the surviving relative the amount that would accrue from assessments paid by members of this division.

It appears to me that some arrangement of this kind would have looked better and worked more satisfactorily than the present will do, and could not by any possibility have been any detriment to the other divisions or the Grand Lodge.

Trusting that you will excuse the length of these remarks, and receive them in our adopted principles. Fraternally, J. T. AMOS, FLORIN, Cal.

The conditions of the Mutual Aid System had to be constructed upon purely business principles; to give it a first place among benefit associations as a business matter. The limit of age was put at 56, but the Executive Committee made that one change in the system proposed, whether wisely or not remains to be seen. Bro. Amos should remember that, had the system been framed to take in the old warhorses of temperance without regard to age, it would have invited also every broken-down, aged inebriate who would have been sobered up and thrust willingly or not by his friends into the Society to its annoyance and prejudice.

The system as adopted was not expected to be entirely complete, but to be enlarged with more divisions as experience should develop their necessity. The department suggested by Bro. Amos appears to be entirely commendable and unobjectionable as a separate division, and will be a most judicious amendment for adoption at next Grand Lodge, with the possible readjustment of the fifth class of the other to a limit of 56 years. The suggestion is eminently sound.—ED.

ANOTHER VICTORY.—The Canada Casket reports under this caption the result of an election in the County of Digby, Nova Scotia, on the adoption of the local option law. The vote stood 955 for adoption, 42 against. The major part of Nova Scotia has been under local option and prohibitory laws for a good many years, but this is the adoption of a new and more stringent Act. In 16 of 17 elections all but one have resulted by immense majorities in the death warrant of the infernal traffic in blood. This is the way people vote in a country where they have had an experience of the enormous advantages of extripating the pauper and murder factories. Don't the winemakers, distillers and brewers see the doom of their deadly art, or are they still blindfolded by their old boss-owner?

MEMORIAM.

GUERNEVILLE, Dec. 2, 1880.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE RESCUE: We were appointed a committee to inform you of the death and the funeral ceremonies of Olle Hitchcock, a member of Guerneville Temple, N0. 40, Juvenile Templars.

Our sister was only eleven years of age. She had been sick a long time and suffered severely. Was quiet, kind and affectionate, and a good member of the Juvenile Temple. She attended very very regularly while in good health, and seemed to take a great interest in it.

At her death the members met and draped our charter and regalia in mourning.

The procession was formed as the Good Templars do theirs. There were four pall-bearers with white scarfs; we marched to the cemetery and formed a circle round the grave.

The Chaplain read our burial service. We then went around and each one placed a green sprig upon the coffin.

At the close of the ceremonies, we returned to the hall. This is the first time death has entered our little band and we feel the visitation very keenly.

We are very sorry for the parents and relations of our departed sister. We would like to cheer them, but we know that no one can do this but our kind Heavenly Father.

THE WINE INTEREST.

France has a few vineyards from which wines are manufactured that sell for $4 to $8 a gallon on the spot. But this value is altogether a fictitious or imaginary one, manufactured out of the pampered appetites, depraved palates and brainless heads of a few wealthy bibulous gluttons in England and some other countries, who monopolize the products of those vineyards, and are silly enough to believe they are getting an article much superior to that made in Sonoma or Napa county, merely because they pay a fancy price for it. These vineyards are owned, like the famous ones of Spain and Portugal, by millionaire capitalists, and the people of the country around are poor and abject and very low down in intelligence and morality.

In a few years the intelligence will become general in civilized countries, and every one who can read will know that no wine can possibly be produced that is worth much more than ten cents a bottle; that the difference in real value between ordinary California or French wine and the celebrated fancy brands, cannot be more than a few cents per gallon. Pretty soon everybody will know, as the intelligent temperance people and the liquor sellers all know now, that the poor innocents who pay for, and drink, and dispense, and boast of the fancy brand, aristocratic fame, wondrous bouquet, etc., of these wines of rarest vintage, not one in fifty of them, no matter what price he may have paid for his wine, ever had or tasted in his life a drop of any other than the common trash which cost the cunning fabricator in Bordeaux, or London, or San Francisco, perhaps 25 cents a gallon. The difference between that and the price he paid, was the fabricator's assessment on his ignorance and folly.

At the Paris Exposition in 1867, or at the previous one, if not at both, premiums were awarded for the most skilfully fabricated wines. The London Punch derisively advised the commissioners to be consistent and also give premiums for the most ingenious skeleton keys and burglar's tools.

Like England with her opium trade, France has forced her drunkard making fabrications and perversions upon the Sandwich Islands and upon Madagascar, if not upon other weak nations, and made her wine and brandy a noxious curse to them morally and financially, as it has been to herself—a pauperizing destructive agency.

SPAIN.

If the manufacture of intoxicating drinks could ever help to make a country rich, Spain and Portugal ought to be now enormously wealthy. The demand for these products has been increasing and their prices have been continuously enhanced for fifty or a hundred years, and up to the advent of the phylloxera, there has been no drawback or difficulty, of any moment, in the way of their production.

These countries, more especially Spain, have had the grandest golden opportunities, in other directions too, ever afforded to any nation. They had the lead in the colonization and development of the new world and selected their locations in its fairest and richest territories. The gold and silver and diamond mines of the world for a long series of years emptied rivers of treasure into their coffers. Foremost in military and naval power and prowess, they almost owned the commerce of the world. But wine and brandy, the great levelers and pauperizers, true to their record from the earliest history, wasted all the gold and silver and slaves and plunder which the heavily-freighted ships of Spain transported from all the countries of the globe.

From a first-class position in wealth and power and civilization, Spain, with her soil, climate and her natural capacities and advantages unimpaired, has retrograded to a contemptible, bankrupt, servile condition, because of the ignorance, barbarism, incompetence, dissipation, worthlessness and vicious immorality, which are, ever have been, ever will and ever must be the natural, legitimate, inevitable accompaniment and sequence of the most devouring curse that has ever blighted and blasted the human race—the manufacture of the most seductive forms of alcoholic drink, which means the manufacture of paupers and criminals and imbeciles, and never could mean anything else.

OTHER COUNTRIES.

What wine has done for France and Spain, it has done equally for other countries. Portugal and the districts of Italy, Hungary, Germany, Greece, etc., that have prostituted their vineyards, tell the same old story of beggary, degraded brutal vice and barbarism. Switzerland, peopled by a race naturally hardy, honest, industrious and capable, has been especially cursed with the wine plague. In fifty years of late, the Swiss consumption of brandy and strong liquors increased to twenty times its former volume, and drunkenness has become the great destroying angel of that once liberty loving and chivalrous people.

Peru in its fertile districts is a natural vineyard. With what appeared to be an inexhaustible store of nitrate of soda and guano and a variety of minerals, all of which cost them nothing, but provided them a splendid annual revenue, the country was so demoralized with intemperance and vice and gambling, that it was most hopelessly and irreparably bankrupted aad pauperized before the recent war commenced, aud its armies have been driven every time like sheep, before the more sober Chilians.

Any intelligent truthful traveler that has visited any or all of these countries, will bear witness that when the venders of drink there proclaim their poisons for sale they invariably cry "Aguardiente," or whisky, not wine. Another thing the high priests of the wine interest in California keep very closely to themselves, to-wit: in the wine districts of Spain the wages of the day laborer are 20 cents, one-half of that paid in wine, and nowhere in Europe does wine pay much better wages, if any. That is what we want to see in this State some day, is it not?

READ.—There are two letters in this number that ought to be read with particular attention: those of Miss Julia Colman and of Miss A. R. Congdon, a voice from the Atlantic shore, and another from the Pacific, both on the most intensely important subject of circulating temperance literature, and using it to the best advantage; and both in the wisdom of their counsels, bearing testimony that the writers have given patient interested study to the subject, and have brought a large measure of good practical common sense into its discussion.

Talking about a temperance boom, about prohibition, local option, constitutional amendments, glorious time, waking up, watching and waiting and praying, about District Lodges and new lodges, about doubling the membership of your lodges and so on—is all moonshine, if we are not going to make regular siege to the people with temperance literature and education. All else is mere guerilla warfare and the results are insignificant and ephemeral. Kansas has taught us a lesson that California and other States should heed. Twenty-nine of seventy-seven counties rejected the amendment, some of them by considerable majorities; one of them by 2396; these were the counties where temperance literature and temperance lectures had done little to educate the people. And after all, the majority in the State was reduced to 6547, with four more counties to hear from.

With a vigorous and judicious system of temperance literature and education in this State, such as might just as well as not be put in operation by our lodges and unions and temperance advocates, a prohibitory sentiment could be created in this State which would enact and support a stringent prohibitory law in the next two years. But if all but the smallest fraction of our lodges and members are going to do nothing, as at present, to educate themselves or the public, never going to take or use a paper or a tract, it is utter nonsense and the cheapest and smallest nonsense to prattle about prohibition or curtailment of the liquor curse. It is about time an organization like the I. O. G. T. of California should occupy a bolder and loftier aim than that of a mosquito buzzing round an elephant.

TO ADVERTISERS.

The Rescue in its new form and dress hopes to enter upon this its sixteenth year of publication, with a much increased prosperity, and it presents the following claims to be a valuable advertising medium.

Its circulation will be published once a month; of this number 2400 copies will be distributed and it is not expected to be any less than that in the future.

It is read by the most sober and well conducted people all over the state: sobriety and morality generally indicate superior thrift and worth and good financial standing. It ought to be a valuable agency to the advertiser in introducing him to a good class of customers, valuable to the cnstomer, in directing him to an honest and reliable dealer, for no other can appear in the Rescue: and valuable to the general reader, who can get his paper for about half its present price, when it has a good advertising patronage secured. Thus it is the interest of all concerned to make "our paper" a success.

The Rescue will not for any consideration advertise anything which, it is not assured, is honest and genuine: nothing of at all questionable propriety or purity shall be admitted. It shall be the mouthpiece of no fraud or swindle.

HONEST DEALERS.

The readers of the Rescue will understand that its manager has thoroughly satisfield himself as to the merits and genuine character of everythitg found in its advertising columns, therefore when one of them comes or fends to San Francisco to buy a piano or cooking stove, a buggy or a badycarriage, clothes, shoes, books, etc., the address of the safest and truest men to deal with, will be found in the Rescue; for no others can get admission there.

Same also with regard to the professional card of a lawyer, doctor, dentist, artist or other practitioner. None of them will be admitted who are not known to be in good standing, professionally and morally.

It is the purpose to make an ad. in the Rescue mean all it says every time, and to give its readers thoro' confidence in its authority. There is an old musty, obsolete proverb some where, which indicates that it pays to tell the truth. It will be tested in this case, and the test will be continued rifiht along even if the paper should not realize $2 all-told, for advertising the next three years.

REQUEST TO MINISTERS.

Whereas, at the last session of the R. W. G. L. of our Order held in New York city in May last, a resolution was adopted, requesting every minister of the Order to preach a sermon on the third Sunday in December, 1880 (the 19 Dec.) on Bible Temperance and Total Abstinence,

We the undersigned earnestly invite all the ministers of the gospel to whom this notice in the Rescue shall be addressed, whether members of our Order or not, to comply with the request above stated, in aid of the effort to remove the mightiest obstacle that ever resisted the progress of the gospel or warred against the welfare and happiness of mankind. Respectfully,

ROBERT THOMPSON, G. W. C. T.
GEO. B. KATZENSTEIN, G. W. S

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in October 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to convey any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls. The buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various portions of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school, under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, Mrs. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

EVERY FRIDAY EVENING.

THE RESCUE:
FREE COPIES.

The Rescue is sent free every week by the Grand Lodge, to every Minister and Superior Judge of the State whose address can be obtained. Any not supplied can be, by notifying the editor.

It is also sent for the present unordered to various parties who, it is believed, may become subscribers when acquainted with the paper, or may perhaps introduce it to their friends. If they do not choose to subscribe, they incur no obligation whatever for the copies sent them: and no payment is expected or will be asked from any one to whom the paper is sent, unless it is ordered, and then it will of course be paid for in advance: the papers sent being merely an advertisement.

No one is asked to subscribe for the Rescue as a gratuitous help to some charitable movement, or as a friendly act to the publisher: but it professes to be a fair and full exchange for the money it costs; to give reliable information and discover the truth upon certain matters of the highest importance, that are treated in no other journal of the coast; and to be an interesting and instructive family visitor.

Those who subscribe for the paper with the understanding that they are to receive full value for their money—can also feel at the same time, that their patronage and assistance thus rendered, is really a help to a reform movement which, in its success, promises a greater access of wealth, peace, comfort and prosperity to the whole nation than any or all the reforms, that have been proposed in the century: until this reform is effected no other can be of any value whatever. Perfect sobriety is as necessary a condition of our national, as it is of our individual comfort and prosperity. The Rescue will continue to discuss the question "whether the drink traffic is not a gigantic all-pauperizing engine, and whether we really have any other drawback to complete individual and national prosperity, that does not come from that traffic."

Circulate it in your community and send a copy to your friends in the East. The only possible mode of getting over the permanent depression of business and the paralysis of industry in California, is to arrest the work of the 10,000 pauper factories, which are the sole cause of every trouble that afflicts the land: the only reason why this State does not enjoy the fullest sunshine of prosperity.

To this object the Rescue is devoted, and this is the only way in which the interests of all the honest classes of society can be promoted.

Wine manufacture is going to be a good business for the working man of this State: provided always that working man is a chinaman: no other need apply.

THE laborer in wine-making countries receives 20 cents a day as his wages, one-half paid in wine: and that is about the full value of the day's work of a white man who has worked a few years in that business: in plain figures it is only 10 cents.

THE DOLL'S MEDICINE.

A. A. B.

"Grandma, please lend me your glasses a little while, won't you?"

"My glasses, Charlie, how can I spare them?" asked grandmother, at the same time taking off the heavy-bowed, old-fashioned spectacles that had come down to her from a former generation, but which now fitted her own eyes so well.

"I want to make a professional call," explained Charlie.

Grandma smiled, as she tied the black silk ribbon over his soft curly hair. "I know you will be careful dear, and don't hurt your eyes looking through them."

"Thank you," replied Charlie, hastening away, while grandma bowed with the weight of threescore years, moved her chair to the other window that she might look upon the group without.

What did she see?

Little Sadie Hale holding a sick doll and looking anxiously up to Dr. Charlie. At her feet sat tender-hearted, rosy cheeked Eva West, whose plump fingers never harmed a fly and whose mild blue eyes were even now filling with tears at Sadie's evident distress about poor dollie. Then there was Nettie Lane, a tall, dark-eyed brunette, with sense of the ludicrous so keen that she was vainly endeavoring to smother a laugh, while professing the greatest sympathy.

"A very severe case of rheumatic pneumonia, very, ma'am," said Charlie shaking his head dubiously. "How long has she been in this condition?"

"All the morning, doctor, and Miss Wills came in and said it was worms, or paralysis, she couldn't decide which, they were so much alike. She said, too, that I must give her ale every five minutes, a tablespoonful at first and double the dose each time till she got well. I've used all I had in the house and all I could get at the neighbors,' and she just grows worse and worse. Can't you save her doctor? Oh do say that you can!"

"Well, yes, I think so; in fact there's not much danger if you only use ale enough," replied Charlie gravely, "'tis a sovereign remedy for all diseases of this class.

"But, doctor," said Nettie earnestly, "you will drown her; she has taken too much already. Can't you give something else?"

"People shouldn't meddle with what is above their comprehension, Miss Nettie. I am perfectly competent to manage this case; and Mrs. Sadie, I should advise you, as a friend, to send that young lady away at once. She belongs to the Temperance league, a dangerous class that is spoiling all our custom."

Grandma laughed now, "Yes, that is so," she said, "Charlie is right. If people would only let all kinds of spirituous liquors alone, the doctors, quack especially, wouldn't have so much custom. I've seen a great deal of sickness among all classes of people, in my day, but never any caused by total abstinence from all that can intoxicate."—Ex.

THE SALOON KEEPER'S LAMENT.

Dis be a queer country I tink. Ven I virst comes here, I can sell my peer, and my likers behint my stained glasses vinders and no one trouble me. I shoost gits my licens, I pays for it, and den I goes to work an' I gets de money. Men comes in to my blace an' spends dere wages an' I ax no questions, so long as I gits pade; it ish not my pizness if dere vimmins and childrens suffer from hunger and cold—I shoost looks out for myself. Vell, pooty soon some mens dey make vot dey call a civil tamage law. I know not vot dat is, but I soon vinds out. One man he drinks at mine saloon, he gits very drunk; his money all gone. I looks into his pockets, I vinds no more, so I turns him out. I tells him go home, but in de dark he stumbles over sumpting and preak his leg unt ish lade up all vinter. Virst I knews, his frausues me for tamage; I go to court; I pring my witness, she pring her vitnesses and den de joory say I must pay one hundred dollars; dat ish vat dey calls civil tamage—I think it not berry civil. Vell I goes on, I sells my peer unt my likers. I almost forgits apout de hundred tollars—I make so much money. But who should come den but de vimmins, de crusaders. Dey comes right in mine saloon unt dey calls me dere brudder, and say dey come to talk to me bout my soul's salvation. Dey sings, an' dey prays, an' dey cries, an' say I must give up my pizness, or I can never go to live mit God in Himmel ven I dies, but vill surely go to de pad place. I tells dem I no give up my pizness and I vant dem to come no more. But dey keeps coming and dey sing and pray and calls me dere brudder an' I cannot stop dem, so I shoost shuts up my place and clears out, likers and all. I goes to annoder place and I hear no more of de vimmins. I tink dey give it up as a pad job, but I soon vinds out dey are holding conventions all over de State, and dey are having prayer meetings, daily and veekly. Many mens dey gits converted and drinks no more and some of de liker tealers dey gits converted too. And dese vimmins sends petitions to Albany and Vashington, dey vants to stop our pizness and vat can we do, dey say not give us licens at all, Oh, de vimmins, dey do seem possessed—dey never gives up. Now dey are getting up dese Joovenile Temperance Unions and Bands of Hope, and I don't knew what all, and teach de chillins to drink no vine, no cider, no peer and gets dem to sign de pledge, and tells dem our stuff is all pizen, and den ven dey grows up dey be tetotallers, and den vere ve gits our coostomers, I like to know. Oh dear, dear, it ish very pad for our pizness already. I think mens gettin possessed too. Dey are even having mass meetings, and all de preachers are banding against our pizness, dey say it ish criminal pizness and dat we are ruining the souls of man, and our own souls too. I vish I minds de vimmins and gives up my pizness and be goot, den I have dem on my side and de law too.

CELLA.

MR. MOODY INTERVIEWED CONCERNING A PROPOSED BOYS' SCHOOL.

Question.—I hear, Mr. Moody, that you have a school in contemplation for boys at Northfield, Mass.

Answer.—Yes, and I am going to try to make it a little different from anything I have ever seen in this country.

Q.—In what respect?

A.—I am going to try to make boys upwards of ten years of age earn their own living.

Q.—How?

A.—I have bought 300 acres of land and intend to have them work on the farm.

Q.—How about time to study?

A.—I intend to have them work two hours, study two hours and play two hours in the forenoon, and the same in the afternoon, until older, when play will decrease and study and work increase.

Q.—In what other respect will your school differ?

A.—The boys will be kept in families, not to exceed 12 to 15 in each family. Three fine Christian ladies have volunteered each to be matron and mother to a family. I have already two houses and will build a third immediately.

Q.—What class of boys do you propose to take?

A.—It is not to be a reformatory institution. My plan is to take boys of unfortunate parents who are not able to educate them; but the boys shall be promising, and such as if educated would make good preachers and missionaries.

Q.—Will there be no tuition?

A.—That will depend upon circumstances. If their friends are not able, and the boys are promising, the whole thing will be gratuitous.

Q.—How will you get your funds?

A.—I have already about $50,000; of this sum Mr. Hiram Camp, of New Haven, Ct., gave $25,000. I think the plan will commend itself to the judgment of many friends as we go on. There is to be no debt in any way. The institution will grow as the funds come in.

Q.—Is this a principle of yours—no debt?

A.—Yes, since the Chicago fire. I am an officer in a church in Chicago, and I have notified them that I will never be a party to any debt on the church, but to notify me if they insist on going into debt.

Q.—How will application be made to secure admission to the school?

A—Through ministers and Christian people. I want to select carefully.

Q.—From any part of the country?

A.—Yes, or any part of Christendom. I want to get twelve Chinese boys—enough for one family.

Q.—You think a distinct institution of this sort is needed?

A.—Yes, 10,000 of them. What is more needed than religious, moral and intellectual training for boys who would not otherwise get it?

Q.—When are you going to start this school?

VOTE for "the beer shop for the white-laborer, and the work for the Chinaman." That is the true doctrine of the dear "old parties."

Correspondence.

SAN LUIS REY, (Cal.,) Nov. 25, 1880.

EDITOR RESCUE:—Perhaps your readers would be glad to learn that a Thanksgiving collection of "dimes" will be sent from here to aid the cause of Temperance; and a peculiar feature of the offering, so far, is, that it comes not from the members of any temperance order, but from those who, while they are Christians and temperance people, or rather total abstainers, have no connection with, and no desire to unite with the society of Good Templars. I speak of this particularly because we wish all good people, who are interested in the downfall of the tyranical despot—alcohol, to know that there are not only friends of temperance, outside of the temperance societies, but that there are temperance workers, who stand pledged, by principle, to "work, watch and pray," for the triumph and elevation of humanity over one of the worst "spirits' that ever entered into any human being; and they will do this, not only while led by or in an organized body pledged to honor and promote the temperance cause, but they will do it individually (yet unitedly) though every form of temperance should fail and cease to exist. And these good people are not the enemies of these societies, orders or lodges either; but, while wishing all success to them, that the efforts of these organizations may be worthy of, they too, are earnestly devoted to the good cause, as one of the elements of Christianity, which is of first importance because of the terrible ruin, which the evil they oppose is binding daily upon the noblest of God's creation, our own fellow-beings. And I trust that what is true of this place is much the same in other localities; and if we desire the success of the cause of temperance through or without temperance societies, the prospect is certainly hopeful. And so the Rescue has gone to San Francisco and bought it a new dress. Well, I like it; and if it continues as "spicy" as it bids fair to be now, I trust it will make many friends, and be a means in its own quiet way, of doing much good. I may send you some temperance songs sometimes for the readers of the Rescue, but I will not now infringe upon your attention and space.

Yours, for the best, W. W. BORDEN,

GOOD FOR LOMPOC.

Thanksgiving day was generally observed here. At the Church services there was a very fair attendance. After the discourse a collection was taken up for the benefit of the National Temperance Publication Society and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, and amounted to $10, a goodly sum for a good object.

STILL COMING.—Mr. J. W. Parsons and family recently arrived from Columbia, Mo. They like Lompoc very well and we hope they will make this their permanent home. Mr. Simpson and wife just in from Westminster, Los Angeles County, are at Mr. C. Powers'. Westminister used to be a Temperance colony, but the people let a saloon slip in and these good folks say it is working sad havoc with morals and happiness. We of Lompoc must take warning and resist the very first encroachments. Let our motto be "no compromise; no surrender."—Lompoc Record.

That is well for Lompoc; it is going to be a safe place for a family to live in. Westminister ought to have just one more citizen; at Binghamton, Solano County, when a colony was planted there on the temperance principle about 1864, a saloon was built and stocked in spite of the protests of the people; but the night before it was to commence its work of soul murder it burned up; and it is a pity that the people of Westminster should have more respect for the infamous and unjust law that protects a saloon-keeping murderer, than they have for the morals and welfare and lives and souls of their own children and neighbors.

The Band of Hope has interesting meetings in Lompoc.

LETTER FROM M. C. WINCHESTER.

EDITOR RESCUE:

[Bro. Winchester here gives a report of Sutter and Yuba District Lodge, which came to hand late, was crowded out last week and is omitted now because a report has already appeared.]

Dr. Merrick, of San Francisco, far more than an hour held the audience in the closest attention while he discoursed of the evils of intemperance and the remedy therefor. It were useless to follow his logic or describe his flights of eloquence, but it is sufficient to say that all who heard him went away well pleased and only regretted that his address was so short. And thus closed one of the most successful District Lodges ever held in the State. If space permitted I should like to speak of the names of the many temperance workers whose acquaintance I made, but with many thanks for kindness shown, close by saying the Good Templars of Yuba and Sutter may well feel proud of their District Lodges. M. C. WINCHESTER.

SUTTER.

P. S.—Last week you had a notice of how Los Angeles' members of the Legislature, stood on the Local Option question. Hon. A. L. Chandler of Sutter voted for Local Option in the Legislature last year, has been re-elected and will vote for it this year, and for all other practical temperance questions, though it bury him ever so deeply in a political grave. Let us count noses. M. C. W.

LETTER FROM WISCONSIN.

MADISON, WIS., NOV. 26TH 1880.

DEAR BROTHER WOOD:

I am so glad you are at the helm of The Rescue again! I have always liked the paper, but especially so when it was under your charge, but you must not imagine I agree entirely with all you put in it. You have probably not forgotten that you are not quite radical enough for me.

You, California Good Templars, have always been a mystery to me.

In some respects you lead the van of the great temperance army. As a Grand Lodge, you are the leading Grand Lodge of the Order; there is no other that can come any where near you. In connection with your Orphan's Home, you have done what no other Grand Lodge has ever dreamed of doing. You put more money into your work in proportion to your numbers than any other Grand Lodge in the world; and there is no Grand Lodge whose work is done in a more systematic business-like way than you do yours. You publish the best temperance paper published by any Grand Lodge connected with the Order. And then you talk so boldly of aiming "for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory in the Union," and what are you doing to secure it? Simply inaugurating a movement in favor of the discarded inefficient half-way measure of Local Option!!

Some of us old fogies down here in Sleepy Hollow are almost paralized with astonishment when we think of it. When I gain a little strength—I am now in my sick room where I have been for a couple of weeks—will you let me talk to you and your readers a little upon this matter of Local Option? Faithfully and fraternally yours,

SAMUEL R. HASTINGS.

THE Oncle Joseph steamer, which carried down 250 people the other day, seems to have been carelessly managed. The system of lights and signals is now so perfected that collisions ought never to occur on a clear night, when a passenger steamer is almost as conspicuous as a little blazing world on fire. As these steamers are almost universally floating grog-shops and the most perfect schools of drunkenness for the officers, it is quite probable the old cause of nine-tenths of all the marine disasters of that class was the criminal in this case.

TALMAGE.

Mr. Talmage lately selected for his text the verse: "This is now the bone of my bone and the flesh of my flesh," and proceeded: "The leaves whispered, and the birds chattered, and laughing were the voices of the waters, for the king of the human race was advancing with his bride, the first man leading to the marriage altar the earliest woman. See, now God, her father, steps forward and gives away the bride, while angels are the witnesses. Oh, wondrous wedding. In the Book of Time an angel inscribes the record: 'Married, on the second Tuesday in May, in the year of one, Adam, the first man, to Eve, the first woman, high heaven officiating.'"

Hardly giving his hearers time to recover from the effect of this startling marriage notice, Mr. Talmage said:—"Away with the gross notion that marriage is nothing but a civil contract. All the laws since Blackstone and before Blackstone cannot properly marry two hearts unless the Lord Almighty has first married them. There are many foes to the marriage relation. The first of these enemies is polygamy. There are now in this land more people than ever who believe in polygamy. Some believe in it under another name; some practice it under no name. It is claimed that the Bible sanctions polygamy. This is not true. The bible recognizes it as it recognizes all other styles of sin, but instead of sanctioning it, God thunders: 'Neither shall any man take to one wife another.' In all the forty years' wanderings of God's chosen people in the wilderness there was only one case of polygamy. Does that look as if God sanctioned it? Neither Adam, nor Noah, nor Moses, nor Abraham, nor Joshua, nor Samuel, nor hundreds of others were polygamists. The first bigamist mentioned in the bible was Lamech, and he was a murderer, and so it is all through; whenever you find in the bible a man with more than one wife, you find him up to his neck in trouble. Old David with all his wives mourns 'out of the belly of hell,' and Solomon says, 'there is no good thing under the sun.' Good for them, say I. If Solomon had had 999 wives less he would have taken a more cheerful view of things. God said, 'I will make a helpmate for man.' You will notice that he used the singular number. He did not say 'helpmates.' If God had intended a plurality of wives he wouldn't have left Adam a rib to his name. But you remember he took only one rib. Oh, there is abundant proof that God thought one woman was enough for any man. I believe that God intended woman to be man's equal. In polygamy this idea is impossible, for it presumes that it takes from ten to thirty women to equal one poor man. I tell you that all poetry about man being the oak and woman the vine is all twaddle. Half the time the woman is the oak and the man the vine, and only a scrawny one at that. In tens of thousands of cases men have gone home discouraged and with spirits broken down only to find in their wives a dauntless spirit, and to borrow from these weaker vessels fresh energy for life's conflict." * * * * "I make no indiscriminate attacks upon clubs, and I must not be so reported. I believe that there are social, artistic, political and religious clubs that do good work. Indeed, if I had no home I should join the best club I could find. But I wonder, nevertheless, that men of families, who leave their homes at 8 o'clock in the morning, and do not return till 6 at night, can have any taste for going out after dinner. One would think, at all events, that any man could occasionally spend a night or so with his wife and children. I tell you that when a man likes any place better that his house, look out for breakers. Ask the good, intelligent woman of Brooklyn what she thinks of all those institutions which take husbands away from their homes every evening, and see what she will say. Some clubs are well enough, but the average club of New York and Brooklyn is the foe of domestic life.

WANTED: laborers in the wine making business; none but Chinamen need apply.

LICENSE—LOCAL OPTION—TOTAL PROHIBITION.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. ONE.

In our conflict with intemperance, we war not only with passion, prejudice and covetousness, but with certain popular fallacies that are accepted as axiomatic truths by many good temperance men. These popular errors have embarrassed the temperance reform through all these weary years of struggle and unless rejected, our victory is postponed. Some of these erroneous notions relate to License, Local Option and Prohibition, What are the fundamental principles involved in these terms? Let us go down to foundation truths.

Society invoked legal protection against the liquor traffic over 400 years ago, long before the nature and properties of alcoholic drinks were understood, The fact of drunkenness required protective legislation but its philosophy was not comprehended. Their ignorance of the poisonous nature of alcohol led them to adopt the principle of moderation in the use of drams and this principle is embodied in the license system. We cannot believe that the stern old patriots of "76" would have entailed upon us, the legal sanction of its sale had they known that alcohol is a poison—which science has pronounced it to be. But mistaken as they were they have bequeathed to us the abominable license system, this great bulkhead thru whose open gates, issues this fiery stream of destruction, that is desolating this and other lands. However this early attempt at legal regulation of the traffic, settled forever the right of the Government to interfere, hence the right to sell alcoholic liquors is not a natural right belonging to citizenship. Much has been said by "distillers" and "brewers" and whisky and beer guzzlers, about natural rights and their invasion, but the license system declares that no man has an inherent right to deal in this trade of death; the supreme court has sustained this view, Chief Justice McLean declared that "no one can claim a license to retail spirit as a matter of right, and we may add that rumsellers have no rights, beyond the point, where their acts touch the rights of others to property, security and protection. Bear in mind then that License confers a privilege and not a natural right, It makes the sale of spirits a proper subject of legislation, It admits the right of the state to interfere. The right of the state to license carries with it the right to prohibit.

These are truths already established in restrictive liquor legislation, Originally license was local prohibition in regard to places, but real prohibition in regard to individuals. Can anybody anywhere, and anyhow sell rum? No! says the License system.

Only certain persons are permitted to do this. and even they are prohibited as regards the person to whom, the quantity which, the place where and the time when they shall sell.—License then has prohibition for its back-ground. A. B. C. under special limitations may sell, all the rest of the Alphabet may not; the very first step is based on the right to prohibit, by saying certain ones may sell all the rest are prohibited. The form is permissive but the purpose is restrictive to limit the sale and lessen the number of dramshops and thus diminish drunkenness.

But the history of License legislation in this country shows the utter folly of trying to regulate or restrain the liquor traffic by this system, No license laws were ever "stringent" enough to diminish drunkenness, and they have always been repealed for their inefficiency, if they were ever successful, it is only so far as they were prohibitory.

But the License system is not only a failure, it is accomplishing the very thing it was designed to prevent, it is the prolific seed sin, the cause of all the evils of intemperance. It makes rumselling honorable, while men have the legal right to sell, public opinion cannot destroy the traffic, It makes rum-drinking respectable; while it is legal to sell, it will be respectable to buy. License keeps up not only the sale, but also the manufacture; men make whisky because they can sell it. Stop the sale and the making will cease by an inevitable law. This is not theory but experience, kill the market for whisky and the distilleries are stopped.

It comes to this then that the legal sale of alcoholic drinks is the cause of all the evils of intemperance.

The License system has not only failed in its intended benefits but in the enforcement of its provisions, it is violated with impunity all over our land. If those who make it a special business to cry out against a Prohibitory Law because it cannot be enforced, would turn their attention to their own favorite License law, they would find a better and a broader field for their operations. Public opinion to-day brands a dram-shop as a "nuisance" at common law which says that "anything that either disturbs the public peace or injures the public health" is a nuisance. If the dram-shop does not produce both of these results, then there is no truth in the teachings of experience. Hence the License law really legalizes and maintains a nuisance. Here then is our indictment against the infamous license system. Based upon false assumptions, and the ignorance of the nature of alcohol, it is perpetuating the very curse from which we vainly cry for deliverance, and the history of Legislation. the world over shows that Government never has, and never can regulate this nefarious traffic. The only logical, or practical issue is between total Prohibition or Free trade in rum.

LOCAL OPTION.

With regard to this question, it is well to hear all that can be said on both sides and especially to listen considerately and enquiringly to all that can be said against the local option, or rather the "optional local prohibition" movement as ours ought to be called. But it is a bedrock misapprehension for any one to assume that an attempt to secure thus a local prohibition as a first step toward a general one, is our ultimate aim. The prohibitionists of this State are not a whit behind our brethren anywhere in the world, as to what we are aiming for and asking for and working consistently to secure. No one of us ever dreamed of local optional prohibition as a finality. But one third of our population is in San Francisco, a colony from Germany, Ireland, France, Italy, &c, almost entirely anti-prohibition, anti-Sunday and anti-American, and their vote can tip over any State legislation that applies distastefully to themselves. The question is whether we shall continue the forced sale of liquor all over the State, till we can include San Francisco in a forcible prohibition enforced in this city by State military authority, or whether we shall conquer in a few short years all the rest of the State and induce San Francisco to follow suit voluntarily for her own safety and interest.

We have now two years to work in, preparatory to legal action. Great changes in the outlook have taken place in the past two years: similar and greater advances may take place in the coming year. Possibly in 12 or 18 months from to day we may feel justified in working for a constitutional prohibitory amendment, perhaps for a National prohibitory law, probably for a State and National prohibitory party. Whatever we shall be after, if it is at all less than what we profess as our ultimatum, it will be the very largest progressive step that is at all possible to attain. But we shall not refuse to occupy one, two and three fourths of the confederacy, simply because we cannot succeed in capturing the whole territory in a forlorn hope assault.

THE CLOSING SCENE.

BY THOMAS BUCHANAN READ.

[The following is pronounced by the Westminster Review to be unquestionably the finest American poem ever written.]

Within the sombre realm of leafless trees
The russett year inhaled the dreamy air,
Like some tanned reaper, in his hour of ease,
When all the fields are lying brown and bare.

O'er the dim waters widening in the vales,
Sent down the air a greeting to the mills
On the dull thunder of alternate flails.

All sights are mellowed, all sounds subdued;
The hills seemed further, and the stream sung low.
As in a dream the distant woodman hewed

The embattled forest erewhile armed with gold,
Their banners bright with every martial hue,
Now stood like some sad, beaten host of old,
Withdrawn afar in Time's remotest blue.

And, like a star, slow drowning in the light,
The village church vane seemed to pale and faint.

The sentinel cock upon the hillside crew—
Crew thrice—and all was stiller than before;
Silent, till some replying warder blew
His alien horn, and then was heard no more.

Where erst the jay, within the elm's tall crest,
Made garrulous trouble around her unfledged young;
And where the oriole hung her swaying nest
By every night wind like a censer swung;

Where sung the noisy martins in the eaves,
The busy swallows, circling ever near—
Foreboding, as the rustic mind believes,
An early harvest and a plenteous year;

Where every bird that waked the vernal feast
Shook the sweet slumber from its wing at morn,
To warn the reaper of the rosy east;
All now was sunless, empty and forlorn.

Alone, from out the stubble piped the quail
And croaked the crow through all the dreary gloom;
Alone the pheasant drumming in the vale
Made echo in the distant cottage loom.

There was no bud, no bloom upon the bowers;
The spider wove its web alone by night;
The thistle-down, the only ghost of flowers,
Sailed slowly by and noiseless passed from sight.

And where the woodbine shed upon the porch
Its crimson leaves, as if the year stood there,
Firing the floor with its inverted torch;

Amid all this the center of the scene,
The white-haired matron, with monotonous tread,
Plied the swift wheel, and with her joyless mien
Sat like a fate and watched the flying thread.

She had known sorrow. He had walked with her,
Oft supped, and broke with her the ashen crust;
And in the dead leaves still she heard the stir
Of his thick mantle trailing in the dust.

While yet her cheek was bright with summer bloom,
Her country summoned, and she gave her all;
Regave the sword to rust upon the wall.

SKETCHES FROM REAL LIFE.

NUMBER FIVE.

Whenever I spend a Sabbath in San Francisco, I attend and take part in the open air services opposite the "What Cheer House." There I made the acquaintance of two self-constituted city missionaries, and upon invitation promised to assist them at their mission on Pacific street. This I did, and preached the first regular sermon delivered at the "mission." The leaders were members of the Green St. Con. Church, very devoted and faithful. From various causes the attendance had fallen off, and serious thoughts were entertained of giving up the mission. As the lady remarked to me, "The Christian people do not understand our work, and therefore do not aid us" I encouraged them and enlisted others: the meetings became interesting and profitable. While preaching one night, I noticed a man past the prime of life whose appearance denoted more than ordinary intelligence, seedy, but genteel. He was evidently interested. At the door I took him by the hand, saying, "are you a Christian, sir?" He looked at me intently for a moment, then answered: "I am not." "Do you wish to become one?" I continued. I saw the tears, indicative of an awakening, as struggling with his feelings he gazed into my eyes. At length he said, "I do." I then said, "I am going into the country to an appointment, will not be back until Tuesday; I do not know your name, God knows you; but if you will promise to pray for yourself I will pray for you, and promise the prayers of people who do not know you. Will you promise?" With earnestness he did. I enlisted my congregations in his behalf, and on Tuesday night returned to the mission. The first man to greet me was my acquaintance of the Thursday night previous. He was indeed a changed man. The testimony he gave was afterwards borne out in his life. Up to this period I had not known his name; learned it, and also that his wife was a Catholic. She came to meeting, and soon professed to have experienced a change. I visited him at his request; he told me he had something to impart; something of vital importance to him. I returned to find him sick. When alone with him he said: "you will be surprised at what I am about to communicate; but I feel it to be a duty to God and man." He told me briefly the story of his life, a life of varied joys and sorrows; of his leaving New York for Melbourne with a heavy stock of goods to be sold on commission, of his mercantile success, of his being the first to load sand as ballast in ships returning empty from Australia, of his building the American Hotel at a point near Melbourne, of his dissolute habits and their consequences, of his marriage, separation from his wife, of his daughter's wealthy marriage; of another daughter (whose acquaintance I afterwards made) of her husband when dying and many other, ending with a confession of immoralities for which he desired to atone. This gentleman I write advisedly had through strong drink gone astray, had a few days before I first saw him been arrested for illegal gambling and had gone down into the depths.

Last July he passed away with a bright hope, and since his conversion a clear record. Sister Hall of the Home on California street was with him during his last sickness, as was Mr. Bibee of Mr. Ijams church. Mr. McKee informs me that he saw the widow a short time ago, and was pleased to hear her say that she looked forward to meeting her husband in the better land.

This is perhaps the most peculiar of many interesting cases with which I have been connected in a ministry of many years.

LOCAL OPTION.

NUMBER FOUR.

BY S. D. HASTINGS.

I object to local option in the fourth place, because whenever it is adopted as the great end for which temperance people are working, for the time being, at least, it appears like a lowering of the standard, and a lack of united action on the part of the friends of the cause throughout the land. We are professedly laboring for the same end in every state in the Union. All the great temperance organizations of the country—the National Temperance Society, the Good Templars, the Sons of Temperance, the Temple of Honor, the various Women's Temperance organizations have all adopted the total abstinence and total prohibition as fundamental principles. The work is one and the same in all the states. The work will not be completed until prohibition is the law of every state. While we are, and should be specially interested in the work in our own state, we also have a deep interest in the progress of the cause in every other state. If the temperance workers generally throughout the land have agreed upon a particular line of action, it seems to me to be exceedingly desirable that all should fall into that line, unless they are sure they have some better and more efficient plan of procedure.

Is it possible that you in California can regard local option as a more efficient line of action than that pursued by Neal Dow and those who acted with him in 1851? Suppose that instead of presenting his grand old Maine law, he had presented a single local option law—do you believe the temperance cause would occupy as high ground in the State of Maine as it now does?

Suppose that in Kansas instead of going for a constitutional amendment, they had simply asked for local option what a different position would she now occupy in the eyes of the world!

The friends of temperance in all parts of the land seem to be settling down upon the conviction that constitutional amendment is the true line upon which to carry on this contest in the future.

Kansas has led off and has gained a glorious victory. Iowa is following in her wake as rapidly as the provisions of her law will allow. Already the movement is started in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Nebraska, Arkansas, West Virginia, and I know not how many other states.

The old veteran, Neal Dow, in a letter to the temperance congress recently held in New York, speaks thus: "I hope all our states will be inspired by the example of Kansas, to obtain a constitutional prohibition of the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquors. It is the purpose of the temperance men and women of Maine to follow the lead of that great and prosperous state in putting the stamp of constitutional condemnation upon that trade which is at deadly war with every interest of nature, state and people, and which has been justly stigmatized on the floor of the United States Senate as the gigantic crime of crimes.

If the measure is needed in Maine in what state is it not needed? That it would be a wise thing for you to inaugurate a movement for a constitutional amendment in your state I will endeavor to show in another article.

EVIL EFFECTS OF RUM.

Many and awful are the crimes committed in our midst almost every day; and the effect of these crimes on others, (relations or friends) is indeed pitiable; many a heart saddened, by the crime or misdeed of a brother, father, or kin, many an eye moistens at the thought of some deed which cast a blight upon a once happy home. All this on the account of one single act committed by one person, in a moment of time perhaps. We next ask the cause of this, "was the person insane?" insane he certainly was for the time being," what made him insane? you ask, in nine cases out of ten the answer comes back to you: rum, rum, rum."

And when that once gets hold of a man there is very little hope for him. except he looks to Him on high. The terrible influence of liquor is indeed awful, some it makes sullen and morose, others it makes jolly and hilarious, others again it makes perfect fiends.

Men who in their sober moments would spurn to injure any one, will in their inebriety, abuse and illtreat little children and women, and it is not a rare occurrence to see a father come home in a drunken state, his unsteady gait a signal to the little ones to run and hide themselves, for fear of his drunken fury; the wife who would receive him with kindness and love is turned upon with a curse, and often blows are showered upon her defenseless person; this same man would in his sober moments be the kindest father, and most loving husband, Time and again he has resolved to taste liquor for the last time, and as often have his good resolves fallen to the ground; worse than a slave is the man held captive by this terrible enemy; it holds some of our greatest men in captivity, men noted for their acquirements in literature, science and art,men who could move the masses at their will, by their sound reasoning and arguments; you think these men are happy in their glory; no, they are miserable, unhappy, wretched: their life blood is being slowly sapped away by this fearful demon, and their glory is but momentary, for they must surely succumb to their captor, it is only a matter of time. We will not profit by example, hence you see a father weak, emaciated, mind all crazed by the long indulgence in ardent spirits, whose son will follow in his footsteps.

Boys generally grasp quickest that which is bad and evil, and so when once a bad habit is formed, it generally sticks faster than a good one; one bad habit leads to another. and he who steals certainly lies; smoking chewing, drinking, fall in as naturally as if they were conducive to a good moral character. Young man beware of the first glass you will surely curse the day you drank it. W. C. MYSELL.

Mr. J. G. Whittier, in a letter to the Boston Advertiser, writes, "As respects suffrage for women, whatever objections may be made to it as a matter of expediency there is no possible argument against it on the ground of principle. No one can read William Bowditch's essay on the taxation of women in Massachusetts, and not be convinced that the time is not far distant when a sense of simple justice and fair-dealing will compel our legislators to confer the privileges of citizenship on those from whom they exact the uttermost farthing of its duties."

RESULTS OF THE FIRST DRINK.

A VOICE FROM THE INEBRIATE'S HOME.

At sixteen years of age I went out into the great business world. The first morning I left home, in the prime of youth and health, how kindly my mother looked at me as she kissed me, and as I went on my way with the good resolutions I had formed, I remember too, the pride and pleasure I felt as I brought home my first-earned money! I had reason to be happy, for I had a happy Christian home, loving father, mother, brothers, sisters, and a good employer. During my business career I became acquainted with young men of my own age. I had noticed that at dinner they often took a glass of ale. Having an invitation from one of them to take a drink, I yielded. thinking it looked manly, It was only a glass of ale, but my first drink, and the first step toward disgrace and misery. Day after day I continued to indulge moderately, deceiving those around me. I could see no harm in it, as others did the same. Nor did I believe it would ever get the upper-hand of me as it did in years after; but, as I look back to-day on a wasted life of sin and shame, I see the cause of it all—it was my first drink.

As I write this to-day I am looking out on an assembly of young men, who would be an honor to themselves, as well as to society, were it not for this demon.

I have talked with each of them, and they say as I say, it was the first drink that brought them to what they are. A few days ago a gentleman left this Home who three years since stood among the first merchants of New York City. He was rich, and he had a loving family and a happy home. Now he is penniless, friendless, and homeless—no one to care for him—a wanderer on the face of God's earth. What caused it? The first drink. A few days ago a merchant entered here greatly under the influence of drink. Three days later I stood by his death-bed. He had known no one since the day after his arrival here. During his delirium he tried to speak, but could not. Never shall I forget the scene; a loving sister on her knees by his bedside, and a weeping mother, but he knew them not. His soul passed away to meet its Judge unprepared. What caused this? The first drink. To those of you who hear or read this, take warning! If you have commenced to drink, stop at once. It will save you from a life of sin and trouble. It will make you happy in this world; it will help fit you for a better world above. Therefore, I say stop now, with God's help.

Ask the Saviour to help you,
Comfort, strengthen, and keep you;
He is willing to aid you,
He will carry you through. G. S.

WOMEN AS CAPITALISTS.

Of the $346,446,800 of 4 and 4½per cent. national bonds held in this country by individuals, women hold $72,672,850. This by no means shows the interest of women in these bonds, for especially in the Eastern and Middle States, women own bank stock, or are depositors in savings banks, to a very great extent. If to this we add the fact that women in these days hold real estate in their own names, and at their, practically speaking, absolute disposal, we shall see that the women of this country have a large interest in it. And this is a conservative factor in it. Whatever may be said as to the matter of universal suffrage for women, there is no question that those who have property will seek to know something of the reason of taxation, the mode in which the money is spent, and more or less of the fundamental principles and duties of the government. Nor is there any more doubt that the intent of this class would be to obtain and maintain an honest, able and economical government. The changes in our laws which have given women so much right in, and liberty of disposition of her own, have been no more equitable to her than they have been valuable in steadying the general judgment.—Providence Journal.

SOME FACTS CONCERNING THE JEWS.

Rev. E. O. Bartlett, in the Christian Intelligencer, has made the following statements concerning the Jews:

For many years they were the principal takers of the loans to the governments of Europe. In some instances they have compelled peace, by refusing to furnish the sinews of war. During the ten years that preceded our rebellion, the Rothschilds furnished in loans $200,000,000 to England, $50,000,000 to Austria, $40,000,000 to Prussia, $130,000,000 to France, $50,000,000 to Russia, $12,000,000 to Brazil, and many millions to smaller states. The late Baron Nathan Lionel de Rothschild was born in London, and is the most celebrated member of the family. In 1847 he was elected a member of Parliament, but true to his Jewish principles or obstinacy (call it what you may) he declined to take the ordinary oath, "on the faith of a Christian;" and so did not take his seat, though several times re-elected, till 1858, when Parliament voted to admit him without his taking a Christian oath, the Jew conquering in the end. There are at the present time several Jews members of the lower house of the British legislature. And to-day the most distinguished statesman of England and the world is Benjamin Disraeli, whom O'Connell, in a heated debate, once stigmatized as one who, for aught we knew, is a lineal descendant of the impenitent thief on the cross!

The Hebrew nation is now estimated at 12,000,000. Under all disadvantages their increase is more rapid than that of Christians. By percentage, it is as 5.5 of Jews to 3.8 of Christians. Their death-rate, wherever calculated, is much smaller than our own; as, for example, in Prussia in 100,000 births there were 143 Christian deaths to 89 Jewish. The blessing of long life is still theirs. This is to be attributed not merely to their natural vitality as a race, but to their family piety, their bodily and spiritual repose on the Sabbath day. There are upwards of 520,000 Jews in the German Empire, of whom about 50,000 are in Berlin, where they are gaining much faster proportionately than the rest of the population, especially in wealth and in social influence. Recent statistics show that out of 10,000 Jews 1,132 are directors of banks, against 509 in the same number of Protestants. In Germany, 55 per cent. of the Jews are shop-keepers, while the percentage among the Protestants is only 12. 30 per cent. of the sons of Jews are in the high schools of Berlin, while the largest proportion of German newspapers are either edited or controlled by Jewish influence.

In London there are about 100,000 Jews. They far excel any other religious order in the number and magnificence of their hospitals, alms-houses, synagogues and free schools. They have in London three well-edited weekly newspapers, with a good circulation each, and a college exclusively for Jews. There are Jewish aldermen, sheriffs, common-councilmen and members of Parliament; fifteen synagogues, a Rabbinical college, with the finest Jewish library in the world. Their business houses and their commercial connections are among the largest and best known in the marts of commerce. They own largely in real estate all over England. They hold mortgages on historical buildings of feudal renown. Their own residences are among the finest in London. And when Queen Victoria was a young girl she did not disdain to borrow the garden gatekey from one of their princely proprietors, to take a walk in his splendid gardens.

In this country the career of the Jews has been hardly less remarkable than in the Old World. They have splendid synagogues in nearly every city of America; in New York City, one costing over a million. And Boston, the city that delights above all others to boast of her literary culture, sends a Jew to represent her in the national legislature. A Jew is never found in any of our poor-houses or asylums. They provide most magnificently for their own, and their charitable institutions are the most perfect in the world. During our late war, nearly all the gold in the Confederacy was in the hands of Jews and their agents, who kept up constant and regular communication with their wealthy houses in England and Europe. In the most barbarous periods they kept up the only traffic and communication which subsisted between distant countries; like hardy and adventurous miners, they were always at work under the surface of society, slowly winning their way to opulence. Perpetually plundered, yet always wealthy; massacred by thousands, yet springing up again from their undying stock, the Jew appears at all times and in all regions, and there is scarcely a habitable spot on the face of the globe where they may not be found to-day.

PROHIBITION IN IRELAND.

BESBROOK.

The Rev. Dawson Burns examined before the Select Committee of the House of Lords, February 19, 1878 said: "Besbrook is a manufacturing town three miles from Newry and 46 from Dublin. The principal of the firm is a member of the Society of Friends, Mr. John Grubb Richardson. The mill is one of the finest in the United Kingdom; it has a frontage of 600 feet and is four storys in hight. The population numbers between 3,000 and 4,000. The town was built about 25 years ago, and there has never been a place for the sale of intoxicating liquors in it; and the proprietor informs me in two letters which I have here from him that they have not at present a pawnshop either, and that the place is entirely free from faction fights and from all those disturbances which are often connected with very great feeling on political and religious matters, especially when that is aggravated by the presence of strong drink. Sometime ago the opinion of the people themselves was taken upon the subject, when a very large majority affirmed their desire that the existing arrangement should be continued.

Mr. John Grubb Richardson examined, April 2, 1878, gives the following additional information: "So far as I can remember, we have not had 30 cases before the bench of magistrates of our town of Besbrook in 31 years. I may add that considering the population, that we have had during our time very few illegitimate births, and that the death rate has been from 12½ to 14½ per 1,000, and that, for a factory population the Committee will agree is a very small proportion. We have about 1,000 children and young people on the Protestant Sabbath school rolls, and a large number of our respectable young men and women teaching in them, and, I believe, there is no place in the United Kingdom where so many in proportion to the number of inhabitants go to their places of worship. We have an Irish church, a Presbyterian meeting, a Roman Catholic Chapel, a Wesleyan Chapel and a Friends' Meeting House. We are all, I am thankful to say, working in general harmony, and, I believe, united in the desire to see the legislation altered in favor of Temperanee, As regards the establishment of drinking places, the people were recently canvassed by ballot to ascertain whether they desired public-houses or not, and the result was that the vote proved in the proportion of nine to one against the establishment of any such places; that vote was taken by ballot without any effort of any kind being made to stimulate a reply in one direction or the other.—Watchword.

THE beer drinking Germans have always claimed that "treating" is an American custom and that Germans did not believe in it. The whisky men of the Wisconsin legislature passed an "anti-treat" bill and at once beer guzzlers bolted the Republican ticket to pnnish them for passing the law. For stupidity, bull-headedness, reckless assertions, unreasonable acts, the German beer drinker takes the palm. With them it is rule or ruin and the thinking people of the nation are getting tired of being run by walking beer casks.

THE women of Lincoln improved their right to vote on school questions on Tuesday. The first ladies of the city were among those who voted.—Mr. John M. Burks undoubtedly owes his election to their votes. Give women the full ballot and corrupt political rings will be destroyed.—Western World, Neb.

It has been planned for our G. W. C. T., R Thompson. to visit Tuolumne county the first week in May. He will be at Sonora, Friday, May 6th; Soulsbyville, on Saturday 7th, to dedicate the Good Templars new hall; Jamestown, Sunday morning and Columbia Sunday evening.

R. W. G. L.—The 27th annual session of the R. W. G. L. will be held at Topeka, Kansas, commencing on Tuesday, May 24th next at ten o'clock A. M. The session will be held in the hall of Representatives of the State Capital. Headquarters will be at Gordon House, where arrangements have been made for all who attend. The Gordon House will entertain to its full capacity the representatives and visitors to the R. W. G, L. at the reduced rate of $1.50 and $2.00 per day according to location and character of room. This Hotel is the best in Kansas; is located convenient to the place of meeting, and large enough to accommodate all who attend.

R. W. G. S. Keens has issued a circular giving the reduced rates over all the Eastern Railroads including some fourteen lines, but announces that no arrangement could be made for any concession or reduction over the C. P. R. R. or the Oregon Steamship lines.

Representatives and visitors going from California or the Pacific Coast however, may avail themselves of the reduction over the Union Pacific Line which is as follows:

The Union Pacific Railway Company will sell round trip tickets to Topeka and return at the following reduced rates: From Denver, $38.00; Pueblo, $38,00; Cheyenne, $45.00; Ogden, $84.00; from points in Kansas 1¼ fare: points in Nebraska east of Grand Island, 1¼ fare to Omaha; points on St. Joseph and Western Division, and maine line between Grand Island and Cheyenne including the former point, 1¼fare to St. Joseph, and proportionate rates from other local points. All purchasers of these tickets to be furnished with my certificate. Tickets good from May 15th to June 15th, inclusive. The Kansas division of said railway will return those who pay full fare going, at one-fourth regular rates to points in Kansas on presentation of certificate of attendance.

The R. W, G. S. says: It is expected that a very cheap trip to Denver, Colorado, and return can be arranged at the close of the session, providing a large enough party is made up, thus giving all an opportunity to see the Rocky Mountains. If the excursion is made, the lodges at Denver have signified their desire to give a reception.

It is hoped and expected there will be a large attendance of members and visitors from every Grand Lodge on this continent. There are many reasons why there should be. The most important legislation will come before the R. W. G. L. this year—measures that have been pending for years will come up for final adjudication. We meet at the capital of the first state to pass the constitutional amendment, which amendment will then be in force It is the most western point at which the R. W. G. L. has ever convened. The vast prairies which many of you will see for the first time, will then look their best. It is easy of access from all sections and the rates of travel are low.

The local Committee will arrange details as to public meetings etc., and will meet members and visitors at the depots. Persons desiring to avail themselves of the lower rates over the U. P. R. C., and who will attend the R. W. G. L. as visitors or otherwise will be furnished with the necessary certificate entitling them to the reduction of fare, upon application to the G. W. S.

PERSONALS.—The Grand Lodge office was visited during the past week by the following members of the Order: Bro. Dan Hogins of Newcastle, No. 339; Bro. H. F. Band of Chapel, No. 191, Coleville, Mono county; and Bros, A. P. Schnyder and F. A. Butler of Defiance, No. 219, Pleasant Grove.

PLEASANT GROVE.—This locality in Sutter county whose former standing may be interpreted by the name it bore, "Gouge Eye," has been revolutionized by the organization of a Lodge of Good Templars which was instituted at that place a little less than five years ago. It was our pleasure to meet with the Lodge on Saturday evening last, having gone hence by invitation of the W. C. T. Bro. A. P. Schnyder. The Lodge was found to be well attended and comfortably housed, in fact having an exceedingly neat hall in which to meet, comparing favorably with more pretentious city lodge rooms. The moral elements thus introduced have been successful in changing the name and post office from "Gouge Eye" to the more euphonious appellation of "Pleasant Grove" and it is hoped they will transform the locality completely to the latter indeed as well as name, by closing up the remaining "deadfall." This can be done by faithful and persistent effort and the harmonious relations of the members of our Order—not otherwise. Our brief stay was made pleasant by Mr and Mrs Rogers and daughter whose hospitalities we enjoyed.

BOOMING.—That expressive and popular word may be applied to the Lecture field of the Grand Lodge of California, which is now occupied by six salaried Grand Lecturers viz Sister Mrs Emily P. Stevens; Prof Wm Crowhurst; Dr. M. D. Merrick; Hugh R. Hughes; George Bramall and Rev. F. J. Culver, than whom an abler and more faithful corps of Lecturers cannot be found. All are hard at work and it will be wonderful if much good is not accomplished by the systematic and earnest labor of these faithful workers. It is hoped that arrangements can be made to have Bro W. R. Ellis. Grand Lecturer for the Grand Lodge of Nevada, visit the counties of Inyo and Mono of our state, which lie adjoining, when he shall visit Southern Nevada. Our Lodges and members can do much to further the cause by having arrangements made to have the Lecturers receive a full hearing in the various communities visited. Consult the list of appointments and be prepared for the coming of the Grand Lecturers.

HASSAMS MANUAL AND CONSTITUTION.—Hassams combined Manual and Lodge readings and recitations, a neatly cloth bound volume of 280 pages, and a book indispensible to every Good Templar who desires to know how to promptly and carefully transact lodge business can be had from the G. W. S. at $1,25 per copy. Also copies of the Consitution, by laws, digest of decisions etc, of the G. L. of California and Chases Manual or exposition of the Order 125 pages bound in cloth at 50 cents. But a few copies of either remain to be sold. The cash must accompany the order, for either of the above to receive attention.

GLEANINGS.—Bro. H. S. Graves D. D. of North Butte Lodge No. 452, Sutter county writes "Our Lodge is doing well and holds its regular meetings rain or shine. We have not missed a lodge meeting this winter altho we have to travel six miles to get there" .....Star of Cottonwood Lodge of Hills Ferry is reported by its Deputy, Bro. W. R. Wiggs, as doing a noble work. Recently a public entertainment was given at which three hundred visitors were present.

CONSTITUTIONAL QEESTIONS.—Correspondents will save themselves time and annoyance, if they will remember to address "questions" on constitutional points or constitution of law, or as to usage, to the G. W. C. T. only. He alone is authorized to make decisions; hence he alone should be appealed to for them. The G. W. S. receives many of these, and can only forward them to the G. W. C. T.. which involves both expense and delay.

THE HUNDRED ROLL.—Sixteen lodges reported a membership of one hundred and more members during the last quarter. These lodges were Nos. 2, 12, 64, 109, 131, 192, 201, 253, 263, 266, 291, 299, 340, 342, 363 and 459. The aggregate membership of the 16 lodges is 1987 or very nearly 124 each. The banner lodge is Nevada, No. 201, which reports 176 members with Morning Star, No. 266, of Modesto close up with 159 members.

AMADOR.—Bro. Rev. I. D, Wood, the efficient district deputy of Amador county writes: "I have visited nearly all the lodge in the county. The work goes on nicely, and with some grandly. Our Dist. Lodge meets at Ione. There has never been a better prospict for a grand rally. We hope to send up a good report."

WHAT ARE YOU DOING ABOUT IT?—Have you made an effort to increase the circulation of the RESCUE? Get your friends to take it on trial of three months for fifty cents. They will thereafter become permanent subscribers. Try it.

HALL BURNED.—A telegram was received late Saturday evening from Sister L. C. Murray, Deputy of the lodge at Greenville, announcing the burning of their hall and ordering a new set of lodge work which went forward per express on Monday.

LODGE DIRECTORY.—The Lodge Directory has been corrected to date. Lodges are requested to examine their record and see if it is correctly quoted. If not the G. W. S. should be notified of the errors that they may be corrected.

TRUSTEES AND LADY MANAGERS.—The Boards of Trustees and Lady Managers of the Good Templars Home for Orphans will hold their quarterly meeting at Vallejo, on Tuesday next, May 3rd at 10 A, M.

THE SIXTIETH.—The sixtieth new lodge of the current year was organized at Tomales, Marin county on the 18th inst., by Grand Lecturer F. J. Culver. And still they come.

MAY DAY.—The Temperance celebration and Mayday picnic occurs at Davisville on Saturday next. Sacramento, Solano and Yolo counties will be fully represented thereat.

EXECUTIVE MEETING.—The Executive Committee of the Grand Lodge, will meet at the Bernard House Vallejo, on Monday evening next May 2nd, at 7:30 o'clock.

G. W. C. T. Department.

R. THOMPSON, G. W. C. T.

We think it reasonable to presume that the ministerial Union of San Francisco and vicinity had some sufficient foundation for their action taken in reference to certain lecturers and self styled ministers, who have been at work in California of late. Below will be found the action as published in the Occident, one of the religious papers of this city, which speaks for itself. We regret that it has become necessary to caution the public in reference to any of the temperance workers on our coast. We understand that Mr. Dutcher and Mrs. Watson are now in Oregon,

MINISTERIAL UNION.

At a meeting of the Ministerial Union of San Francisco and vicinity on March 28, 1881, the attendance being large, statements were made concerning the labors of D. I. K. Rine, G. M. Dutcher, Mrs. Judge Watson and James H. White, and the subject being continued at another meeting, April 4, 1881, it was resolved: That the committee on credentials should be instructed not to recommend any one of them to the fellowship and confidence of the churches.

Committee—F. E. Shearer, C. V. Anthony, J. H. Warren, C. W. Hewes.

Lecturers' Reports.

☞ The only authorized Grand Lecturers in this jurisdiction are Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Messrs. Wm. Crowhurst, Hugh R. Hughes, Dr. M.. D. Merrick, F. J. Culver and George Bramall.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

H. R. HUGHES.

Wednesday evening the 6th, the Good Templars Dramatic club of Angels gave an entertainment to raise funds for our District Lodge on the 14th of May.

They performed "Ten Nights In a Bar-room" to a crowded house, and cleared $48,80 as well as giving entire satisfaction to the audience.

The Temperance Picnic and District Lodge is being worked up by a joint committee of Angels and Murphy's Lodges, funds are secured, and plans matured to make it the event of the season.

Thursday lectured at Vallecito, secured several names for a lodge, and arranged to go back previous to D. L. to organize.

Saturday visited the lodge, about 60 present. Was pleased to see visitors from 5 different lodges. Murphys has over 90 members, is the banner lodge of the county and has called a special meeting for this evening to take measures to build a Hall on their own lot.

Brother L. D. canvassed for the RESCUE, and I urged the members to become readers and subscribers of our valuable paper. Several names were secured and others will follow, for Murphys will never do anything by halves.

Sunday went to Sheep Ranch addressed the S. S. and Band of Hope in the afternoon, and public meeting in the evening, the latter was slimly attended on account of rain.

Monday the Band of Hope had a public meeting, S. H. filled. The children did well, and seem enthusiastic. I addressed the Band for half an hour at the close of their exercises. These Bands of Hope are indeed the Hope of our country, and I hope to see every lodge in our State have a Band under its fostering care. Just think of 300 Bands of Hope, backed by 300 lodges, training an army of workers for God and humanity.

This ought to have appeared last week: but it stowed itself away among other documents and managed to escape, overlooked, as happens sometimes.

COULTERVILLE, April 22, 1881.

April 16, 17, and 18, we had "April showers," and accomplished nothing but getting wet.

On the 19th reached Groveland, next evening had a good meeting. The lodge is doing well, has the respect and good will of the people, and has done a good work.

The 21st reached Coulterville—held a Degree meeting—conferred both degrees on 5 members.

The 22nd held a public meeting in the dining room of Wagner's Hotel, kindly tendered by the owner for the purpose. I got several of the members to take part. The lodge turned out in regalia, and had their first "Open Lodge." It would be better to have more open meetings, and agitate the question of Temperance reform, instead of keeping up a sort of mutual admiration society, with closed doors. Coulterville lodge has over 50 members.

WM. CROWHURST.

BIGGS, Butte Co. April 23, 1881.

Franklin School District sustains a good lodge of earnest workers. The meeting was good and enthusiastic and resulted in the addition of eleven names to June Lodge.

Sheridan is blessed with a live Lodge, whose members have already closed several saloons, and are trying to close the only two now remaining. Eight persons were added to the membership as the result of the meeting. Bro. Cussler and the W. C. T. were playing ball on Monday, when the former in giving an under-handed throw, broke his arm.

After the Lecture a special meeting was held for exemplifying the degree work, and closed only after the adoption of a unanimous resolution to care for Bro. Cussler and to donate to him $5 per week, and also to subscribe the amount necessary to pay the Doctor's fee.

Wheatland was next visited. In the afternoon, we enjoyed a special meeting of the Band of Hope in the Methodist Church. In the evening, the Lodge marched in regalia from the Hall to the Church where we obtained 16 names. After the public meeting six candidates—among them Miss Ida Dunn of tragedy fame— were initiated by dispensation.

Twenty three miles by R. R. found us at Live Oak in the vicinity of a thriving Lodge of 93 members. Anxious to make an even hundred, we worked hard, for the audience was almost exclusively Good Templars, and procured the necessary addition and also added the first one toward the second hundred.

Seven miles further, we arrive at Gridley, Butte Co. Here the Lodge was taking a nap and wanted to die, having already voted to surrender its charter. In the Odd Fellows' Hall, the Good Templars own all the altars a beautiful quartz and shell frame, a lithograph of the Orphans' Home, an organ worth 250 dollars, plenty of excellent regalia etc., yet it wanted to die. But thank God new life was infused, 35 persons gave their names, and the Lodge was launched out on the Ocean of the great Temperance reform to struggle once more with the waves of Intemperance. God help it to win success

F. J. CULVER.

Having set forth to make a canvass of Sonoma Co. in the cause of temperance, and visit the lodges as G. L., I began work at Bloomfield by visiting the lodge Thursday 14th, lectured on Friday evening, and attended Harmony Degree Temple Saturday evening: but April showers had a dampening effect on the meetings. By request of Bro. Katzenstein, dropped all, and went to Tomales Monday 18th. Here one J. H. White had been at work lecturing and talking up a lodge, which I fully organized on Tuesday evening, assisted by Sister J. E. Fowler and Bro. Palmer of Valley Ford, with 12 charter members and 13 propositions for the next night. Lectured on Monday and Tuesday evenings With such staunch leaders as Prof. H. E. Kellogg and Prof. N. H. Lock, we look for a good work from this lodge. The field is a needy one: seven saloons and two stores which deal in the traffic of sin

There is but one professed Christian man in the town proper; there are some excellent families around Tomales. May God have mercy on and save the rising generation.

Here as elsewhere we quote section 300 of the Penal code. Did we as temperance people see that this section of law was enforced, we might with clearer conscience ask for local option, close saloons on Sunday and you close half of them forever. Thursday took in Two Rock, lectured in the hall. This lodge is well anchored. Bloomfield Friday had a fair audience; notified stores and bars to close on Sunday. They agreed so to do without suit. Went to Stony Point; had a pleasant meeting, found lodge in good condition, lectured in school house. This lodge meets on Wednesday instead of Tuesday evening as per RESCUE. Sunday morning drove to Valley Ford passed thru Bloomfield just to see and be seen; reached Valley Ford in time to visit Sunday-school and give them a short talk; lectured in the evening to a full house. Valley Ford is Valley Ford still; staunch for temperance and right. Leave for Bodega to-day,

M. D. MERRICK.

On Monday the 18th inst. I met a very pleasant congregation in West Oakland in the Congregational Church; the singing was most excellent and the meeting a very interesting one. On Tuesday evening I visited Golden Gate Lodge and enjoyed a very pleasant evening as visitors usually do, who call upon this orderly, and well conducted Lodge. On Wednesday I paid a visit to Kentucky Lodge; the attendance was small but the Lodge appears to be in a prosperous and healthy condition, and only needs a little good healthy work to fill up its pleasant Lodge room. Again on Friday the 22nd inst. met a fair audience in West Oakland, a social gathring at the home of one of the church people drew away a portion of those interested in the work; again the young people of the church favored us with good singing, helping to make the meeting a success. After the lecture a list of names was taken up for a Lodge and a night set for the organization. We will undoubtedly have a first class Lodge in West Oakland; some of the leading people of the church and neighborhood gave their names.

My first meeting in Martinez was well attended, and my lecture received with much apparent interest. On the second evening owing to a conflict of appointments there was a misunderstanding and many of the people did not attend that otherwise would have done so. My appointments, and the meeting of the Literary Club being upon the same evening the club kindly volunteered to postpone their usual exercises and invited me to deliver my Lecture before the society. The choir of the Congregational church sang for us and the meeting was a good one and I trust much aroused in the work. The members of the Lodge express a determination to revive the Lodge and a meeting was appointed for this afternoon for the purpose of instituting a Band of Hope. The work will go on in Martinez.

SANTA BARBARA District Lodge will meet in hall of Sea Side Lodge Santa Barbara at 10 A. M. May 4, 1881 and continue two days.

CURRENTS OF THE SEA.

NUMBER THREE.

MORE OF THE GULF STREAM.

There was very little positive information regarding the Gulf Stream fifty years ago. It was known there was a strong current in certain places and the water was warm; and few people knew that except some captains of whalers and merchants ships. But about all that is known of its extent and direction and depth and its peculiarities and uses, has been discovered within the past 30 or 35 years, and, as stated before, the information has been derived from the enquiring observations of intelligent seamen.

AN EXTENSIVE HEATER.

It seems a little singular that a non-conductor of heat should have been selected to conduct such an enormous volume of heat as the Gulf stream carries from the tropics to the regions of ice and snow. It is as well to repeat a statement previously made, that the surface water which has been warmed by the sun's rays and by actual contact with the heated air of the tropics, becomes salter and heavier by the evaporation of fresh water from it, and sinking beneath the surface carries its warmth below, and stores it up constantly, to be carried for distribution into a colder climate.

As this great, wide, deep, warm and rapid stream pursues its appointed "circuit" to the north, its surface is constantly coming in contact with a cooler air, which immediately appropriates a portion of its heat and distributes it in the surrounding atmosphere. Now as soon as that surface water has parted with a portion of its heat, it becomes heavier than the water immediately below it and down it goes to find its balance and a layer of lighter and warmer particles of water comes to the surface in its place, to yield to the air a portion of its warmth and sink in its turn with the rest, till it is called again to the surface to repeat the process.

The heat that thus daily escapes from this immense warming furnace, is carried by the prevailing winds to temper the climate of both continents, but principally that of Europe and the islands of the northern seas. It has been calculated that if all the heat delivered daily from the Gulf stream, could be concentrated upon an immense globe of iron, it would melt away from it a river of fluid metal as large as the Mississipi. But it is not very likely that in our time any body will try to reduce that theory to a practical test.

You will remember now that to enable the waters of the Gulf stream to perform these wonderful functions, water had to be invested with those very peculiar and singular properties before alluded to: there are some

CURIOUS PROVISIONS

Made possible by these peculiarities of water, to enable this stream to perform its duties faithfully. If the great current had been started as you and I would have arranged it, to flow in a deep river from the bottom to the surface, it would have been a failure. It would have been too narrow to give out the required heat from its surface, and the earth being a conductor of heat would have abstracted a certain portion of the heat from the lower waters. So a current of cold water underlies the Gulf Stream, running in an opposite direction which is 20 to 30 degrees colder than it. But in place of cooling it, that prevents the heat from passing from it.

Lieut. Maury supposes that had the Gulf Stream touched the bottom, all its heat would have been appropriated by the earth before it had gone far into the North Atlantic. But perhaps that was a mistake. The earth would have cooled the water next to it certainly, but when that water was cooled it would have remained at the bottom because of its greater weight and would have protected the warm waters above from contact with the bottom of the ocean, just as is the case now. It is probably the fact that the cold current underlies the other, to make the warm stream wider and enable it to distribute much more of its heat than it otherwise could. And it is also quite probable, that the properties with which the Creator invested water have been adapted to produce this condition of the currents as well as many other results.

TEMPERATURE OF THE STREAM.

It sets out with a temperature of about 90 degrees F: In the Caribean sea the surface stream is about 83 to 85 while the cold current underneath is about 43 degrees to 48 degrees. Off Hatteras it is 80 to 84 while the cold bed underneath is 55 to 50 — and from Hatteras to the Bank of Newfoundland or near it, the Gulf Stream is from 20 to 30 degrees warmer than the ocean on either side of it. The cold current west of it which lines the Eastern shore of North America is colder than the water east of the Gulf current. This cold bearing stream gives us a healthy and favorite resort for the best fish in the world; and it is the source of the fogs which abound there. The warm air passing over a cooler sea has its moisture condensed in fog; so as before stated, if we should ever cease on either side of the continent to have fogs, we shall cease to have as good fish as we have now.

While the Gulf current has been invested with the office of warming up Europe and tempering somewhat the American winters, the cold inshore fish and fog current has a most beneficent effect in tempering the heat of the Atlantic American summer and acts as a firescreen between our Eastern friends and the steaming heat burdened waters pasing by so close to their doors. But we have been wandering a little from the subject for the purpose of noting the wondrous system of adaptations and compensations, so ingeniously contrived to afford us the utmost possible amount of enjoyment and to furnish us with an unceasing variety of pleasurable circumstances and surroundings. And every thing is just enough and just right; an ice bearing current setting out every minute of the year from the North to carry coolness and health and comfort and good fishing ground to one large family of God's children, and another setting out every minute of the year from the equator loaded with wraps and blankets and warm breezes and fertilizing showers for another family of nations.

In my days of ignorance of these things, when facing the wintry storms off Cape Horn, it often seemed a kindness withheld that the Creator had not left us a nice little Ship Strait to go from Atlantic to Pacific by Panama, which he might have done as well as not; and that would have saved seafaring men a vast amount of dreary cruel cold and wet and storm and toil. But upon thinking over this matter of ocean currents, we must see that if a passage had been left thru the Isthmus, the Gulf Stream would have rushed thru there, torn for itself a roomy passage and carried with it its ample stores of heat and added them to the heat of the waters of the Pacific. The consequence of that would have been calamitous indeed; an arctic current filling the Atlantic; Britain and all of Northern Europe, would have been frozen desolate countries, peopled perhaps by Esquimaux. And the heat robbed from the North Atlantic and added to the North Pacific would have rendered our California and Pacific Coast from Panama to Oregon such an oven that it would have been probably uninhabitable without some special provision made by the Creator to avert that misfortune.

ABUSED TALENT.

"And I was afraid and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that which is thine." That verse turned up at random, recals to memory a little episode in South America that occurred several years ago. The negroes a few of them used to assemble on Sunday sometimes to hear for the first time in their lives, the reading of a few passages of Scripture and they were delighted with the parables. Some of them dropped a tear or two over the story of the prodigal Son. Not one of them could read a word and everything they heard was entirely new to them. They had heard of Peter and Paul and the Virgin Mary and some few saints who were mentioned in their prayers and who used to do lots of miracles. One of the more intelligent men recognized the name of Moses too; yes said he, I've have heard the priest mention him in the church service. Well what did he tell you about Moses? "oh I dont remember anything about him, only he was one of them that used to go round with Jesu-Cristo"

They listened with much interest to the parable of the talents, and talked about it and asked "what harm or crime did that man do?" what was he to be punished for? They could conceive of no such thing as being called to account for doing nothing, good or evil. But you can understand that when so much has been done for you, you owe a very binding obligation to do something in your turn to benefit others. You must remember that every privilege and comfort and liberty you enjoy, are not yours simply by natural right. Thru the evil doings of men, thru their avarice and greed and idolatry, intemperance and vice, the greater part of mankind in the past were deprived of their rights and privileges by tyrants of various types.

And the reason that you have more privileges and more light and a happier lot than the poor Spanish speaking Africans down there, is not that some great earthly prince or general conceded those rights, but because a good many humble men that had but one talent, used it for their fellow men and for their Master, and proclaiming liberty and the truth and the gospel, suffered many sacrifices and persecutions and poured out their blood on many a battle field and gave up their lives by thousands—— that you and I who came after them might be free and happy. Had those men buried their talents in the earth, we should have had to submit to a slavish lot or else we should have been the martyrs for the benefit of those who come after us.

Now as we are by no means called upon to suffer imprisonment or stripes or death for the truth's sake, are we not doubly bound to use our one or two or five talents to rid the world of the greatest monster evil that has ever existed? a tyrant that is making a daily trail of blood and tears and agonies and miseries all over this beautiful land that God has given us.

Let us remember then to keep our talent above ground and in use. It will be a sad reckoning, if we have to confess at last that we never tried to do any good in this world or to make it better, in return for all that has been done for us.

GUERNEVILLE, April, 16, 1881.

EDITOR RESCUE.—Complying with your expressed wish in your paper of April 10th we have been requested by the Supt. to forward to you, the program of the exercises of our Temple at the regular session on last evening. There were 29 members in attendance, 10 boys, and 17 girls, and two honorary members. There was service at the church during the same evening. At roll call every officer was present. Three active members were initiated. Two delegates were elected to represent the Temple at the District Lodge, at Geyserville May, 13, 1881. At recess, a social time was enjoyed, and a few charades were played and guessed. Afterwards for "Good of the Order" there were declamations by some of the young members. Two short dialogues were rehearsed, several taking part-in each. A number of songs were sung by the girls, they playing the organ themselves. We then had our exercise in the Catechism, Select Reading from the RESCUE by the Supt. and a short address by the other honorary member present. The "Royal Road" was distributed, and the Temple closed in due form ending a short but pleasant session. We intend having our Temperance Camp Meeting this year and we sincerely hope you will pay us a visit. Hoping this will meet your approval, we remain very Respectfully, In F. L. and P.

OUR FIRST TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.

FOR THE SUPERINTENDENTS

BY JULIA COLMAN.

The ground and the circumstances were imposing. A little inland conservative place in one of the Eastern States, where everything possible had been done for temperance; the worst place in the world to try to do anything (that is what any place says of itself) and it was "of no use to try any more." This was what the most intelligent, enterprising of the temperance citizens said. Their actions kept pace with their words, for they did nothing. Several organizations had gone down. The three evangelical ministers still worked on, and by uniting their forces and taking turns in their churches, they kept up a monthly temperance sermon with a fair audience. These ministers had tried the previous year to have the women start a Christian Temperance Union, and had advertised a meeting for that purpose. At the appointed time three women came, looked at one another and went away without even praying together. Now the women had commenced praying in a house to have prayer meeting, but had not organized nor taken up any active work; two of them, however, were agreed as touching the juvenile work. One of these was a summer visitor, and nearly a stranger in the place; the other a missionary to India lately returned home on account of failing health. These two canvassed the situation and promised each other that they would undertake a juvenile union on the educational plan, and they would keep it up as long as they could get two children to attend.

It was an experiment neither of them had seen tried, but they believed that ignorance of the true nature and effects of alcohol lay at the foundation of most of the difficulties in the way of temperance work. Children are naturally on the right side and have more time to study than adults, and can be more easily influenced, Besides, if educated before beginning to drink, they can usually be prevented from going astray, and prevention is ever better than cure. It is easier and better to prevent a dozen children from going astray than to rescue one man that has gone astray. The movement to get temperance science taught in the day schools had not yet commenced, and if it had, public sentiment was not sufficiently advanced in that place to adopt it. Besides, they wished to teach the moral duty of doing in order to give effect to the knowing, which is much more easily done in the temperance school than in the secular school.

They had not all the helps now in existence, but they had enough to begin with: the catechism on alcohol, Band of Hope melodies, some of the present list of children's tracts, Story on Alcohol and Sewall's Charts. Specimens of these (excepting the charts) they secured as one of the first steps, so that they might know what to teach and how to teach it: and when they had formed their plans they set to work.

They first influenced and enlisted as many as they could of the day school teachers and Sunday- hool officers and teachers, having the ministers already on their side. The principal of the academy kindly offered them the academy chapel to meet in. This was no small advantage, because no one of the churches would have been quite acceptable to the children from the other churches, and to rotate between them would have been little better. Then they appointed a public meeting also in the chapel, at which they secured the best speakers they could find to explain what they proposed to do; had excellent music, a few recitations by the children; then a neat experiment or two, illustrating some of the truths they intended to teach, brief remarks from two or three leading citizens or ministers chiefly to the parents, closing up with a distribution of the best tract they could find on the educational aspect of the question, and an invitation to the parents to send their children to the temperance school.

Then Saturday afternoon was fixed for the meeting of the children to organize the school. All the Sunday-schools and day-schools were visited, and the children specially invited. When the time came the chapel was filled, for the chemical experiments that were promised formed an attractive program. Catechisms were given out in which they all read the first lesson as a responsive exercise. The experiments were satisfactory, but many cared for nothing else: and as no teachers had been secured for the classes, or rather not teachers enough, especially for the older boys, they soon dropped off in the course of two or three talks. Here then was the first great mistake, the lack of teachers. This idea of having the scholars classified with a teacher for each class like a Sunday-school was new, and was not met with sufficient appreciation. This failure was an impressive lesson, and henceforth it became a prime idea that teachers were quite as essential in the temperance school as in the Sunday-school, to keep the children in order, see that they are supplied with books, to hear their lessons and look after their attendance and to exercise over them a wise personal influence; but they are not obliged to explain and illustrate the lesson. That is more largely left to the superintendent's review, the principal lesson work of the teacher being to see that it is perfectly committed to memory.

But this mistake made by many other temperance schools did not quite kill us, what else we did and what other lessons we taught and learned we will detail in other numbers of the RESCUE by the editor's kindly permission.

ABOUT PARIS.

You have heard about the gaieties and gardens and picture galleries and tasteful ornamentations of the city of Paris; how it is a favorite pleasure resort of wealthy English and Americans, who go to see the sights and enjoy the festivities. There are a great many Americans who have fallen so desperately in love with Parisian life, that they leave their own country and the few friends they ever had, and go to live among a foreign people whose language they understand very imperfectly, and speak as barbarously as a Chinese washman speaks English. All their customs and habits are different from ours, and about all the characteristics of our American Protestant civilization that our good people have valued and gloried in, are lacking in Paris. The American people have bartered all the social advantages of their glorious American birthright for the association of a worthless mess of French tinsel politeness, and painted vanities and gilded infidelities and immoralities. And it is safe to hazard the supposition that these Americans live there at a sacrifice of personal comfort and happiness, and at open sale of all their patriotism, for that empty bauble, the distinction of being talked about as living in Paris, which indicates the possession of wealth. This does seem a sacrifice of taste and comfort for a very lean and shaky-kneed reward.

But what a history has this Paris of blood and crime and poverty and misery, a family group that always huddles close and thick about a wine or beer shop, and Paris has above all places in the world been a wine-shop.

To say nothing of the massacres that have taken place there in ancient times, and down to 1848 and 1851, there have been some later appalling scenes of murderous cruelty, the result of the crime and ignorance that comes from the grogshop and the wine cellar. In 1871, at the close of the war which France had forced upon Prussia, the communists, the natural spawn of the wine shop, captured and shot all the Catholic priests they could lay hands on, including a venerable archbishop. They shot them at Belleville, a suburb of Paris like our Lone Mountain, and soon after 500 communists were shot there by their own government, and thousands more were sent to prison and to exile.

An English lady, a Miss De Broen opened a mission in this most degraded section of Paris in 1871, only a few hours after the burial of the 500 communists alluded to. At first she was received with suspicion, but later has met with much success and her mission now has grown to expend $10,000 a year in rescuing the victims of the iniquitous barbarism of a government which licenses the grogshop, and of a church which always adapts itself there to the existing condition of morality, or to its utter absence.

These poor people are utterly ignorant of any religious or moral teaching; the wine shop and the dance house had always been their church, Sunday-school, day school, library and home. Think of a polluted system of government which produces such hoards of criminals, that a war which sends thousands of them to be slain in battle or an insurrection in which thousands of them are mowed down by artillery in the street is a blessing to the country. And while you think of it, consider how in this beautiful land of flowers and luscious fruit and sunshine and bounteous provision of every good gift of God, we have gone a good way in the same direction, and have permitted a terrible leprosy of drunken sin to spread itself and poison our own people, and convert them into savages and criminals that have to be kept in prison to make life at all safe any where in the state.

When our Band of Hope children come to vote, they will not vote to continue this consuming evil, will they?

"THE ELEPHANT IS LOOSE!"

"The elephant is loose! the elephant is loose!" Such was the cry that we heard from the boys in the streets one day. Everybody seemed to be under excitement; parents were hurrying home to see if their children were out in the streets, and if so, to hunt them up and send them home; or if in the house, to keep them there.

At the menagerie we found a great crowd of people, in the midst of whom was the mayor with a company of soldiers with their guns loaded, while at the front and rear entrances of the building were stationed two six-pounders loaded with grape-shot. It appeared from what we could learn that the great elephant Columbus had attacked his keeper, and so severely injured him that he shortly afterward died of his wounds. For a long while the keepers of the wild beasts were unable to subdue the raging animal, and there was, consequently, great danger of his getting out into the streets, and doing much damage to life and property; therefore, the mayor was sent for, and the cannons were loaded and placed before the door. This was a wise and humane precaution. But how many elephants are loose every day! How many roam about the streets destroying the souls as well as the lives of people; and before how many stores in our cities might loaded cannon be placed to protect the lives of our citizens from worse than death!

There ought to be a cannon before those theatres; for out of them comes an evil influence ten times worse than a whole menagerie of wild beasts let loose.

There ought to be a cannon before the billiard-room; for there is an elephant there that destroys hundreds every year.

And more than all, there ought to be a cannon before every rumshop and drinking-saloon; for there is an elephant there, and his wounded victims may be seen at all times about our streets, and dying in thousands of our homes,

Boys, yea, girls too—for the elephant destroys girls as well boys—look out, the elephant is loose. Seek to get the cannons loaded, for they are needed. Until that is done, keep out of the way, avoid the place where he frequents.

GREAT.—"For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord and shall drink neither wine nor beer, and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost." And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God." The word beer is used here, because that is the way the French Bible Society have translated it and it appears to be correct.

It seemed as if the Angel deemed John's total abstinence of immense importance, for it was the only qualification mentioned in connection with being great in the sight of the Lord and being filled with the Holy Ghost. If the Angel had said in place of that expression about wine "and shall shave his head once a week all his life" we should have had to this day devout men shaving their heads by the thousand as a necessary condition of being considered great in the sight of the Lord and filled with the Holy Spirit.

SAN FRANCISCO April 21th 1881.

Left home for Walnut Creek on Saturday morning April 16th, and as no posters had been received at Walnut Creek no meeting had been called, but by kindness of Rev. Bro. Urmy we had a small meeting on Sunday evening, though the night was very stormy, and the roads almost impassable; at the close of the address I announced a short address on Monday evening; at that time we had a fair audience, and at the close, five names were obtained as candidates for the Lodge of Good Templars of Walnut Creek, and the Lodge meeting immediately after the lecture in the church, three of the candidates were initiated, and several other names are promised for the next meeting, I left in proper hands a few Rituals, and Badges, for the organization of a Band of Hope, and expect to hear very soon of its formation, at that place, which I believe will be very useful among the children and youth of the town, and prove a great help to the Good Templars, if they encourage it, and lend it their aid, and work with it and for it,

Several reports reached my office of New Bands of Hope being organized since I left home, which will be properly noticed in due time.

Yours Fraternally.

DEAD LODGES.

Bro. Crowhurst reports a Lodge that has a good set of furniture and a $250 Organ, but had died for want of any interest in the cause of temperance. No wonder, it was the old story; the lodge had never had or used a page of temperance literature, never learned anything, never taught anything, never had any temperance in it. It would be just so with Churches if somebody went round organizing them and only visiting them about once a year, to set them on end after they had fallen over, with no literature, no books, no papers, no instructions, no intercourse with or news from, the other churches. It is a sad thing to see so many lodges that have material that could be made a power and a light and an ornament to their community, and a bright star among the good and noble influences of the land, maintaining a sickly and purposeless existence on songs and solos, dramatic performances, pound parties, necktie parties and sometimes dancing parties with never any work for temperance: as many members suspended every quarter as are initiated and having no influence whatever in giving their community a bias toward temperance.

One of the lodges which is mentioned in the report of the G. W. S. this week as having at present one of the largest memberships, lately sent a communication to the Rescue; it was addressed "Publishers of Weekly Rescue, Los Angeles," and reached Los Angeles about five weeks after the date of the document. It reported a death but forgot to say who it was or when it took place.

Local Option was beaten in that community about 2 to 1 in 1874, and probably would be beaten there to-day 6 to 1; and with such a lodge working in the interest of temperance, the whisky interest might soon be outvoted 6 to 1. but it never will be any better from pound parties and dramatic and banjo agency.

When a lodge or a Grand Lodge finds in its quarterly reports that even as much as ten per cent of its membership has gone out in a year, or that half as many have gone out as came in, it ought to waken up to realize the fact that there is a terribly rotten cause somewhere to account for it, and one that could be remedied or prevented, with proper precaution; a great many lodges have been and are dead from their organization right along.

THE PRESIDENT'S PROMISE.

President Garfield has committed himself to a tremendously comprehensive promise made to Miss Willard and to the American people. He said "I shall do what I can to abate the evils of intemperance." It would have been much more manly and creditable to him, had his whole speech on that occasion been such as one side or the other could have accepted as conclusively favorable to it. If he is really favorable to total abstinence. he ought to be manly enough to avow it before the world. Had the promise above been omitted, his utterance might have been conclusively accepted as favorable to the rum interest. But the promise is difficult to get over, altho the opening incidents of his administration are by no means consonant with that promise. It is reported that Secy Windom has thrown the gates wide open for the slaughter of the Alaska Indians with rum heretofore prohibited. And that the order (No 24) of President Hayes prohibiting the sale of liquor at military posts has been peremptorily repealed, and it does not seem that any one could have done that but the President. If these two acts are those of President Garfield, he has done all he could in them to extend and increase the evils of intemperance, and he will no doubt continue to do so all thru while pretending the contrary. But perhaps these are not his work, let us see. There is one thing it is hoped he dare not do, that is reopen the White House as a grogshop: for if he did, he would incur the contempt and execration of all good people everywhere. And if the presidential mansion remains clean in that respect we shall be solely indebted to Mr and Mrs Hayes for it.

R. W. G. L.

This body is to convene in a very few weeks but in none of the temperance papers has there been a hint of any desired or desirable action, or any action at all to come before it. It does not seem that any one takes the slightest interest in anything that is to be done there, and it is very doubtful whether there is any business proposed beyond a contest for office. It would be one useful act in all the history of the R. W. G. L. if it would this time countenance the systematizing of the National Thanksgiving Collection for a temperance literature fund. If it would even assent to establish that it would be better work and more of it than all its labors combined for the past 10 years have resulted in. In fact it would be about the first act that has at all helped the cause of temperance that can be credited to it for many years past. After the above was written a circular came from from the R. W. G. S. which promises that important measures are to be adjudicated at this session. If that is so it will be matter for sincere rejoicing to all concerned. For the R. W. G. L. ought either to do something this time or confess that is a corpse and bury itself out of the way of some useful leading institution which is so much needed at present by the I. O. G. T. and for want of which their continued existence has been for some years placed in deadly peril.

Mr. J. G. Mysell 1643 Mission St. has published a tract leaflet called Danger Signals, containing an article which appears under that head in the Rescue of April 7th first page–price $1.50 per 1000. It treats of the relations of the grogshop to the Fraternal societies.

SOLANO DISTRICT LODGE.

Suisun, April 24th 1881.

Solano District Lodge I. O. G. T. will meet on Saturday May 14th at Elmira for general business and on preceding evening for public meeting. It is specially desirable to have every Lodge in the county represented.

We entreat your Lodge to send a full delegation, matters of more than ordinary interest require attention at that meeting. For the sake of our Order and its cardinal principle do not merely appoint some formal delegates that will not go. But send down live members, more than the legal number will be welcome. We want concerted action on our Sunday law matters, come all who can and let us make a new consecration of our lives to the cause of temperance.

Yours in F. H. C. and Work.
W. H. Robinson D. D. G. W. C. T.

Other matter in type is excluded to make room for the above; it is suggested to Bro. R. that it is not at all likely any lodge In Solano county will hear of the District lodge, unless he writes to them directly or visits them personally.

The Kansas Methodist says that a preacher at Laurence Kansas gives notice that he and his bishop and clergy will pay no attention to the law which may interfere with the law and usage of his church as to wine at the sacrament. The laws of the state have said nothing about that matter, but if any church is going to fight the anti-dramshop law of Kansas, that state will be much better off religiously and every other way if it packs up and leaves with the rummies.

Temperance Picnic.—The third annual grand temperance picnic will be held at Tammany Grove, Davisville, Saturday, April 30th. The Ellis Cornet and String Band of Woodland have been engaged. The literary program will be announced hereafter, also excursion trains. B. H. Hoag, Manager.

Sugar Is Down.—By the barrel we now sell extra fine cube 11½cents; extra granulated 10¾ cents; golden C., 9½cents; coffee very cheap by the bag. All goods at wholesale, at lowest rates. Send for special price list. San Francisco grocery 519 Post street, San Francisco, Cal.

California Raisins are said by the N. Y. Sun to be as yet not higher than a sixth quality in Malaga, but the producers here are improving, and may overcome all objections. The Sun has evidently experimented on a very poor lot of California raisins.

Mr. G. A. Halsey who needs no other recommendation than that of being a brother of the model Treasurer of the G. L. is on a tour in some of the southern counties of the state and will receive subscriptions or ads for the Rescue.

El Paso wants 500 Mexican troops to protect its people from the outlaws there: the removal of the grogshops would do that a great deal better and cheaper.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE.

John B. Finch G. W. C. T. of Nebraska says in the Western World that as a citizen he will work, talk, write and vote for woman suffrage, because he believes that all governments should be founded on the consent of the governed; and he would vote for it as a matter of justice even if he knew a majority of women would vote against prohibition. But as G. W. C. T. he advocates working for prohibition as the chief end with which no side issue must interfere. He continues under the heading.

BEER HOGS.

"The lager beer guzzlers and Germans of Grand Island, Neb., have an organization called the "Sons of Liberty," whose platform is, "To defend the people against the encroachments of woman suffrage and temperance." The woman suffrage fight seems thus early to be taking the shape of the bloated lager beer foreigners against American women.

The idea is one that must make every American's blood tingle. America welcomes to her arms the down-trodden of all nations. These beer bloats came to this country outcasts and were received with open arms, dressed in purple and fine linen and given the ballot. Now they turn around and attack our mothers and sisters and organize to prevent them from having their rights. "Sons of Liberty," indeed. Why did they not establish liberty in their own country? If they know better than Americans how to run a government of the people and for the people, why is the land of their birth a despotism? The question whether a few thousand Germans shall control Nebraska is rapidly pushing its way into Nebraska politics."

There is no more comprehensive commentary on beer than is written in its effects on the Germans who use and deal in it. The sober cultured respectable honest "natural" German is as different a being from his beer debauched denaturalized countryman as two human beings can differ. But drink has after all about an equal dehumanizing effect upon all classes.

INSANE.

The Medical Society in session last week in this city listened to a report on the insanity of the state. There were 2254 insane and 333 idiots chargeable to the state of California at last census or one to every 383 of the population. At the preceding census it was one to 470. It was a comforting fact that in Britain it was one to 300. Dr. Wilkins stated that it was a remarkable fact that one-third of our insane are natives of Europe; most of these are peasants who were used to vegetable diet at home, and here eat animal and richer food to excess. These things he says go far to account for our greater proportion of insane than they have in other states; altho the excitements of stock gambling and other speculations were prolific causes.

A prominent physician in Sacramento said publicly in 1874 that 75 per cent of the insanity of this state was due to intemperance. The fact that natives of Europe contribute one-third of our insane patients is anything but a remarkable fact to an impartial observer, for every body knows they furnish by far the largest number of drunken men and women.

To give reasons for increase of insanity and omit the great prominent, overshadowing factor of insanity on this coast and in this world, is a disingenuous act, discreditable to any society and particularly to such a one as the State Medical Society. A paper on early Diagnostic Signs of Locomotor Atoxia, was of more importance. And a long list of toasts at a banquet in the evening accounted for the failure of the medical voice to whisper a word as to the real, but beloved and fashionable feeder of our insane asylums.

"We do not care to continue the RESCUE any longer. We have so many papers to read that we can't do them all. S———" Yes; and every one of those "papers" says, let the rum traffic go on unimpeded, and mark out this year and every year 100,000 of the children of this country for perdition here and hereafter; and every one that does so receives your sympathy and patronage.

A SUPPLY of all the works of the N. T. Society are now for sale at the RESCUE office at New York prices of course; will be sent post paid by return mail if ordered. Same are also to be had at 1041 Market St. See ad.

GOOD WORDS FROM AFAR.

The following is extracted from a private letter from a friend in Minnesota, who has remained all these years as warm and true a friend, as when we last met and parted in our schooldays

* * * "But our labor is not in vain. The great triumph is not far off, one by one the forts are being taken. It is not a war that is to end in a day, we are fighting, like the fathers of the revolution; for the generations that shall follow us. I am doing a little work in the way of tract distributing; I sent for 4000 and have them all placed and intend to send for 5000 more, which is as many as I will find time to place now. I am convinced that tracts may be made a power in temperance work. They are silent educators. They have always been used in every great reform, Luther, Wesley and Neal Dow made great use of tracts. I believe that in the present condition of the public mind, if prohibition were made an issue of any state election, with one thousand dollars worth of tracts on that question I could carry the state.

I find men everywhere eager to read my tracts, even in the saloons they are thankfully received. I went into a saloon the other evening where there were about fifty young men to whom I gave each a tract, and when I got to the door to go out, I turned around and saw every one reading; Went out to the R.R. Shops the other day where there are about four hundred men at work; every one looked for a tract and looked disappointed if passed by. The public mind seems hungering for something on the subject. Beer is our greatest foe, men have been led to regard it as a harmless drink, but it is the great feeder of intemperance; we need to agitate Prohibition, fill mens minds with thoughts on that subject; the more they think about it, the more they understand it, and so it is the only way: Strike at the root of the tree; as to the question of local option, where prohibition can not be had at present, I think it wise to accept local option; a half loaf is better than none.

One thing we have to overcome, is, the want of faith in so many men who really wish well to temperance: but the daring of the christian women, and their prayers and faith, will, I believe accomplish what faithless men would not dare attempt. If there is anything that tries my patience it is these faithless men, cowardly do nothings. Christianity is a cumulative force, and because it has not yet destroyed the works of the Devil, men despair of its final triumph; but I have faith in its great founder. He came not to this work on a speculation, to try an experiment; He came to accomplish a certain work, and His Eternal Godhead is pledged to its success. All temperance workers are fighting under His banner and why should any man doubt, we may fall in the ranks, but God will have a man ready to take our place.

I rejoice to know that we are workers together with Him who inspires us all. I am but a very humble worker indeed, but if I can hold up but one of the hands of any Moses, while he prays, or am "but an armor bearer," "surely the captain may depend on me." * * * A. D. D.

THE ORPHAN.

An orphanage started in India during the famine by the Rev.C. B. Ward of Chicago. (M. E. Ch. missionary) with four native orphans rescued from starvation, increased the number of its inmates to 116 after losing by death 58 of the little skeletons they had gathered. The institution was begun and is carried out on the "faith principle;" that is 1. Having no funds, but taking the children, asking God to send the means of their sustenance 2. Believing fully that God will provide for his children and answer the prayer of faith. Muller's Orphanage in Bristol, England, with 2000 inmates, and several others have been similarly maintained with great success. There are scientists and skeptics and some who don't confess either science or skepticism, who explain these successes otherwise, and laugh at any such outcome as an answer to prayer for the children who have no parent but God; whoever laughs that way may just as well laugh to scorn the idea of there being a God at all, and say it out openly. Prove that faith groundless, and away goes the whole fabric of the Christian religion. Some one will say, why don't they run the Good Templars' Home for Orphans that way then? Because the Good Templars and the State, or either of them are able to run it themselves. And a society or individual who can spare enough means to provide for 100 orphans, and tries to pray down a maintenance for them, would be very lucky if they raised one biscuit a month by that means.

CALL OF THE NATIONAL TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

The National Temperance Society appeals to churches and benevolent individuals for funds to help carry on its increasing and important missionary operations.

Contributions are not solicited for its book department, which under careful and economical management, sustains itself.

The missionary work in which the Society is engaged, and for which it solicits donations, is as follows:

1. The Society greatly needs funds to pay for the large amount of tracts, pamphlets, books, etc., which are daily called for, and greatly needed, by colleges, churches, hospitals, asylums, prisons; for missionary schools in cities and missionary stations throughout the country; for the army and navy, and for destitute regions all over the land, to quicken the public conscience, awaken a new interest, and to inform and inspire all classes in the community.

2. For salaries of our District Secretaries, of whom we have two at present, one of them a resident for a time at Washington, in order to secure from Congress a Commission of Enquiry into the results of the alcoholic liquor-traffic, and who has this special matter in charge. This work has been prosecuted for several years, at a cost of thousands of dollars, with but few donations to help meet the expense. Money is also needed for the printing and circulation of petitions, holding conferences, and to meet other expenses legitimately belonging to this branch of the work. Another Secretary, whose field of operations is the Middle States, with headquarters in Philadelphia, is engaged in the special work of preaching in churches, addressing Sabbath-schools and children's gatherings, visiting religious bodies and temperance organizations, holding conventions and mass-meetings. The Corresponding Secretary of the Society, who is also the Publishing Agent, has no salary as Secretary, and his salary as Agent is paid from the business department of the Society.

3. The increasing calls for tracts and documents for the Freedmen which come to us from all parts of the South are importunate and pressing. With but few preachers, lecturers, or societies for temperance, and with ignorance of the whole question, together with growing habits of intemperance, the appeal comes with tenfold more force, and ought not to go unanswered. We ask for, and need at once, the sum of $5,000 for immediate use in this direction.

Urgent appeals come from conferences, schools, churches, ministers, and people in the South to send Gospel temperance speakers to start them in the right direction and visit the principal centres of influence and population. We have the men already to send if we had the money for this purpose. Who will furnish it?

We are making a strong effort to introduce temperance lesson-books into our public schools, that the youth of the land may be educated in the physiological facts pertaining to alcohol and its effects upon the human system. This is such an important work, involving, as it does, so much prejudice, ignorance, and opposition to be overcome, that meetings and conferences must be held, and a vast amount of preliminary work must be done. Books for examination must be given away to many parties and in many localities, and very much other necessary work, before much can be accomplished. All this takes much time and labor, which costs money, but which will bring great good to the cause of morals and temperance in the end. Money is imperatively needed or the work will languish and die for want of proper support.

For these and many other reasons we ask for liberal contributions and donations to the increasing missionary work of the National Temperance Society. There is no cause of Christian effort more worthy of support and co-operation. Will you help?

Wm. E. Dodge, President; J.N. Stearns, Corresponding Secretary; H. B. Spellman, Treasurer; T. L. Cuyler, Chairman Executive Coumittee; Peter Carter, Chairman Publication Committee; Albert G. Lawson, Chairman Finance Committee.

THE LADY readers of the RESCUE are informed that the Signal published by Mrs. Mary B. Willard, Chicago, only $1.50 a year, weekly, same size and form as the RESCUE, is a first-class, very interesting and very able journal. Send for a sample copy of "Signal," 148 Madison St., Chicago, or better, send a year's subscription, and you will have a most welcome weekly visitor.

SACRAMENTAL WINE.

NUMBER THREE.

Various writers and travelers and biblical scholars and antiquaries in Europe, of 80 to 200 years ago, when this question was not in dispute, wrote freely not only of the sweet and unfermented wines of the ancients, but the practice of their own time common in Italy, Greece, Syria, Judea, and even Southern France. They noted too, that the old customs still prevailed, and travelers' reports were to that effect invariably. But now-a-days, when the wine or the Bible has to go down before public opinion, we find several travelers, some of them even reverends, who make a flying trip to the East, stay all night in Syria, and then ostentatiously proclaim that there never was any wine in all time made or known or used except fermented, intoxicating, "mocker" wine. It would be quite as truthful for them to assert as one Richard Carlyle did in the preface of a pretended exposure of Masonry, that there was no reliable evidence whatever that a nation of Jews ever existed. But if the Bible is true, and the lessons of the history of the past fifty years are true, and if we may trust the evidences of our own daily observation, as collected in the utterances of the press, of an occasional pulpit, of our public men in the political and judicial field, it is pretty certain that no human being, whatever his natural honesty of purpose may be, if he has the habit of deranging his whole physical system, and especially demoralizing his brain power by the daily use of that most effective mocker and deceiver, wine, is capable of arriving at a correct judgment upon any subject in which that wine or kindred drink is on trial. Any two ministers, two teachers, two lawyers, two justices of the peace, two judges of the Supreme court, two vice presidents of the U. S., two policemen or two bishops, one of each two being a total abstainer, and the other either a moderate or hearty drinker of brain-destroying wine or beer, and being in education and all other respects equal as near as may be in public reputation—have about every time for the past fifty years delivered precisely opposite opinions, declarations, judgments, rulings and legal decisions on every phase and issue and movement in which the drink question was directly or indirectly at stake. And they have interpreted the Bible and all other law differently every time, and do to-day.

It is almost the same with those who use tobacco; scarcely one who uses it is capable of forming a correct judgment of its effect until it has about destroyed him.

It is suggested here that the abstainer has no possible personal interest in the success of his argument; no gain, or reward present or prospective; no private taste or prejudice to gratify; no ambition to reach, except that of benefiting others—no possible reason for hiding or perverting the truth. The other party cannot claim this.

It is but a short time since this question, what is the proper sacramental fruit of the vine, was first raised. The Christian world was almost a unit in the use of intoxicating wine long after the American temperance movement began. Somewhere about 1845 some temperance church members in Scotland were excluded from the church roll and baptism was refused to their children because at the the communion table they passed the cup of defilement without tasting it. The church authorities who committed this outrage no doubt did so under a conscientious belief they were doing their solemn duty; the fact is here adduced to show the abhorence in which the Scottish church most justly and properly held the idea of substituting something on the communion table for what they believed to be the proper element. If their premises were right, their action toward the offending parties is here commended.

But all the time the fact that the intoxicating wine is itself a monstrous and uncalled for substitution of a most unholy element for an emblem of purity in a religious ceremony, has become more generally known, and just as the question is argued down goes the old system. The new gains all the time, and never loses one; the old loses all the time and never gains one.

Why should not all churches act in unison and sift this matter thoroly and come to a consistent decision? As an instance of the careless indifference with which many people have regarded the subject the following anecdote is given: In 1877 or 8, John B. Gough lectured in New Brunswick: included in the "everybody" who listened to him was a Methodist D. D., a distinguished teacher and college professor; a Greek and Hebrew scholar from his youth up, and a life total abstainer. At the close of the lecture he said: "well I never believed before this evening that it was wrong to use fermented wine in the communion, but I do now." The reason was, he had never examined the matter.

It seems appropriate to quote here from a letter of the Rev. L. I. Sweeney to the Kansas Methodist just received. Mr. S. is a member of the East Ohio conference.

"No one can prove that Christ used fermented wine at this sacrament. The evidences are to the contrary. The sacrament was instituted at Passover, and with the very bread and cup of that feast. The law of the Passover was, "Seven days shall there be no leaven found in your houses." Neither the wine nor the bread could have been fermented under this law. The word wine does not occur in the whole New Testament in any mention of the symbol in this sacrament; The expressions as to the symbol of blood are these: "the fruit of the vine" three times; "the cup" five times, "this cup" twice; "that cup" once; "the cup" once. "this cup of blessing" once; "this cup of the Lord," once. The word wine does not once occur. The cup contains the "fruit of the vine." The unfermented grape juice comes by a process of vegetable growth, and is the fruit of the vine. But alcoholic wine does not come by a process of growth, but by a process of decay, and is not the fruit of the vine. Now if any preachers in Kansas administer the sacrament unscripturally, and thus violate the wholesome law of their state, let them suffer the penalty of the law.

Miss Willard, one of God's chiefest apostles is on a crusade in the Southern States, and is magnificently welcomed. Bro. James G. Thrower, G. W. S. and P. G. W. C. T. of Georgia sends the following:

ATIANTA, Ga. April 13, 1881.

Dear Sir and Brother:—I write to tell you of the success of Miss Frances E. Willard President W. C. T. U. in this city. On Sunday last she spoke three times . In the morning at the Northern Methodist Church, afternoon at Wenona Temple, cold water Templars. Scores of people were turned away from this meeting being unable even to get standing room. The temple itself, one of the most successful and popular temperance societies in the state, never has failed to fill the hall in any of its public meetings in the eleven years it has been working; but on this occasion the crowds pressing for admission were unusually large. At night Trinity M. E. church South was packed to its uttermost capacity to listen to the talented Christian woman. As she concluded her speech, Georgia's Christian Governor came forward and was presented to her by Rev. M. Height, the pastor. Then turning to the audience he paid one of the grandest tributes ever listened to from man to fellow mortal, and every heart of that vast throng responded, "God bless our noble Governor. Amen and amen."

On Monday night one of the largest and most intelligent and most fashionable audiences ever assembled to listen to a lecture, assembled at the Opera House, to drink in the inspired words as they fell from the lips of the gifted speaker. Only once or twice the magnetic spell was broken sufficiently to allow an applause. Ah, no language of mine can express her power over this people. Every barrier has been broken down and scores converted to temperance. Sister W left Tuesday for Mobile, Ala; will return in about a week; will let you know the result.

The offer for three months' subscription to this paper at 50 cts., is of course continued, and will be extended from now till 1st of July.

THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

Give me of every language first my vigorous English,
Stored with imported wealth, rich in its natural mines,
Worthy of poet's song, fit for the speech of man,
Thou hast the sharp, clean edge and the downright blow of the Saxon;
Thou the majestical march and the stately pomp of the Latin;
Thou the euphonious swell, the rhythmical roll of the Greek;
Thine is the elegant suavity caught from sonorous Italian;
Thine the chivalric obeisance, the courteous grace of the Norman;
Thine the Teutonic German's inborn guttural strength.
Now clear, pure, hard, bright, and one by one like to hail-stones,
Short words fall from his lips fast as the first of a shower;
Now in a twofold column, spondee, iamb and trochee,
Unbroke, firm-set, advance, retreat, trampling along;
Now with a sprightlier springiness bounding in triplicate syllables
Dance the elastic dactylics in musical cadences on;
Now their voluminous coil intertangling like huge anacondas
Roll overwhelmingly onward the sesquipedalian words.
Therefore it is that I praise thee, and never can cease from rejoicing,
Thinking that good stout English is mine and my ancestors' tongue;
Give me its varying music, the flow of its free modulation—
I will not covet the full roll of the glorious Greek,
Luscious and feeble Italian so formal and stately,
French with its nasal lisp, nor German inverted and harsh;
Nor while our organ can speak with its many and wonderful voices,
Play on the soft lute of love, blow the loud trumpet of war,
Sing with the high sesquialto, or, drawing its full diapason,
Shake all the air with the grand storm of its pedals and stops,

CLUBS.

Attention is requested to the offer of premiums for clubs, found elsewhere in this paper. The Encyclopedia offered is a reprint of Chambers Encyclopedia complete, in nonpareil type, size 6⅛by 5 inches, 15 volumes 830 pages each, bound in cloth. The Library of Universal Knowledge is also 15 Volumes 9⅛by6¼ inches 900 pages each, in good clear brevier type, and is a handsome well printed book: contains all of the encyclopedia above and American additions,said to be altogether about 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's.

These works should be of inestimable value to every Lodge: give full information upon almost every subject or question that can be raised: they form a nucleus for a complete library, and will give the members a stimulus for the acquisition of useful information. Either of the two supplies the reading material that used to cost quite lately, $50 to $90 but the latter is the fullest and best printed and is recommended as the best choice.

In addition to the premiums offered elsewhere, for a club of 12 subscribers for one year at $2.00, an engraving of Mrs. Hayes portrait will be presented, and the same will be given for 6 subscribers for one year at 2.00 in addition to the clubs of 18 and 30.

For a club of six new subscribers for one year at $2.00, Julia Colmans excellent and useful works,the Juvenile Manual and Alcohol and Hygiene handsomely bound in cloth and six catechisms will be presented. It will be seen that these liberal premiums are offered for the purpose of extending the circulation of the RESCUE, not to make money for it. To put 52 copies in the post office prepaid costs a good deal more than $2.00. Renewals of former expiring subscriptions will be counted in new clubs.

THE RESCUE,

THE ORGAN OF THE

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞ As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institu ion. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

Temperance Rally!

A TEMPERANCE CAMP MEETING will be held at GUERNEVILLE, SONOMA CO., CAL., commencing about June 30th, 1881, and continuing five days.

It will be under the immediate control and management of Enterprise Lodge, No. 356, I. O. G. T.

Every possible care will be taken to make the occasion a pleasant and profitable one to all who attend.

We cordially invite the assistance and co-operation of all friends of the temperance cause.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE,

Below is a list of a few of the most useful and excellent works with which every reformer should be supplied, and in which he should be well posted:

BACCHUS DETHRONED.— A Prize Essay; Cloth, $1; paper edition, 50c. Completely masters the whole subject. Everybody ought to have it.

TEMPERANCE LESSON BOOK.— By B. W. Richardson, M. A., M. D., LL. D., F. R. S. 220 pp. Cloth, 50c.; paper, 25c. This is a series of short lessons on alcohol and its action on the body, accompanied with suitable questions, designed for study in public and private schools, and reading in schools and families. Send for it; read what this brightest and and best of medical scientists has discovered regarding all kinds of drinks; be sure to lend it to your family doctor.

TEN LECTURES ON ALCOHOL.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., F. R. S. Comprising the six Cantor Lectures: "Action of Alcohol on the Body and on the Mind," "Moderate Drinking," "The Medical Profession," and "The Liberty of the Abject." 338 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c. The ablest and cheapest lectures ever presented to the American public,

ON ALCOHOL.—By Dr. B. W. Richardson, F. R. S., of London. 12mo., 190 pages. Six "Cantor Lectures," showing the nature and effect of alcohol on the body and mind. Cloth, 75c.; paper, 25c.

OUR WASTED RESOURCES.—By Dr. Wm. Hargreaves. 12mo., 202 pages. The Missing Link in the Temperance Reform, giving the most valuable statistics ever published. Price in cloth, $1.50; paper edition, 50c.

This book contains ten sermons and talks by this eminent divine. They are filled with sound, convincing arguments against the lawfulness, morality and necessity of the liquor-traffic, as well as stirring appeals to all Christian men and women to take a firm, decided, out-spoken stand in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, Send for that and lend it to the ministers in your vicinity.

ALCOHOL AND THE STATE.—A discussion of the problem of law as applied to the liquor-traffic. By Robert C. Pitman, L.L.D., Associate Judge of Superior Court of Massachusetts. 12mo. 411 pages, $1 50.

It is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. It shows that the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the State; and the foe of all the objects for which the State exists; and presents such strong arguments, statistics, appeals, authorities, as will add greatly to an intelligent and wise solution of the Liquor Problem. The economy and legislative aspects of the Alcoholic discussion have never been so ably presented, and it should be in the hands of every citizen and in every library in the land.

THE MEDICAL USE OF ALCOHOL.—95 pages. By James Edmunds, M. D., of London. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 60c.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND ALCOHOL.—12 mo., 33 pages. By B. W. Richardson, M. D., 10c.

PROHIBITION DOES PROHIBIT; OR PROHIBITION NOT A FAILURE.—12mo, 48 pages. By J. N. Stearns, 10c.

MODERATE DRINKING.—For and Against, from Scientific Points of View. By B. W. Richardson, M. D. 12mo, 48 pages. Paper, 20c.

BEER AS A BEVERAGE.—24 pages. An Address by Rev. W. Hughey, in reply to the Appeal of the Beer Congress, 10c.

ALCOHOL AND THE HUMAN BRAIN.—By Rev. Joseph Cook. 12mo, 24 pp. An able scientific address, 10c.

JULIA COLMAN'S WORKS.

SPECIMEN SETS.—Beer Tracts, Handbills, etc., 6 cents; Leaflets and Children's Tracts, 5c.; Tracts and Leaflets on Wine, 5c.; File case set of Union Leaflets, 18c.; File case set of Children's Tracts, 25c.

These file cases are of strong manila paper, nicely lettered, and they open like a port-folio, disclosing the sets; can be closed and fastened with a rubber ring; can be used for specimens for a long time, and are a great convenience in the use of tracts.

Contains full directions for the management of young and older people and children, in the study of the nature and effects of alcohol, so that they may never be tempted to learn by experience. The school is conducted on the model of the Sunday-school, both because that is a proper model and because people thus learn with so little explanation. Hundreds of these schools are being opened and are becoming very popular. The Text Books used in this Temperance School are

A work for the children. Simple, direct, concise and popular. They enjoy it much; study and learn to recite it all through—and explain it, too, provided the teacher uses also the

The object of this book is to assist the teachers in the use of the catechism on alcohol. It is arranged in short lessons, each of which is accompanied with a note giving directions for simple experiments, object lessons, blackboard exercises, followed by a little lecture on the above methods with facts and illustrations and incidents which may be used by the teacher. Every teacher and reader recognizes this Manual and Catechism to be just the thing needed: their suggestions and deductions are those of a thorough practical teacher, completely armed and equipped for that duty. No better help to temperance education has ever been produced; probably nothing that comes near it in usefulness.

These three works are especially intended for use in temperance organizations of various kinds, and there are many helps to go with them, such as the children's tracts above named, one of which is selected for each lesson. Then there are

CHROMO TEXT CARDS.—Per 100, $1. Sewall's Stomach Plates, $9. same, mounted on rollers, $12.

And many others named and priced in the Temperance School above named. For teaching Temperance in the Day School, a movement coming now into very general favor, the new book has been prepared, entitled

An elementary text book for schools. This work is approved by the most experienced and distinguished advocates of Temperance

Miss Colman is always promptly willing to answer questions, and give explanations and make selections with the most scrupulous attention for all who call for her services in the line of temperance literature, and the RESCUE particularly recommends its readers to make liberal use of her admirable publications, and to apply for them at once at her new address,

MISS JULIA COLMAN,
54 Bible House, New York City, N. Y.

☞To get all the works in the two lists above, including 1,100 beer tracts and 1,000 leaflets, will cost about $11 if the books are bound in cloth, or $8 if in paper covers. Every lodge ought to get just the entire outfit at once, well bound for the use of its members.

THE COURT of Sessions in Scotland has decided that the Earl of Zetland cannot lease his property in Grangemonth, with a binding condition that no liquor is to be sold upon it. The Judge admits that the Earl has a right to let his property with any conditions he chooses, prohibitory or otherwise —but he must not undertake to regulate the social habits of a community of 5000 inhabitants. That is an infamous and villainous perversion of the law by Judges who are evidently human whisky jugs and are debauchèd in reason and principle, like all other drunkards. What makes this decision particularly iniquitous and vexatious is the circumstance that a large majority of those 5000 inhabitants desire to prohibit the traffic. The judicial whisky tools would have given their most cheerful consent and endorsement to any scheme that the Earl of Zetland could have proposed, to debauch those 5000 people and send them to the bottomless pit.

CURRENT EVENTS.

DISASTROUS FLOODS on the Missouri river, large damage has been done and much more is in prospect.

ON April 29 three men hanged for murder: one in Windsor Vt, one in Charlotte N. C. and one in Baltimore, Md: the last was a colored man.

A. PROVOST of Elgin a Scottish town proposes to build a new town hall by a whisky wapinschaw which means a raffle for casks, dozens and bottles of whisky. That Provost will very probably hold a high up position in the hereafter, as one of Beelzebub's trusted body guards.

INDIANA has decided to submit to the people a constitutional amendment prohibiting the rum curse and another giving women the ballot. The latter passed the House 62 to 24 and the Senate 27 to 18. People who cannot see Womans equal suffrage in the U. S. looming up very large and very near now, are going to be very much enlightened soon.

EVERY christian and temperance voter who deposits his ballot henceforth for either of the old whisky parties that are pledged to license and serve the grogshop, ought to be consistent at least and inscribe on his ballot, "down with the Sabbath and the Sabbath School." Voting for rum licence is about the most conspicuously hearty, pronounced devil-worship.

LEEDS, England has had during the past year a teetotal Mayor who gave only respectable entertainments and said if the Queen were his guest he would furnish no wine. His people liked him so well that they elected him again and he lately invited a lot of other Mayors to his inaugural banquet which was on a grand scale; and it turns out that several other Mayors were also total abstainers and the teetotal banquet was most cordially applauded by the large number present. Drunkenness at official receptions is getting out of fashion.

BEER KEG VERSUS SCHOOL HOUSE.—Governor St John of Kansas thinks that State "will lose some of its saloon keepers; but for every one of them that leaves Kansas there will come into it enough sober iudustrious families to build a school house, and the people can well afford to trade off saloons for school houses. That is a pretty fair way to estimate the value of a saloon keeper: he keeps as many decent people out of the State as would build and maintain a schoolhouse, and he destroys as many of his neighbors as it takes to run a pretty lively jail.

THE W. C. T. U. of Indianapolis sends out a circular of thankfulness for increased membership and activity, advocates total prohibition with no saving clause for sacred purposes, petitions for constitutional amendment and "furthermore will continue to conscientiously petition for our right of suffrage to obtain such legislation as will extend the truth, right and justice for God, home and our native land." That circular has a noble ring to it, they mean to occupy every field of usefulness and influence in which their labors can avail to remove the gigantic curse that afflicts the world.

A SCIENTIFIC donkey has lately invented some very sensitive chemical test, by means of which he thinks he can detect in water and soil and air, about a millionth of alcohol or something else that produces the same effect upon his sensitive plates. Some of the rum sick editors are taking this up as an argument against total abstinence: which shows the mental caliber of the poor imbeciles who daily use poison to dethrone the little reason they have. There is a million times more sulphur and iron and iodine and quicksilver found in nature, if those gander experiments on alcohol are true. So if the argument is good for anything we ought to use sand and pebbles and arsenic and antimony and sulphur as daily food and drink.

MR. J. G. MYSELL 1643 Mission St. has published a tract leaflet called Danger Signals, containing an article which appears under that head in the RESCUE of April 7th first page–price $1.50 per 1000. It treats of the relations of the grogshop to the Fraternal societies.

Two white men and a chinaman found murdered last week in Resting Springs near San Bernardino. There is no security for life any where in California; the country is over run with swarms of the crazed victims of the beer shop and groggery, ready to murder on the least excitement.

Everybody who hopes to get a chance at the Federal strawberries and cream during this administration, is trying to be the first in getting up public meetings and publishing resolutions of butter and honey to General Miller on his Chinese movement. Hurry up and dont get left out, boys.

THE NORTH INDIANA M. E. Conference in Session in April asks that political parties shall only put forward prohibition candidates: endorse the call for a state prohibition mass meeting at Indianapolis May 24th, and appointed one of its number a "temperance evangelist," which indicates another "approach" to the enemy's works.

Humboldt Lodge No 269 lately passed resolutions highly complimenting Bro T. K. Carr one of its members who has removed to Tombstone and organized a lodge there. The Lodge tenders him and his new charge best wishes and returns thanks for the able and efficient manner in which he discharged his duties in the various offices in which he officiated while a member.

THE ENGLISH DRINK BILL.—William Hoyle writes to the London Times that in the British Isles the liquor bill is two and one third times the amount of the rental of all the agricultural lands. And in Ireland, where 57 million dollars rent is such a hardship, the annual drink bill of the people is 69 millions. Therefore he wonders the House of Commons should not endeavor to remedy the drink curse, before they trouble the lesser rent curse.

MR. BAYARD who bears a high character as a pure and honest public man and who was almost a Democratic candidate for President, has issued a manifesto against local option and prohibition in which he savs "a well regulated system of licenses whereby revenue is largely brought into the public treasury, coupled with severe penalties for illicit sale, has proved the most efficient check upon the abuse of the liquor traffic." He must have based this monstrous absurdity solely upon his own experience that under that system he has found it easy to get all the whisky he could drink: that utterance from him is valuable, as showing how a man who designs to be upright and honest can be totally whisky fooled if he soaks his reasoning faculties in bewildering unnatural poisons.

REMARKABLE RAILROAD CONVERSION. Among the many conquests made by Moody and Sankey in their recent famous campaign on this coast, none was more brilliant and important than the conversion of Gov. Leland Stanford. There was no noise about it, no blowing of trumpets as used to be the case when a railroad King—no, a very rich man, got converted. This is the first instance known however of a railroad King setting out for the Kingdom, and it is hoped he may not look back. It was so quietly done too, that the only intimation of it that got into print or into public report, appeared in the "Spirit of the Times" when Mr. Boruck explained it all in the few words, "LELAND STANFORD would sooner die than think even, of asking any man to do a dishonorable act in his behalf" It is to be presumed Mr. B. thoroly knows whereof he affirms, and we may rest assured that when a rich man is ready to become a martyr even unto death, for his new convictions, there is no mistaking the genuine sincerity of his conversion.

LORD, KEEP MY MEMORY GREEN.

BY JAMES G. CLARK.

My feet approach life's western slope,
Above me bend the noon day skies;
Beyond me spreads the realm of hope,
Behind the land of memory lies.
I know not what the years may bring
Of dangers wild or joy serene,
But turning to the East, I sing,
"Lord, keep my memory green."

O, land of winter and of bloom,
O, singing bird and moaning pine,
Thy golden light, thy tender gloom,
Thy vales and mountains are all mine.
The holy loves of other years
With beckoning hands towards me lean,
And whisper through their falling tears,
"Lord, keep my memory green."

Dear Memory!—whose unclouded eye
Can pierce the darkest wilds of space—
I see her watch-fires burning high,
I feel her breezes fan my face
I would not give the light she flings
Across my future's landscape scene
For all the pomp and power of kings,—
Lord, keep my memory green.

Let memory near my soul abide,
With eye and voice to warn and win,
With Hope and Memory, side by side,
Shall walk above the tides of sin.
Till from life's western lakes and rills
The angel lifts the sunset sheen,
And hangs it o'er the eastern hills,
Lord, keep my memory green.

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

BY S. D. HASTINGS.

There has been created in California as well as in all other states of the Union, a strong sentiment in opposition to the liquor traffic, but in most of the states thus far, no way has been found to bring it to bear effectively for the overthrow of the traffic. Efforts have been made to concentrate this sentiment in the Prohibition party, but in no instance has the effort been successful. I doubt if any state in the Union, one in ten, if one in twenty of those who are really in favor of prohibition have been induced to unite with this party. The sentiment of opposition to the traffic is strong enough to induce thousands and tens of thousands to vote for its prohibition when they can do so without interfering with party ties, but when the vote involves the giving up of long cherished party associations, prohibition is given the go by. If a constitutional amendment prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks can be submitted to a popular vote, this class of men can all vote for the amendment without in any way interfering with their party relations. I know of no other way in which this sentiment of opposition to the traffic can be brought to bear effectively against the traffic

To my mind there are two strong reasons why we should fight the battle of prohibition upon the line of constitutional amendment,in preference to any other that has yet been proposed, and they are, first that it can be easier raised than anything that can be at all effective, and second, that when we have got it, it will be of more value than any other measure.

It must be understood at the outset that the liquor interest will oppose every measure that it regards as detrimental to the traffic, whether it be stringent provisions to existing license laws, civil damage laws, local option, legislative or constitutional prohibition: every measure of the kind will meet with the most determined opposition from this source.

Before the people can vote upon a constitutional amendment, the legislature must take the necessary steps for its submission. The provision which controls this matter in your state is found in Article 18 of your present state constitution, and is as follows: Any amendment or amendments to this constitution may be proposed in the Senate and Assembly, and if two-thirds of all the members elected to each of the two houses shall vote in favor thereof, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be entered on this Journal with the yeas and nays taken thereon, and it shall be the duty of the Legislature to submit such proposed amendment or amendments to the people in such manner and at such time and after such publication as may be deemed expedient. Should more amendments than one be submitted at the same election, they shall be so prepared and distinguished by number or otherwise, that each can be voted on separately. If the people shall approve and ratify such amendment or amendments, or any of them by a majority vote of the qualified electors voting thereon, such amendment or amendments shall become part of this constitution.

Many members of the Legislature can be induced to vote for the submission of the proposed amendment, who would not vote for a prohibitory law, or for any measure that seriously embarrassed the traffic. In voting to submit the amendment they are assuming no responsibility; they are simply referring the question to the people for them to settle.

The people generally, unless it be such as are in some way interested in the traffic, will admit that it is a fair way to settle the question to refer it to the popular vote, and if their representatives refuse to vote for the submission of the amendment, it will not be difficult to induce large numbers of them—sufficient to accomplish the result—to use their influence to keep at home in the future some of the members of the Legislature who thus refuse; and in this way a legislature can be secured that will submit the amendment. Whatever may be the difficulties in the way of securing the submission of the proposed amendment, I think I am safe in saying this: that the legislature that will refuse to submit the amendment will refuse to pass any law that will prohibit, or even seriously embarrass the traffic.

A constitutional amendment submitted and fairly adopted by the people is of vastly more importance than any legislative act of prohibition.

A legislative act may be repealed at the very next session of the legislature. A constitutional amendment once adopted, and the friends of prohibition have such an advantage that with ordinary vigilance they can forever prevent its repeal. The amendment adopted, and the traffic is unconstitutional—is outlawed. You can go to the Legislature then and demand the most stringent kind of "Maine law."

The objection that we always meet with when asking for a prohibitory law, "that the people are not ready for it," can no longer be urged, as they will have shown by their vote on the amendment that they are in favor of such a measure.

Whatever action you may take in the future in relation to local option, will it not be wise for California to fall into line with the other states of the Union, in a movement to secure an amendment to her constitution prohibiting the manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks? Your Principles, at the head of your editorial column pledge you to this at some time; why not commence at once? The sooner you commence the sooner you will secure the amendment.

GAVAZZI.

The reader will find some interesting information in the following synopsis of Signor Gavazzis' lecture at the Howard Presbyterian church, Sunday evening, April 10th.

The evangelization of Italy was commenced in 1870. Ten years ago in Rome the gospel could not be preached. The people were really slaves. The evangelists and co-operators considered it their duty to conspire before this time in order to secure independence in Italy and in 1848 Sr. Gavazzi was asked by the Romans to deliver a speech which he did on the 22d of March of that year to an audience of 40,000 people assembled in the coliseum. On the evening of the 25th 3000 soldiers marched from Rome against the Austrians, but unfortunately they started out with the blessing of Pope Pius the IX. They believe that was the cause of their failure, and have concluded hereafter to get along without any assistance from his reverence. In 1849, April 28th, the French army marched against Rome. The Italians under Garibaldi defeated the French. The Italians after a resistance of three months, and under the pressure of four armies were obliged to surrender. Sr. Gavazzi was ordered to be imprisoned, but was too old a rat to be caught by French policemen. He went to the British Consul for assistance but found him unwilling to aid him. He went to the American Consul, and found him away from Rome; he then applied to Mr Freeman, an American, who kept him three days in safety under the shadow of the glorious stars and stripes and the outspread wings of the American Eagle.

The Pope's subjects were afraid of the American Eagle, and left him (Gavazzi) unmolested. He went to England, and in 1850 returned to Italy, and in 1866 preached for the first time in Venice. When Italy became free and independent; became the fifth among the great nations of Europe, the gospel began to be preached freely. In 1870 an appeal was made to the churches to unite and form a general assembly. Twenty-three churches came together in answer to the appeal and resolved to be called the Free Christian Church of Italy. The General Assembly held their meeting at Florence; now meetings are held every year. The churches are united for the purpose of evangelizing Italy. It is a great thing to have in Italy a thoroly Italian church. A native Italian evangelist can do more towards evangelizing the Italians than ten foreign missionaries.

Signor Gavazzi declines to be called a reformer. He says there is nothing to reform. Italy has learned from America not to lose time and labor for nothing; and time and labor is truly lost in trying to reform the Roman Catholic Church, The Church of Rome is an error from beginning to end. The best plan would be to give it into the care of the public undertaker. Our work is neither a reformation nor a transformation, merely a restoration. Italy was originally a Christian country, and we are merely Christianizing it, we have formed our present church as it is nearer to the Apostle Paul for simplicity of worship and doctrine. We take no authority or dogma from anywhere but the Bible. The epistle of Paul to the Ephesians we take as our catechism, and a glorious one it is too; it is the best; it was written to our forefathers, and hence is ours as a kind of national patrimony. Nothing is found there about the infallibility of the Pope, of auricular confessions, sacraments, penance, etc.

In the year 1870 at Milan 23 churches were represented, now we have 36 churches and 35 evangelistic stations, altogether 71. We have passed from 23 to 71 in ten years. In 1870 we had scarcely 400 communicants, now more than 2000 and 1000 Sunday-school scholars. All of our communicants were a few years ago Roman Catholics; they are all converts from Romanism, and that fact alone is remarkable. Pecuniarily speaking. when we began we had not a cent for our work, but we trusted in our Heavenly Father. He was pleased with us, and now the church is entirely free from debt. Our congregations are humble and poor, but in a few years with the Lord's help they will be self-supporting. We are now doing our best to support ourselves. We have a fund for invalid ministers and their widows and orphans. A Rev. Mr. McDougall is the treasurer, and with the usual Scotch parsimony and closeness he is particular that all pay their pro rata for its support. He even deducts the tax from the salaries of the ministers paying them the balance. No one escapes him.

TERRIBLE EXAGGERATION.

The extreme utterances of temperance advocates have always been a favorite theme of the people who are satisfied to let the liquor business alone. Here is what a M. E. conference is reported to have resolved last year in Worcester Mass. No temperance lecturer ever went a foot beyond that, and no one can truthfully dispute a syllable of it.

"WHEREAS, While the actual results of the use and sale of intoxicants in our land alone cannot be portrayed by mortal hand, they may be estimated in these appalling figures: 600,000 drunkards, 60,000 annual deaths, 30,000 crushed women and children, nearly every murder, and two-thirds of all other crimes. Two-thirds of the national pauperism, the taxation necessary to punish this crime and support this pauperism, an army of human serpents in the shape of 500,000 employees of the rum traffic, existing not to help society but to ruin it. From 600 to 700,000,000 of dollars withdrawn from the productive industries of the land and invested in the temporal and eternal damnation of the increasing millions.

"Resolved. That since slavery was deemed by the churches a sufficient basis for political action; since the slave-holder never committed the crimes of the rumseller; since prohibition should enter into the politics of a christian citizen; since the Bishops of the M. E. Church have in a pastoral letter urged the duty of prohibition; since the republican party, the author of license, manifesting its 'true inwardness' at a late period of its history has fallen into the arms of the prohibitory foe, rather than seem to advocate prohibition, so that the voters in that party are responsible for the license law which now darkens the statutes of Massachusetts; and since no progress is to be hoped for while party goes to polls, and principle is left at home for Sunday use:—a new departure is needed for politics, which shall give us an issue worthy the vote of a christian citizen, founded on the moral principle of prohibition and never yielding an inch till the victory is forever won!"

ONE of the funniest speeches we ever heard was a burlesque entitled, "De virst ding wat we knows de Americans vill vant to rule dis country."—Ex.

THE PINT OF ALE.

A MANCHESTER calico printer was, on his wedding day, asked by his wife to allow her two half-pints of ale a day as her share of extra comforts. He made the bargain, but not cheerfully, for tho a drinker himself (fancying, no doubt, that he could not well do without) he would have preferred a perfectly sober wife. They both worked hard. John loved his wife, but he could not break away from his old associations at the ale-house, and when not in the factory or at his meals, he was with his boon companions. His wife made the small allowances meet her housekeeping expenses—keeping her cottage neat and tidy, and he could not complain that she insisted upon her daily pint of ale, while he, very likely, drank two or three quarts. They had been married a year, and the morning of their wedding anniversary John looked with real pride upon the neat comely person of his wife, and, with a touch of remorse in his look and tone, he said:

"Mary, we've had no holiday since we were wed, an' only that I haven't a penny in the world we'd take a jaunt to the village and see the mother."

"Would thee like to go, John?" she asked.

There was a tear with her smile, for it touched her heart to hear him speak so tenderly as in the olden times.

"Nay, bnt I've got the pint of ale," she said.

"Got what, wife!"

"The pint of ale," she repeated.

Thereupon she went to the hearth, and from beneath one of the stone flags drew forth a stocking from which she poured upon the table the sum of 365 three-pences (22.81), exclaiming:

"See, John, thee can have the holiday."

"What is this?" he asked in amaze.

"It is my daily pint of ale, John."

He was conscience-stricken as well as amazed and charmed. "Mary hasen't thee had thy share? Then I'll have no more from this day."

And he was as good as his word. They had their holiday with the old mother, and Mary's little capital, saved from the "pint of ale," was the seed from which, as the years rolled on, grew shop, factory, warehouse, country seat, and carriage—with health, happiness, peace, and honor.

RIVERSIDE.

The Riverside Press tells of a Good Templars entertainment on the 13th. After most acceptable music by the Overton Sisters and Miss Jennie Hall,

"Mrs. E. J. Davis as a temperance lecturer, was a decided success. She interested the audience for nearly half an hour, giving a history of Good Templar work in Riverside, and scoring the prominent business men for their inactivity in temperance work. Rev. Chas. Bulton delivered a pleasant address, and extended an invitation to outsiders to "Come all ye critters; come and jine." Another entertainment is promised in a few weeks."

Writing of the colonies of Southern California John S. Hittel says.

"Riverside deserves the credit of having relatively more education and refinement than any other rural town in our State, and perhaps on the globe. Its social tone is rather that of a fashionable suburb of Boston than of a village that depends for its support on its trees and vines."

It is very gratifying to any one who wishes well to California to repeat such a report as that; and it would be pleasant indeed if the same words would truthfully apply to Anaheim.

Another fact deserves mention too of Riverside. It conveyed the whole editorial excursion party of seventy from Colton to Riverside (8 miles) and entertained them free, from Wednesday evening till Friday morning.

PACIFIC BANK.

Among the BANKING INSTITUTIONS of the city, there is none occupying more firmly or deservedly the pedestal of public confidence, than the Pacific Bank, corner of Pine and Sansome streets, San Francisco. This bank under the management of Dr. R. H. McDonald, has progressed steadily in public favor and prosperity, ever since its establishment in 1863. It is now just entering upon its eighteenth year, under brilliant auspices. Its financial condition is eminently satisfactory. It has a capital stock of $1.000,000 all paid up, and a surplus of over $300,000· But, better than any amount of money, is the prudent and conservative policy, and business experience and sagacity, by which its management is characterized, and which have earned for it a degree of confidence, enjoyed in larger measure by no banking house in the country. These characteristics explaln its past steady prosperity and guarantee for it a still more liberal share of the most desirable patronage. The farmer, merchant or manufacturer, will seek in vain, if at all, for a more advantageous house, with which to do their banking bnsiness.—The Argonaut, January 22, 1881.

THE CALIFORNIA WOMAN'S SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION.—Was organized 1880, its special object being the industrial education of women and girls. The Decorative Art Department has been in succesful operation for the last three months. As fast as practicable, we shall open our branches of women's work; The Exchange is for the sale of Fancy Needle Work and Plain Sewing, Knitted and Crotchet Work; Hand painting, on china, wood, tin, ivory and silk; Preserved Fruits, Jellies, Pickles and Catsup; Cake, Yeast Powder, and Home-made bread; Also, the finer articles of unsoiled wearing apparel—shawls, laces, jewels, dresses, etc. Articles must be sent at the expense of the consignor. The Society does not hold its self responsible for losses. Prices are fixed by the depositor, and 10 per cent. will be deducted before remitting, after the sales are made. The Society prefers to do largely an Order Business; and samples of good work from women who, by their industry, add to the world's wealth, are solicited. We earnestly hope that generous patronage will enable us to establish this department of our work on such a basis that it will soon expand into a Work Exchange, in its broadest sense, of help to women in every field of industry fitted to their capacity. Lessons in Decorative Art, and all kinds of painting are given at all hours, daily. Exchange hours 10 A. M. to 5 P. M.—304 Stock ton bet. Sutter and Post San Francisco.

THE LEADERS of the Sabbath School Union have virtually excluded Bible Temperance lessons from being taught in the Sunday-school except once a year: but the prediction is ventured that the day is not far off when they will be a proper subject for every Sunday.

CLUBS.

Attention is requested to the offer of premiums for clubs, found elsewhere in this paper. The Encyclopedia offered is a reprint of Chambers Encyclopedia complete, in nonpareil type, size 6½by 5 inches, 15 volumes 830 pages each, bound in cloth. The Library of Universal Knowledge is also 15 Volumes 9¼by6¼ inches 900 pages each, in good clear brevier type, and is a handsome well printed book: contains all of the encyclopedia above and American additions,said to be altogether about 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's.

These works should be of inestimable value to every Lodge: give full information upon almost every subject or question that can be raised: they form a nucleus for a complete library, and will give the members a stimulus for the acquisition of useful information. Either of the two supplies the reading material that used to cost quite lately, $50 to $90 but the latter is the fullest and best printed and is recommended as the best choice.

In addition to the premiums offered elsewhere, for a club of 12 subscribers for one year at $2.00, an engraving of Mrs. Hayes portrait will be presented, and the same will be given for 6 subscribers for one year at 2.00 in addition to the clubs of 18 and 30.

For a club of six new subscribers for one year at $2.00, Julia Colmans excellent and useful works,the Juvenile Manual and Alcohol and Hygiene handsomely bound in cloth and six catechisms will be presented. It will be seen that these liberal premiums are offered for the purpose of extending the circulation of the RESCUE, not to make money for it. To put 52 copies in the post office prepaid costs a good deal more than $2.00. Renewals of former expiring subscriptions will be counted in new clubs.

WOMAN'S SOCIAL SCIENCE ASSOCIATION meets every Saturday at 2:30 P. M. at the S. S. S., 304 Stockton street. near Post. A paper is read and discussed, and all questions pertaining to Law, and other matters of vital importance to women, are answered. Ladies interested in Social Science and industrial and educational co-operation are cordially invited to attend the meetings. Admittance free. Mrs. J. W. Stow, President; Mrs. J. H. Smyth, Vice President; Mrs. T. Tilden Moulton, Treasurer; Miss I. G. Prince, Cor. Sec'y, 218 Eddy street, San Francisco.

THE TEMPERANCE PICNIC.—The Temperance picnic which occurred at Davisville on Saturday last proved an enjoyable and successful occasion. The day, the grounds, surroundings and behavior of all who took part proved all that could be desired. Excursion trains were run from various points in Solano and Yolo counties and from Sacramento. The train from Sacramento was chartered by Siloam and Capital Lodges, with a view of benefiting the Good Templars Home for Orphans fund. Fully three hundred excursionists went from Sacramento and quite a little sum will remain for the object stated after paying the expenses of the train etc. Between two and three thousand people assembled in the grove and enjoyed themselves in merry making incident to a California picnic. In the afternoon a program of literary exercises was had in which Albert Hart of Sacramento as poet; Col. C. N. Goulding of Toledo Ohio as Orator participated. Music was rendered by the Woodland Brass Band, and vocal duetts by the Gardiner Bros. of Santa Ana. Various games and athletic exercises were indulged in for prizes offered by the management. There being no liquors allowed about the grounds, the good order and decorum was noticeable. It is hoped that these picnic reunions may be continued from year to year and they doubtless will, and grow in extent and interest so that the coming of the day and occasion may be looked for by the temperance people generally of the three counties named.

GLEANINGS.—Dr. S. C. Brown Deputy of Yountville Lodge of Napa county reports his Lodge, newly organized, as progressing nicely. At the last meeting there were 27 members present, one initiated and one proposed.... Star of the Hill Lodge of Forest Hill Placer county is firmly rooted and grows accordingly, is is what its Deputy Bro J. C. Hawver writes..... Bro. Geo. D. Kellogg Deputy of Newcastie Lodge writes "The Lodge has just passed through a prosperous quarter and had an average attendance of 26 of our own members—35 present while I am writing,and everything is lovely and we are all happy with a good complement of officers and a good outlook for the future. Good Will Lodge of Gridley seems to have taken new life and hopes to do good and effective work, is what the Deputy Bro. H. C. Wharton reports.

GRAND LECTURERS' REPORT.—Bro. Wm. Crowhurst, Grand Lecturer, has submitted his report for the month of April, showing thirty-three lectures and addresses delivered during the month, of which 21 were public lectures, 11 Lodge addresses and 1 district lodge address. He traveled 655 miles and addressed audiences composed of 1528 adults and 354 children, a total of 1882 persons. He organized four new lodges. His receipts were, from collections, $86.30; charter fees, $40; total, $126.30. His expenses, $46.45. Altogether this is a good record of hard and effective work. The reports of the other lecturers had not come to hand at the time of closing this department for this week.

TUOLUMNE.—District Deputy Bro. I. T. Holland of Sonora, Tuolumne county, writes under a recent date that Bald Mountain Lodge is prospering having from one to four initiations at each meeting. The Lodge will celebrate its sixteenth anniversary on Saturday June 2nd in connection with the District Lodge, to which the Grand Lodge officers and all members of the Order are invited. Bro. H. also says that the Order is in a prosperous condition throught his county.

CONSTITUTIONS.—The rapid growth of the Order has produced an unprecedented demand for constitutions etc. Heretofore the usual edition of five thousand copies has more than sufficed for a years supply. The present edition of five thousand was printed in December last and the last copy of the edition has already been disposed of, necessitating the reprinting of a new and special edition. Heaps of law!

PERSONALS.—The Grand Lodge office was favored with calls frsm various members of the Order during the week, among others were the present G. W. V. T., Sister Mrs. M. J. Maywew of Red Bluff; Sister Mrs. M. E. Partridge, P, G. W. V. T. of West Oakland and Sister Mrs. M. A. Alsip P. G. W. V. T. of Sacramento.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.—The Executive Committee of the Grand Lodge met at Vallejo, on Monday evening last. The proceedings will appear next week.

THE NEW ODE CARDS.—The new music ode cards, with music for all the subordinate odes, are deservedly popular. Already a third order has gone forward to the R. W. G. L. for a fresh supply. Every Lodge should be supplied with them. They have been placed upon the regular list of supplies.

THE FIRST.—The first quarterly returns filed, for the term ending April 30th, were those of Newcastle Lodge, No. 339, which were received Monday morning last.

Lecturers' Reports.

☞ The only authorized Grand Lecturers in this jurisdiction are Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Messrs. Wm. Crowhurst, Hugh R. Hughes, Dr. M. D. Merrick, F. J. Culver and George Bramall.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

WM. CROWHURST.

NORD, Butte Co. Cal., April 30, 1881.

BIGGS enjoyed a very pleasant meeting on Saturday night in the Baptist Church, and obtained 13 names on Monday night. In this place, Victory Lodge is awake, lively, earnest.

FLORAL was visited on Sunday, lectured and induced to again go to work. The Lodge was reorganized with 18 members.

NELSON gave good audiences, manifested a great deal of energy and showed they believed that "Per severentia omnia vincit." After surmounting many difficulties, a good Lodge of 17 members was organized.

DURHAM determined not to be left in the cold in this temperance work, and hence gave 23 names: When it came to riding that horrid goat, a general stampede took place, and not enough were left to organize. Fourteen returned, however, to prove themselves worthy the cause, and organized Avonia Lodge.

CHICO, boasting two good Lodges, Fidelity and Samaritan, was not satisfied to exist without a third. A number of their members had seen that drinking customs extended to many of the colored population and that a few of these people in Chico were anxious to organize so as to save their fallen, and also to save their young men from falling. Hence, under the guidance of the Chico Brothers and Sisters, an application, charter list and charter fee were ready, and 23 members, representing Webster, Nelson, Alturas, Dayton, Fidelity, and Samaritan Lodges, after listening to a sermon by Bishop E. O. Haven, repaired to the colored church (A. M. E.) and there initiated the candidates, etc. Thus sprung into existence April 29th Rising Star Lodge with 16 charter members. On Saturday 14 Lodges of the A. O. U. W. held a grand picnic in the lovely grove of General Bidwell. An address by G. M. W., W. H. Barnes, called attention to Temperance. No liquors were permitted on the grounds. Thus people were enabled to enjoy a sober picnic.

H. R. HUGHES.

KNIGHTS FERRY, May 1st, 1881.

On the 24th ult. I lectured at Merced Falls. Met with the lodge and instructed members in degree work. In the evening went six miles to Snelling and lectured to an average audience. Met with a few members after the meeting and counselled with them as to the future. This lodge has had a hard time, thru a combination of unfortunate circumstances, but a faithful few are determined to "Hold the Fort."

Merced Falls Lodge is doing well. They have about $170 subscribed to build a hall already, and not all have been asked yet. A brother who recently joined—Mr. Brooks, the W. C. T. elect—leads off with $50. This is one of our smallest lodges, but is large in spirit and determined in purpose.

On the 25th drove 25 miles to Cathey's Valley and conferred the degrees on the Charter members and five others, and had a pleasant and profitable meeting. Next evening lectured to a well-filled house; good interest. I organized this lodge on my previous visit to Mariposa, with 17 charter members. It now numbers 32, and 12 names in. At first they were all young folks; now the middle aged and old folks are coming in. In the fall they will get a hall, and Cathey's Valley can be relied on as a permanent affair.

On the 29th drove 33 miles to fill an appointment at Lebright's but found that no one knew where the meeting was to be held. "Confusion worse confounded" reigned on account of somebody getting drunk. Not advisable to state particulars. It is a farming community in the southern part of Tuolumne, and I shall go back there and get a lodge in the sweet by and by.

Next day went to Lagrange. No prospect to organize there.

Went to Golden City on the 29th, and learned that my posters had been received but that they thought there was no use in putting them up as everybody knew of it. I ventured to ask how they knew, but that was all the satisfaction I could get,—"Everybody knows." Half a dozen came to the meeting at about half past 8; about 9, or after, others came to the door to wait for me to get through so they could dance. I subsided, and they danced most of the night, and I tried to sleep just overhead. It is a new quartz mine, and "dance and drink" is the order of the day. They have no use for a lodge now. They must wait till some of their young men shall be ruined, perhaps some one slain, and other public rows disgrace the camp. Not yet! Some young wives must in the desolate places called home, and little ones be frightened and humiliated, and the victims fasten the coils a little tighter, and then deliverance may possibly be sought.

M. D. MERRICK.

The fact that a large and enthusiastic gathering of Odd Fellows held in Martinez, on Tuesday the 26th inst., to celebrate the anniversary of that Order, rendered our meeting for the purpose of instituting a Band of Hope a partial failure. Initiary steps were taken, however, and a Band will soon be instituted. At 8 o'clock I met with the members of Martinez Lodge in their comfortable hall, and enjoyed a most pleasant meeting. The question of the evening was, shall we "hold the fort" or let the Lodge die. After a full and frank expression of opinion on the subject, it was unanimously decided to hold Martinez for the right, and not only to "hold the fort," but to make a renewed and strong fight for the temperance work.

The membership of the Lodge is of the best in the city, and there is no reason why the work should not go on. I will go to Monterey again on the 16th of May.

Our meeting in East Berkeley was held in the Congregational church. The audience was not large but very attentive and seemed much interested in the work. A few names were added to the Lodge. At South Francisco, at the appointed hour, I found the church dark and a lone man standing on the lee side of the building out of the wind, and the prospect of a meeting did not look bright. But the Rev. Wills bustled around, turned on the gas, and would have rung the bell if there had been one, but as there was none we did what we could—that is, we waited. Not for long, however. They dropped in one by one, until we had quite a little audience. Bro. Wills opened the meeting in his usual pleasant manner, and one of the young ladies of his congregation played the organ and led in the singing. After my lecture the audience were invited to unite with us in an effort to start a Lodge, and some ten or more names were given, and a meeting was appointed for May 6th.

At West Oakland, on the evening of Saturday, the inevitable picnic again interfered, and our audience was small. Gave a very short address; added a few more names to our list for a Lodge, making the entire list about thirty-five names; and proceeded to the organization of a Lodge. The unavoidable absence of some of the charter members rendered it expedient to defer the election of a part of the officers, and a night was fixed for the completion of the work. We trust that this Lodge, when instituted, may be more successful than those that have preceded it.

F. J. CULVER

Left Valley Ford Monday after notifying saloons to close, reached Bodega in time to visit school, gave short talk to scholars, notice having been thoroly given one of the largest audiences that Bodega had collected for a long time greeted us. Tuesday being a gala day for all Odd Fellows, women and children included, at Occidental we thought best rest that night and take Wednesday when the church was again filled. At the close of the lecture a vote was taken to see how many were in favor of Sec. 300 of Penal Code and wished to see it enforced; the vote was unanimous, for closing.

Thursday passed through Freestone, called on all business places asked them to comply with the Sunday law, parties having agreed to see it enforced; reached Occidental, had a good audience on Thursday eve also Friday when we organized Summit Lodge, please give Sonoma county credit for an other Lodge. Spoke at Guerneville last evening to a crowded house. The work booms here, Camp meeting on the move.

MRS. STEVENS.

Had successful meetings at Scenega where 14 persons signified a desire to leave the ranks of our opponents and unite their efforts and example with those who are trying to make a sober State.

At Santa Paula spoke at the Mayday Picnic in the interests of the Sunday School: 300 to 400 present. Met Sat. evening with the Lodge. At 11 A. M. Sunday and at 8 P. M. addressed full audiences in the School house: 30 applications for membership and $20. contributed to the Home, and on Monday 2nd, was present at public installation there.

EDITOR RESCUE:—Your readers may remember two articles on prizes by Miss A. R. Congdon published in the RESCUE Dec. 8th, page 87 and Jan 6th, page 185. Some said impossible, others paid it no attention. But listen, ye of little faith; read the following, and you lodges go and do likewise. The local Union of Oakland petitioned the City Board of Education for permission to offer a prize for the best essay on "Twin Evils; Tobacco and Intemperance." It was granted, and all the Oakland schools are at work for it. We hope to see this system introduced into every school in our state, and we ask the RESCUE to publish the enclosed circular that you may know how to proceed after obtaining permission from your educational board. Our society is indebted to Dr. R. H. Mc Donald who has published several hundred circulars for us. The Grass Valley and Nevada city Unions have offered two prizes in their county and 20 and 10 dollars respectively for the best essays on Evil Effects of Tobacco and Alcohol, and Grass Valley has Dr. Richardson's Temperance lesson books introduced into its public school libraries. Educate the rising generation, and prohibition is ours from Maine to California.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

CURRENTS OF THE SEA.

NUMBER FOUR.

The Gulf Stream is so much warmer than the cool waters on either side of it, that its waters are expanded and their bulk increased so much as to make them rise and overtop the others a little. The middle of the stream is supposed to be at least two feet higher than its borders. It is known to be higher because a boat that only sits a few inches in the water will float away from a ship that draws 15 or 20 feet of water, to the east or to the west, as the ship and boat are on the east or west side of the center of the stream. We know thus that this great ocean current is a little roof-shaped, and its surface waters are always running over the edges a little, and thus widening the stream and making a larger heating surface the further north it goes.

People sometimes wonder how these waters run in various directions without mixing together and losing their separate motions. But it should be remembered that a large body of water moving north has no tendency whatever to mingle with or join in the direction of another moving south or west; each particle of the moving mass has a vacancy made for it by the moving particles ahead, into which it is impelled by the particles pressing on it from behind. And two currents running in the same direction side by side, or one above the other are not liable to mingle, if one is going a little faster than the other, or if one is salter or heavier or warmer than the other. So then the whole Gulf Stream moves together, is on business as it were, does not separate nor stray away, any of it, or get lost, but keeps right along until it has performed the most important part of its journey, when it forks and spreads out in obedience to the powers which govern it.

A part of it curves and returns to the tropics near the coasts of Europe and Africa, and another portion goes up the North Atlantic and Arctic sea into the ICEBERG REGIONS.

It set out as a heater, and thus far it has served that purpose, and also that of carrying away from the tropical seas the surplus salts collected there. Now it still continues its mission as a heater to some extent; but here its secondary effect is to operate indirectly as a cooler.

In its earlier course the proportions of saltness and of heat borne by the opposite currents, were so arranged that the warmer and salter currents were above the other; but now a change occurs, and owing to the peculiar properties of water already described, the warmer and salter stream enters the Arctic as an under current, being now heavier than the colder but fresher ice bearing stream coming out from the polar seas.

Here is another wondrous mechanism again; if the stream was on the surface now, the terrible frosts would soon rob it of every particle of its heat; the colder particles on the surface before they freeze, would become heavier and sink, the warmer, would come up continuously and part with all of their heat till the whole body was cooled to an icy temperature. But this warm current is now wanted (it is not very warm now) to thaw out the icebergs and ice fields, and break up the terrible dominion of frost which has reigned there for nine or ten months or more of the year.

This it succeeds in doing at a season of the year, July and August, when the surface is most powerfully acted upon by the heat of the sun. The cold stream above, being a non conductor of heat, prevents the further escape into the atmosphere of the heat that remains in the warmer stream now underneath, and that warm water saps away the foundations of the ice fields and icebergs, and the surface current takes them in tow out into the Atlantic to travel south and temper the heat of the Atlantic American summer and the European to some extent as well.

The removal of these fields of ice occurs sometimes in a very wonderful manner. A ship may be imbedded in a sea of ice from which no water can be seen from the masthead for weeks and months; suddenly a movement, seemingly unaccountable, takes place: ice bergs begin to move by the force of an under current, and go crashing thru flows and fields and hummocks of solid pack; dashing one hillock against another, causing immense breaks and open fissures here and enormous accumulations of ice there, with a noise as of many thunders: the imbedded ship is at one time free of ice in a channel of clear water, and a few minutes later is lifted high above the water, and is almost upended or laid over on one side, among masses of moving, grinding, dashing, thundering ice heaps.

In an awful scene like this the "Polaris" about 8 years ago went adrift from her winter quarters in the Arctic sea, and the second in command, Captain Tyson, with eighteen others were separated from the vessel on an island of ice. They were on the ice trying to save some provisions from the ship, expecting she would be crushed to pieces. It was foggy at the time; the Polaris got back to her anchorage next day, and supposing the missing parties were all lost, did not seek them very much. They had a boat on the ice floe and a family of Esquimaux, two men, the wife of one of them and three children. That piece of ice sailed away with them, broke up at last so small that they had to take the boat and leave it. They were 198 days on that ice floe (with the exception of two or three in the boat) and traveled over 2000 miles on that cold current coming from the Arctic. They were many times nearly starved, had to eat raw frozen sealskin, hair and all; but just in time to preserve them from death by starvation, they always caught a seal, killed a polar bear or shot some birds.

They were picked up a very few days after taking to the boat, and taken on board a seal hunting steamer belonging to St. Johns, Newfoundland. They all got safely thru, and if the voyage of Noah in his ark was a more remarkable one than this, Captain Tyson's was certainly the most perilous of all history. Think of it, drifting helplessly on a cake of ice for six months and 18 days. The writer was a fellow voyager once with Captain Tyson for a short time, and happened to be in Brooklyn in 1875, when he described in a lecture in Dr. Talmage's college Hall all the details of that wonderful voyage.

He arrived home quite a while before the Polaris did. Capt. Tyson was a teetotaler and a Christian and a hardy and competent Arctic voyager, an experienced whaling captain.

There are a great many other peculiarities about this Gulf Stream that have not been mentioned, but we shall only refer to two or three; that from Forida to Hatteras, the bed of cold current over which it flows actually rises over ten inches per mile, so that the bottom of the Gulf Stream in that part of its route actually runs that much up hill. And the amount of salt which is borne away every year in the Gulf Stream would cover the British Islands with a bed of salt 14 feet deep; and that warm stream is the cradle and home of innumerable myriads of the great and small dwellers in the sea.

BE RESPECTFUL IN CHURCH.

Misbehaving in church is strongly indicative of a lack of good sense as well as good morals. Giddy girls and would-be smart young men. read the following, consider and be profited thereby: "A clergyman was annoyed by people talking and giggling. He paused, looked at the disturbers, and said: 'I am afraid to reprove those who misbehave, for this reason. Some years since, as I was preaching, a young man who sat before me was constantly laughing, talking and making uncouth grimaces. I paused and administered a severe rebuke. After the close of the service a gentleman said to me, "Sir, you have made a great mistake; that young man was an idiot.' Since then I have always been afraid to reprove those who misbehave in chapel, lest I should repeat the mistake and reprove another idiot. During the rest of the service there was good order." —Kansas Methodist.

REAPING.

BY MOSS ROSE.

[The following lines were suggested by hearing a reformed inebriate say: "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he reap—that I know. I have stopped sowing, but the reaping goes on, and will while I live. I have had my heart to ache and my head to throb thinking of the sixteen years that I lost."]

The seed was sown long years ago,
And took such deep and evil root,
That, now though I have ceased to sow,
I yet must reap the bitter fruit.

Still I must bind the ashen sheaves,
A fearful harvest, dark and dread,
While life's fair flowers with blighted leaves
About my feet lie cold and dead.

And while I walk my darkened way
With aching heart and throbbing brain,
I may not stop, I may not stay,
But reap in anguish and in pain.

I am reaping, reaping ever,
From the vilest seed in madness thrown
Cease to reap, O, I may never;
And I must reap what I have sown.

I shed my fruitless tears alone,
A weary pilgrim tempest tossed.
O, my God, that I might atone
For these bright days forever lost.

Through the days I still am reaping,
In sun and shade through passing years!
'Neath the stars their vigils keeping,
I garner up the fruit in tears.

GENTLEMEN.

It does not require any stylish clothes, fine feathers, sparkling jewelry nor any fancy little cane nor overgrown sleeve buttons to make up a gentleman. But the material necessary for the purpose is all within the reach of every one of the members of our Juvenile organizations, without having to go to a store to buy it or having to send to New York or Boston to have it sent in a box by express. Like a vase of rare and beautiful and fragrant flowers you can raise the whole affair in your own home: but you must be very particular indeed in selecting just the proper qualities to cultivate up into such a grand and noble character as will bear the closest scrutiny and be pronounced that of a gentleman.

Probably the first foundation requisite is truthfulness, perfect truthfulness. If you know any person whose word you can most thoroly believe and trust: who never in jest or earnest is tempted or can be tempted to violate, wound, deface, alter, dishonor or at all tamper with the truth; whose word is never disputed or questioned; whom every one is willing to believe and trust in without hesitation: who does not know how to sell the truth at all and to whom such an idea never presents itself—you cannot help having an intense admiration and respect for him or her. In that respect his character as a gentleman is perfect, and it is impossible to regard him without a degree of affection that you are obliged to add to your respect for him. "Buy the truth and sell it not" is one of the most sublime admonitions of Scripture: perhaps one who thoroly obeys it will scarcely fail in possessing all the other requisites of a gentleman. Certainly he has the very chiefest of those requisites. But it is no harm to tell a little innocent lie for fun; it cant be wicked to say that the cow has got into the baby's cradle on April Fool's day, can it? It is not an awful crime certainly and we are apt to think that it is not wrong to do what almost every boy does. But a person cannot be thoroly truthful and tell an "innocent lie" as it is called. A falsehood once told can never be undone; however little its importance, it is a stain indelibly impressed on one of the pages of your life's record and there it has to stay forever. Why gentlemen tell funny lies, dont they? Some very kindly, generous, loveable people do certainly, but in that one thing they are not gentlemen. Very excellent people in other respects have committed murder and other crimes. In many other respects they were gentlemen: but a gentleman cannot be a murderer or a criminal. Neither can he be a fibber or a trifler with the truth.

You know some very kindly good jolly hearty people that you cannot believe: but is it not a pity? are you not sorry that you cannot admire and love their truthfulness and manliness? would you not be glad to know they had resolved never to sell the truth again?

That is enough for this time but it will be continued again: bear in mind that the least violation of the pure and sacred truth is one step on the way to the hopelessly degraded condition of the miserable human wreck, who for a dollar or two swears at our courts to any falsehood he is asked.

THROUGH THE SNOW.

The cutter stopped before the gate—
Out sprang her highness lightly;
Half coy, half cool, this cruel Kate,
And altogether sightly.

In mock distress exclaimed she: "Oh!
How far we must have ridden!
For, under this fast falling snow,
The walk's entirely hidden!"

Entirely hidden it was, and more,
For, as the catch I lifted,
Six inches deep from gate to door
I saw the snow had drifted.

"Ugh!" shuddered she, "You lead the way!"
Was her command next spoken,
To hear at once was to obey:
And through the snow unbroken,

I stalked with steady, ample feet;
With lifted skirts she followed,
Dantily stepping while her neat
Foot-prints in mine were swallowed.

Back to her mirthful, puzzling face
I looked across my shoulder,
And wondered if she'd smile with grace
On me, should I grow bolder.

"Why may not you and I," I said,
"Through life thus walk together?
I'd break the way with happy tread
Through all life's snowy weather."

She did not answer me a word,
But one sweet glance permitted,
And then before me like a bird,
Into the house she flitted.

And through the snow and from the gloom
Her fairy foot-prints drew me
Into the cheerful cozy room,
Where love surrendered to me.

Ah! in our wedded life since then
Snow storms have broken o'er me;
But always into light again,
'Tis she has walked before me.

HINTS TO BOYS.

An English physician writes: "Let me give two or three hints to boys who use tobacco. Tobacco has spoiled and ruined thousands of boys, inducing a dangerous precocity, developing the passions, softening and weakening the bones, and greatly injuring the spinal marrow, the brain, and the whole of the nervous fluid. A boy who early smokes, is rarely known to make a man of much energy of character, and he generally lacks physical and muscular, as well as mental energy. I would particularly warn boys who want to rise in the world, to shun tobacco as a deadly poison.

"A few weeks ago, a youth arrived in this city to prosecute his studies with a view to a professional life. A week or two after his arrival, he was seized with paralysis in both legs, which advanced upward, till nearly all the lower half of his body was benumbed and apparently lifeless. There is little hope of his recovery. The cause of his disease was tobacco-smoking, a habit which he had early acquired, and persisted in to the time of his attack."

Dr. Copland. F. R. S., of England, says:

"The habit of smoking tobacco has given rise to the following ill effects, which have in numerous instances come nnder my observation, and that of other medical men with whom I am acquainted:

"1. Smoking prevents a healthy nutrition of the several structures of the body. Hence comes, especially in young persons, an arrest of the growth of the body; low stature; a pallid and sallow hue of the surface; an unhealthy supply of the blood, and weak bodily powers.

"2. "Smoking creates thirst and vital depression; and to remove these, the use of liquors is often resorted to. Thus two of the most debasing habits and vices are indulged in, to the injury of the individual, and to the injury and ruin of his offspring, if he becomes a father.

"3. Smoking weakens the nervous powers; favors a dreamy, imaginative, and imbecile state of existence; produces indolence and incapability of manly or continued exertion; and sinks its votary into a state of careless or maudlin inactivity and selfish enjoyment of vice. He ultimately becomes partially paralyzed in mind and body—he is subject to tremors and numerous nervous ailments. He dies a drivelling idiot. an imbecile paralytic, or a sufferer from internal organic disease, at an age many years short of the average duration of life."

A learned German doctor settled abroad, hearing of disaster to his native land. wished to deny himself some luxury that he might send home help. He concluded to give up the use of tobacco, and this is the way in which he speaks of the consequences:

"Since that day I have not smoked once, and, moreover, I believe this little sacrifice has been the means of preserving my health, I am on horseback all day in my duties as a doctor; formerly I suffered from attacks of vertigo, which obliged me to seize the neck of my horse for fear of falling. My memory had suffered greatly, and I had an increasing difficulty in finding the words I wanted when speaking; my legs were heavy and my feet dragged when walking. There was so little feeling in the left thigh that I often pinched it, fearing paralysis might have set in. But since I have left off my cigars, although I have not changed my mode of life in any other way, and in spite of the ten years which have passed away, and made me now sixty-two years old, all these symptoms, which appear to me nothing more than a slow intoxication induced by nicotine, have completely gone.

"It is very common here to see children of five or six with a cigar in the mouth. I can testify to the evil effects of tobacco amongst these children, whose faces are characterized by a paleness which is so surely a sign of the presence of nicotine."

Boys see men smoke, but they do not see what the men suffer, and the men themselves do not lay it to that cause. Even this doctor did not guess the cause of his ailments until after they had gone away with the tobacco. So long as tobacco is a poison it must hurt.

MY PIG.

BY JIMMY BROWN.

Well, I read the story. It told all about a good boy whose name was James, and his father was poor and so he kept a pig that cost him twenty-five cents, and when it grew up he sold it for thirty dollars, and he brought the money to his father and said, "Here father! take this, O how happy I am to help you when you're old and not good for much," and his father burst into tears, but I dont know what for; I wouldn't burst into tears much if anybody gave me thirty dollars; and said' "Bless you my noble boy, you and your sweet pig have saved me from a watery grave," or something like that.

It was a real good story and it made me feel like being likewise. So I resolved that I would get a little new pig for twenty-five cents, and keep it till it grew up, and then surprise father with twenty-nine dollars and keep one for myself as a reward for my good conduct. Only I made up my mind not to let anybody know about it till after the pig should be grown up, and then how the family would be delighted with my "thoughtful and generous act"! for that's what the paper said James's act was.

The next day I went to Farmer Smith, and got him to give me a little pig for nothing, only I agreed to help him weed his garden all summer. It was a beautiful pig, about as big as our baby, only it was a deal prettier, and its tail was elegant. I wrapped it up in an old shawl, and watched my chance and got it up into my room, which is on the third story. Then I took my trunk and emptied it, and bored some holes in it for air, and put the pig in it.

I had the best fun that ever was, all that day and the next, taking care of that dear little pig. I gave him one of my coats for a bed, and fed him on milk, and took him out of the trunk every little while for exercise. Nobody goes into my room very often except the girl to make the bed, and when she came I shut up the trunk, and she never suspected anything. I got a whole coal-scuttleful of the very best mud, and put it in the corner of the room for him to play in and when I heard Bridget coming, I meant to throw the bed-quilt over it, so she wouldn't suspect anything.

After I had him two days I heard mother say, "Seems to me I hear very queer noises every now and then up stairs." I knew what the matter was, but I never said anything, and I felt so happy when I thought what a good boy I was to raise a pig for my dear father.

But next day Bridget came down stairs in a terrible fright and declared that my chamber was bewitched or there were robbers in the house. Mother and father followed her up stairs all armed with pokers and shovels and all sorts of weapons. I followed in the rear and explained the whole matter, but to my intense disappointment in place of being made a hero as the story said James was, my father said it was necessary to give me a most decided tanning to teach me thoroly that his house was not a pigsty. This he proceeded to do and I never saw any more of the pig which had raised such fine hopes in my heart. I dont think now that the story about James was a pretty story at all.—Harpers Young People.

AS I FIRST SAW HIM.

I first saw him at a social party; he took but one glass of wine, and that at the urgent solicitation of a young lady to whom he had been introduced.

I next saw him, when he supposed he was unseen, taking a glass to satisfy a slight desire. He mocked at the thought of danger.

I next saw him, late in the evening, in the street, unable to walk home. I assisted him thither, and we parted.

I next saw him reeling out of a low groggery; a confused stare was on his countenance, and words of blasphemy were on his tongue, and shame was gone.

I saw him once more; he was cold and motionless, and was carried by his friends to his last resting-place. In the small procession that followed' every head was cast down. His father's gray hairs were going to his grave with sorrow. His mother wept that she had given birth to such a child.

I returned home, musing on his future state. I opened the Bible and read: "Be not deceived; drunkards shall not inherit the kingdom of God."

This is a sad story. Alas! that it should be true. When a boy, our friend was as happy and bright as any of us. More than once, when students together, did he sneer at my teetotalism; when I urged him to sign the pledge, he laughed at me, and scoffed at the bare suggestion of danger.

Poor Fred! his father had the glass on his table, and there the appetite was formed. Young men, beware of the first glass. Fathers, banish the glass from your tables, if you would not bury your sons as drunkards.—Watchman.

LETTER FROM THE G. S. J. W.

I think it is about time something was said about the gratuitous distribution of Temperance literature through the Juvenile department of the Grand Lodge of I. O. G. T. I therefore wish to state, that since I have had the honor to be entrusted with this work, I have sent out from my office, more than three thousand Rituals of Bands of Hope, each of these Rituals have 48 pages of printed matter, in which is found a Catechism for the young folks, containing sixteen lessons by Rev. James B. Dunn, and which are thought to be very excellent ones.

At a meeting of a large Band of Hope which had just been addressed by one of our celebrated temperance Orators from the East, the superintendent asked the gentleman what he thought of the lessons in the Band of Hope catechism and his reply was, nothing could be better, as the repeated exercises would fasten upon the youthful minds knowledge, that time could not efface. These lessons are upon the following subjects.

1. Origin and History of Temperance Societies.
2. Nature of Intoxicating Drinks.
3. Fermentation and Distillation Process.
4. Brewing.
5. Alcohol, its uses and effects.
6. Mixtures, of Intoxicating Drinks.
7. The Wines of Scripture.
8. Pauls advice to Timothy.
9. The Bible favors Abstinence.
10. Prohibition.
11. Tobacco.
12. Temperance definitions.
13. Profanity.
14. Guesses for Young and Old.

Besides these, over three thousand Badges with excellent mottoes on them, have also been gratuitously furnished to the members of our Bands, together with a large amount of leaflets of Song, which I am confident will do a great deal of good.

The Auburn Copying Company has an advertizement in this paper to which attention is directed. Their specialty is copying or reproducing portraits in India ink, water colors, crayon, albumen ink and oil, which they promise to do to the perfect satisfaction of their patrons. The Institution bears a first class name and its business is increasing and extending rapidly. They want an agent in every town to exhibit samples of their work and take orders from parties who desire to have faithful well executed portrait pictures. Application to be made to Milton Kennedy, General Agent, Visalia, one of our District Deputies, who pronounces the business an honorable and lucrative one.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

SACRAMENTAL WINE.

NUMBER FOUR.

There are but a very few of our otherwise well educated and intelligent people, who understand anything at all about the nature and properties of fermented wine; hence so many believe that the question of what the sacramental cup should contain is one of slight importance. Those who know what wine is, think differently.

Just as this article was commenced a paper from England presented itself opportunely, as if it desired to suggest an evidence of the importance of this enquiry. A major of the British army who writes from a christian stand point says therein,

"Under the fostering care of British rule, intemperance is rapidly spreading all over India, and in spite of the fact that drinking is regarded by some 240,000,000 of Hindoos as an unholy and filthy habit. The Koran prohibited the use of spirits to 120,000,009 of Mahomedans, and 300,000,000 of Christians are warned by their Bible against the seductive influence of wine."

It is a calamity indeed that the extension of christian civilization should afford opportunity for the establishment among the heathen of a far more demoralizing, vicious and destructive agency than any system of heathenism known. That calamity at this day is mainly due to the ignorance of christian people as to the nature and properties of alcoholic drinks, and a large measure of it is due to a misconception of the term "fruit of the vine," which in time past was universal, and largely prevails among christian people to-day.

Leaving aside for the present the question of how many wines there were of old, and who used them, let us consider the statement made last week, that in the new testament, the word wine is not once used in connection with the communion: but the "fruit of the vine is." Of that there is no doubt: there is nothtng ambiguous about it, and that fruit of the vine was to be drank new in the kingdom of Heaven.

Now the assertion is here made very positively, that fermented wine is not in any sense the fruit of the vine, nor can it ever be drank new in the Kingdom of Heaven or anywhere else. The word new dont at all apply to it, for it is rotten, corrupt, decayed and old, and never can be anything else.

To produce fermented wine of any kind, all that constitutes the fruit of the vine must first be rotted, putrified, destroyed. The fresh natural juice or the grape itself is the only fruit of the vine: it is a nourishing wholesome delicious food and no other food could be more emphatically pronounced a blessing. But in fementation all its food properties and its blessing qualities are utterly destroyed and obliterated, except the water: and the water is by no means the fruit of the vine. Every drop of it was appropriated by the vine from the earth and it nourished the vine and enabled it to bear fruit. The gluten of the grape has rotted out and has disappeared; the sugar has also decomposed and is transformed into another substance, as foreign to the grape and to the sugar as it is to the strawberry or the potato or the loaf of bread, from all of which the same sugar can be extracted and similarly transformed into alcohol, a thing which never existed in any fruit or grain or food.

Fermented wine then contains nothing of the vine except the water, a little coloring matter of the skin of the grape and an infinitesimal flavor: all the properties of the grape are absent, except these infinitesimal nonessentials, and even that exception has been thoroly polluted with rottenness and if they were clean they are in no wise food, nor the fruit of the vine.

In confirmation of this, after destroying all the gluten, the nourishing properties and the sugar of the fruit of the vine by fermentation, and having carried the process to that stage where we have produced what is called wine, let us continue that process or permit it to continue; in a short time our wine will be transformed into another liquid entirely different from the wine and from the grape: this is vinegar, as completely the fruit of the vine as the wine was. It has now about 5 per cent of acetic acid and the rest is water and some infinitesimal coloring and flavoring matter: the alcohol that made the wine has now disappeared, as the sugar in the grape did. The wine was 10 to 17 per cent of alcohol, the rest water and some vestiges of flavor about as substantial as the odor of a rose bud. The wine and vinegar are equally products of a rotting agency, which decomposing the sugar destroys all the Godgiven properties of the vine.

Again in place of arresting the ferment at the vinegar stage let it proceed and another transformation is accomplished: the completion of the rotting process. We have now water which has cleansed itself of all its putrescence, a little dirty decomposed sediment at the bottom, and the remainder of the rotted remnants of the fruit of the vine has gone off into its elementary gasses in the atmosphere. This last result of fermentation may assert an equal claim with the others to be the fruit of the vine.

But if we take the natural grape juice and boil and preserve it unfermented, there can be no possible question as to its being the veritable fruit of the vine, and it contains a blessing in its luscious healthgiving nourishment. There can be no doubt on that subject. Or if we should boil it down to a jelly or syrup or expel all the water and make it into a cake, all of these to be dissolved, when required for use, in pure water from the spring—we should have the pure fruit of the vine without doubt. Or if the thoroly dried fruit itself be restored in water it is surely the fruit of the vine without question.

In all these cases the properties of the vine are present, intact, pure, wholesome and with a blessing. In the fermented wine all the properties of the fruit are most conspicuously absent and the blessing that belonged to the "tirosh" from the hand of God, has been all stolen from it and perverted and rotted. In the place of the cup of blessing, Satan with masterly cunning and with a foresight of a future charged with woes unutterable for the human race, succeeded in times past when men slept, in substituting the cup of uncleanness and abomination and blasphemy: the wine that appopriately symbols the wrath of God.

THE R. W. G. L.

If that body is really going at this Session to do something to promote the interests of the cause and Order, it is to hoped something will be done to establish the annual Thanksgiving Collection and induce the Grand Lodge to accept it and make it general in connection with the various other organizations for the purposes of a national literature fund.

The need of a weekly Juvenile temperance paper is urgent. A monthly can never serve the purpose and keep up the interest that an equally suitable weekly can. The R. W. G. L. should be the foremost in some wise and general provision for a competent system of juvenile temperance education.

And it is to be hoped that our Pacific coast delegates will use their influence to induce the R. W. G. L. to withdraw all sanction and countenance if it ever gave any, to the malicious, puerile, contemptible lawsuit that somebody is running "versus Malins" in England, about an old forfeited charter; an action that can serve no possible worthy purpose, but subjects both parties to contemptuous ridicule on the part of outsiders. If the R. W. G. L. has any funds that are bursting the limits of their coin sacks, it would be much more creditable to donate them to the Negro fund which the excommunicated Bro. Malins is raising to teach temperance to our southern colored people. We ought not to forget that our Order makes a very strong profession of christian charity, and if it did not we ought to practice it all the same: a harrassing, useless, endless and solely malicious lawsuit is by no means an outgrowth of lofty christian impulses.

Particular attention is requested to the letter of Mrs. M. E. Congdon in this issue. About three months ago the Rescue remarked that the Cal. W. C. T. U. did not appear to be as actively engaged in practical work as their Eastern sisters, which it is believed was very true at that time.

It is very much more pleasant to bear witness now to their activity in pushing one of the most excellent methods of advancing the temperance reform that has ever been devised. If it is possible to devise any way of stimulating the Good Templars of this state to waken up to do something in this most practical direction they will owe the W. C. T. U. and Miss A. R. Congdon a debt of gratitude; to the latter for suggesting the idea of those prizes, and to the former for putting the experiment to immediate test.

And it is especially gratifying to hear that there is an activity in Grass Valley and Nevada on the part of the W. C. T. U., where an active working temperance society is much needed to do some work for temperance rather than for working up what the chronicle writes up as "society events."

In Nevada City an election for two school trustees was held on Saturday last. G. S. Hupp and M. L. Marsh were elected receiving 497 votes against 50 cast at the school election of last year. Thomas H. Carr, a Catholic and public school smasher of the Zac Montgomery stripe received 110 votes only, altho the anti school disciples worked hard for him. People may have wondered for what purpose American citizens were made, who fight the public schools. But there is one use to which they can be put with eminent advantage to the public welfare. They are the very best material in the world to work up into defeated candidates at elections, and save a waste of worthy men in that direction. There seems to be nothing made in vain, not even the mosquito and Zac Montgomery.

LICENSE—LOCAL OPTION—TOTAL PROHIBITION.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. TWO.

We have seen that general license has failed to regulate or suppress the rum traffic. If any license law ever commanded respect it was due to its prohibitory features. Let us now examine into the principle of Local Option, as it is called, which permits each town or city to decide by vote whether the liquor traffic shall exist or not, within their respective limits. Some good, conscientious temperance people think they see in this plan local prohibition, and on the principle that half a loaf is better than no bread, accept and advocate this principle. We assume that the ultimate object of all temperance men is total prohibition, that prohibits drinking and prevents drunkenness, that stops this business of drunkard making everywhere. But that is not local prohibition, a prohibition in spots, which fails to diminish drunkenness in the aggregate, or fails to prevent its own citizens from getting drunk. We cannot see how one town has got prohibition that prohibits, when an adjoining town is allowed to sell to the guzzlers of both. Hence we cannot see any prohibition in that measure which allows whisky shops to be opened under the sanction of law in one place to supply those from abroad who cannot buy it at home. Is there not a fallacy in this local option principle? Is it anything more or less than license based upon the popular will? with this inconsistency that we will punish a man in one town for that which in another he is authorized to do without punishment; for a refusal to prohibit an existing traffic amounts practically to an authorization.

We hope the friends of this measure will ponder well the practical inefficiency that is sure to follow its adoption. We believe that this proposition to suppress the rum traffic only when and where the people ask for it, is a deception and retrograde movement that will defeat its own avowed end. It does not allow each town to regulate this matter to suit itself.

Then it completely surrenders our cities and large villages to the rum power, and thus dram shops will flourish under the sanction of law in those very places which need restraint the most, where crime is abundant and vice predominates; and all because the criminal classes desire it so. This vicious element is sufficient to defeat prohibition in every city of the state. The rum traffic is not a matter of local interest merely. It concerns the whole people. Our cities mould the manners, morals in fact the entire life of the state,

Give us the power to make them moral, and we will change the moral character of the state. But degrade them, surrender them by law to the rum power, and by just so much you drag down the sentiment of the entire state. Hence this question concerns the entire state, and should be controlled by the state. We want the power of the state to protect the thousands of our young men who are flocking to cities from the restraints of home in the rural districts, where a new generation of drunkards shall receive their first lessons in dram drinking.

For most half a century we have been asking government, as the protector of person and property, to prohibit the rum traffic because it is a crime against society; but now we are to be driven from this great stronghold, and say to the people, you can vote rum up or down, just as you please.

Is it not a practical concession that the traffic is not a crime, and when this point is once yielded, all further legislation ceases. No town or city or county has power to prohibit the traffic as a crime, and unless it is so prohibited the prohibition is good for nothing; hence local option and prohibition are eternal opposites, and they never can coalesce. It is the criminal character of the traffic that calls for prohibition. We oppose the traffic as a crime. Let us continue to ask for its suppression as a crime, which is impossible by local option.

Depend upon it, we must ask for more or take less. We must go further than local option or not go at all.

Let us have free rum rather than befool ourselves with local option under the idea that we shall have "prohibition in spots," and an easier path to victory. Local option is a snare; it lowers the moral tone of this movement, and disqualifies its friends for decisive action. Local option was tried in New York State in 1845–6–7, and found wanting. It worked badly, and drunkenness was not materially diminished, and it was abandoned,

And recent efforts in this direction in various states show that the rum power is as much opposed to local option as to total prohibition. It is opposed to all restrictive legislation. It has no regard for honor; it hears no cry of remonstrance, and no appeal for quarter. Merciless and relentless, it spares none, and yet men insult our common sense and religion by advising either submission to its brazen impudence, or an inglorious surrender of the ground we have gained. In the face of this desperate, shameless and reckless foe, we are talking of diplomacy and political strategy, when God demands relentless war.

If we ask why this change of base from total prohibition to local option, it is confessed that it is merely for prudential reasons. Expediency demands it.

Suppose it might do a little good in some places, and we confess it might, yet the good it would do is incomparably less than the harm it would do.

Let us not lower the moral tone of this movement against this giant iniquity by wasting our strength on a measure which proclaims that the crime of crimes which kills is so insignificant that it may be remitted to local corporations, and its existence and punishment conditioned upon the popular will—all admit that the power of making criminal law, and deciding what is crime belongs to the state, and to it alone, and that belonging there it has no right to delegate its powers, nor to frame a law which shall punish a man in one town for that which in another town is permitted under the protection of law.

We ask a candid consideration of these points by all temperance men and women. Local option is a fallacy; it is a retrograde movement in our opinion, and offers no easier path to final victory than out and out total, absolute constitutional Prohibition.

This we shall consider in our next article.

The relative results of a local option law and a totally prohibitory law are something like what is stated above. But there are one or two omissions in the article. The local option law dont at all permit the sale of liquor in one or any place. The law now forces the sale everywhere, and a local option law only permits the people to rid themselves of the curse where they have a majority vote. The question is only this "is it better to let the rum traffic go on forever all over the state or try to stop it in one-half, two-thirds, and finally in all the counties and cities ?"

In New York the failure of the local option law was not because it did not work well, but because they elected rummies to enforce the law, and it fell thru exactly as New York's prohibitory law did. The women's crusade did not abolish the sale of liquor: it did not tolerate it, but the women did the only thing they could do, and a prohibitory law will grow out of their work. If every minister and temperance professor would write and preach and talk like Mr. Fitch, we could go for a prohibitory law now. In that case, every word he has said would apply exactly. But they dont. We have lodges 100 strong, that would not perhaps give five votes for prohibition, because they never hear or read a word of it, or of local option either. Same with the churches; lots of them would not give a five per cent vote for prohibition, because they never heard a word about the temperance question. A revival has been carried on for five months, and the subject of practical temperance has never been touched, nor the least movement made to disturb the grogshop. There are but a handful of real prohibitionists in the state, and they get no sympathy from elsewhere. But there are many who would consent to help a movement that would permit a county or city to vote itself clear of the rum curse. One thing is cheerfully conceded that were there any show for securing general prohibition, it would be assuredly treason to advocate local option or any other imperfect measure. But local option only permits to prohibit; it dont permit or recognize or assent to any license.

NEXT week there will doubtless be another letter from Julia Colman who has done so much for the instruction of the young. It is to be hoped the Superintendents of the Juvenile Societies will attentively peruse Miss Colman's articles. The report from Guerneville Temple in last weeks number was a very prettily worded one and indicates the excellent educational influences which that Temple has exercised upon its members. No word has come from the other that was called upon.

JEWISH persecutions are still prevalent in Germany and breaking out in Russia. That is a pretty sure sign that the Jews are better citizens than their drunken pauperized incapable neighbors and thus excite their jealousy.

PRESIDENT HAYES denies the wretched falsehood published in the Philadelphia Times charging him with drinking. The enemies of temperance have been manufacturing false witness against honest men, for the last fifty years.

A PROMINENT active California Good Templar says "if the RESCUE conld be placed in every family in the state, we could win this war in California in one year, and that it is the only power by which we can reach, teach and lead the multitude;" most of the other Good Templars seem to think it best to keep it from reaching any of the families of the state.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died at Dutch Flat, Placer county, Cal., Apr 18th Mrs Annie E. Chadbourn, aged 21 years, a faithful and consistent member of Nil Desperandum Lodge. The lodge passed fitting resolutions of respect and affection for the memory of the deceased, and of sympathy for her family and friends.

RAILROAD SALOONS.

It is a pity that the C. P. R. R. Co., an immense millionaire corporation should, as a matter of taste and preference, choose to cast their lot in with the outlaws and malefactors whose infamous traffic and business has pauperized this state to a great extent, and has rendered any moral or financial progress impossible in a country which always had and still has the most brilliant capabilities and resources of wealth and improvement, that have ever been possessed by any country in the world.

Men who have had the capacity to amass so many millions in so short a time, and the astuteness to manage and protect their general interests so successfully, cannot be blind to the following facts: that every saloon in the state is a tax upon every business, and a destroyer of its financial prosperity; that every drunkard manufactured is a customer forever spoiled for paying any freight or fare to the company; that the grogshops of the C. P. R. R. 600 or 800 of them, and all the other grogshops keep in hopeless poverty and uselessness and crime and bondage, tens of thousands who, were there no grogshops, would many of them be purchasers of tracts of R. R. lands, producers of fabulous tons of wheat for transport, would establish useful, productive enterprises, and every one of them would furnish freight and fare for the railroad, in sums of a few dollars up to thousands every year.

They must know that the grogshop and the combined hosts of iniquity which it sets and keeps in motion, have prevented the filling up of this state with a worthy population, and have attracted an unusually large turbulent and predatory class; that the grogshop has driven many thounands of the very best citizens out of the state by paralyzing all business and destroying the value of property so as to prevent their employment here or their embarking in any profitable enterprise or industry.

They must be aware that altho they draw a rental from their blow holes of perdition, they are destroyers of their revenues to a much greater amount, and that every day any of their rented dens of infamy may cause them to answer claims for hundreds of thousands of dollars for life and limb destroyed by a grogshop railroad accident, occurring thru their mantraps set for other people, having caught one of their own officers and rendered him incapable of duty.

The railroad principals have recorded their own opinion of the character of their own mantraps in their general order, which threatens their employees with discharge if they are found patronizing their masters' decoy baits during their hours of duty. Employee might ask employer if my crime in tasting of the bait of that mantrap deserves instant dismissal from my means of livelihood, how do you assess your crime in setting that baited snare for me and others?

And when we know that men who have acquired a fondness for liquor will helplessly drink it, till they know this last drink will kill them, we can all tell how much this prohibition of the company will deter an employee who loves whisky, from indulging when the temptation is put before him.

If the railroad magnates should really be so blind as to believe the dens of infamy with which they have cursed every community where they have located a depot really add to their revenues, there is certainly no neccessity for them to descend to such a business for gain, as is properly punished in well regulated moral communities with fine and imprisonment, and will probably, some day soon, have to be punished with death as murder is now, that is committed by less disgraceful and much more excusable methods. If any other paper religious or secular in the State or any other professors of decency and morality had the manliness and courage to express their opinions publicly as to this outrage perpetrated upon the public, of attaching a drunkard factory to every depot and ferry boat of the C. P. R. R. Co.; if they dared to criticize the public acts of men who have power to issue railroad passes, we might hope to see that corporation some day ashamed of their present complicity with crime, but as no one dares complain of it but the Rescue, we may expect to see it continue till the law is invoked for its suppression. And those who sit in complacent silence and approval, are partners in whatever guilt and shame attaches to this towering iniquity.

THE JESUITS; A LITTLE HISTORY.

Father Buchard may commend the Catholic religion as much as he chooses, and plead the cause of his Jesuits who have kept themselves and every community they ever infested in hot water, and he will not be questioned from this quarter. There can be no doubt that some people are better as Catholics than they would be as Protestants, and that there are thousands of earnest sincere and excellent christians of the Roman Catholic faith. Better by far to be Roman Catholic than unbelieving or what some people designate "liberal,"

But when Mr. Buchard asserts that "in the front rank of the enemies of the Society of Jesus stood Protestantism, which after failing in many diabolical schemes to exterminate the society entirely, was ultimately forced to retreat and divide itself into factions"—if he knows anything at all of the history of that society, if he has not derived all his information ignorantly, from poisoned wells of falsehood —he knows that he is telling a monstrously malicious, wilful and impudent lie that has no shadow of foundation. In the present relations between Protestants and Jesuits, when the latter have been only preserved by the Protestants from extermination by the Catholics, the lie is peculiarly brazen and scandalous.

The Jesuits have been a secret conclave of conspirators from the first: they have conspired against every government that has harbored them, and most particularly have they been active, treacherous and unscrupulous conspirators to secure for themselves the domination of the Catholic Church, and to prevent the correction of any abuse that ever existed in it.

Every persecution they have been subjected to has come from the Catholic Church or from some government whose people were exclusively Catholic, with the bare exception of a short time when England hunted up a few of them, who were fomenting treason and rebellion and assassination and "gunpowder plots" in that country. But in almost every Catholic country they have been expelled time and again by Catholics. About 50 years after the formation of the society it was expelled from France (in 1594) not for religion's sake, but for political conspiracy; reinstated there they continued again in political troubles of all kinds till their expulsion in 1764 by Catholics. In 1606 they were expelled from Venice by Catholics. In 1759 expelled from Portugal and have never been able to regain a footing there; they were restored in 1832 and expelled in 1833 and probably there was not one protestant against them in Portugal. In 1767 they were expelled from Catholic Spain with great severity, and immediately after from Naples, Parma and Modena, where probably there was not a single Protestant.

In 1773 the Pope in the name of "our Lord and Redeemer" suppressed the whole Order in all Catholic countries; and it existed only by sufferance in Catholic countries till 1814, In Spain again they were suppressed in 1820, restored in 1825 and suppressed in 1835.

They have been expelled from about every Catholic country in the new World aud have always when expelled, found a kindly asylum and protection in Protestant countries. Of late their unceasing political intrigues have got them into some little hardships in Germany. But in return for all their machinations against protestants and protestantism, for establishing the inqnisition wherever they could to torture "heretics," the Protestants have saved them from their Catholic enemies, have protected them tnd treated them with no shadow of injustice.

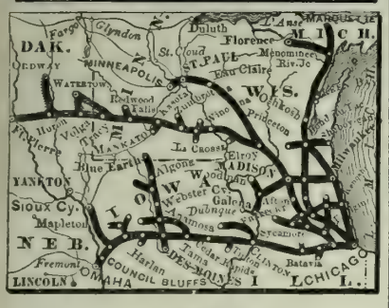
Therefore it is in exceedingly bad taste and exhibits a spirit of venomous malice and unscrupulous falsehood, for any one, who is enjoying a security among protestants which he could find in no Catholic country in the world, to give utterance to such a monstrous fabrication as that used by Mr Buchard; Such a man dont deserve the title of Reverend but is a disgrace to the Catholic church, as is any one who maliciously and falsely sows dissension on either side.

THE BEST ON TOP.

In a report upon the recent exhibitions of raisins, packers were recommended not to leave the stalks prominently in sight. There ought not to be more than the average amount of stalk visible, but whatever is on the top ought to be as near as possible an exact facsimile of what is in the middle and at the bottom.

Mr. Charles K. Landis the founder of Vineland, has probably been provided with the best financial head and brain of all the men of his age. In the inauguration of his colony he seemed to think of, foresee and provide for every possible chance and circumstance that could be pressed into the service of Vineland to promote its financial interests. And with equal foresight he sought to keep out of Vineland everything and every class of men or principles that could retard its financial progress.

He urged his colonists above all things to avoid the rascally and contemptible practice of putting the best berries and fruit on the top of the box or basket, and the result was, that the parties who took his advice very soon found that their label on the boxes was a sufficient recommendation to secure their fruit the first sale and the highest price in the market everytime.



Common sense ought to teach all of us that such would certainly be the result of that procedure here or anywhere; that if any fruit dealer or colony of fruit and grape raisers were known every time to pack their fruit always of the same quality, top, middle and bottom, their label or brand would inevitably secure the exclusive first sale and a higher price than any fraud.

For it is a fraud and a lie to pack strawberries for instance, large, full, ripe, sweet red berries carefully covering the rest, and underneath them a sour, unripe, unwholesome mess of ragged useless trash, that is not worth one tenth as much per pound as as that on the top. It is precisely a similar act to that of the chinaman who splits a $20 or a $1 piece, and after scooping out the interior, fills it up with lead, covers it up skilfully and passes it for the face, It is a fraud and a falsehood, and a very mean sample of both, to make the top any better than the rest.

Avarice is always blind and leads blind people to do these despicable cheats: that almost everybody does this does not in the least justify the act. People who value their own self respect should abandon this vicious custom, which teaches their children lessons of dishonesty. And it will pay too in this instance, as in all others to be honest.

There is a good chance for some of our fruit and raisin colonies to get a good name from the start, by packing their fruit honestly and labeling it accordingly. And the same opportunity for the favorable report that brings reward to guaranteed honest dealing, is open to some fruit raisers everywhere; for some will prefer still to follow the shallow artifices of the constitutional and unreclaimable cheat.

THE RESCUE,

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institu ion. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

It will be under the immediate control and management of Enterprise Lodge, No. 356, I. O. G. T.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE,

Below is a list of a few of the most useful and excellent works with which every reformer should be supplied, and in which he should be well posted:

BACCHUS DETHRONED.— A Prize Essay; Cloth, $1; paper edition, 50c.
Completely masters the whole subject. Everybody ought to have it.

TEMPERANCE LESSON BOOK.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., M. D., LL. D., F. R. S. 220 pp. Cloth, 50c.; paper, 25c.
This is a series of short lessons on alcohol and its action on the body, accompanied with suitable questions, designed for study in public and private schools, and reading in schools and families. Send for it; read what this brightest and and best of medical scientists has discovered regarding all kinds of drinks; be sure to lend it to your family doctor.

TEN LECTURES ON ALCOHOL.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., F. R. S. Comprising the six Cantor Lectures: "Action of Alcohol on the Body and on the Mind," "Moderate Drinking," "The Medical Profession," and "The Liberty of the Abject." 338 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.
The ablest and cheapest lectures ever presented to the American public,

ON ALCOHOL.—By Dr. B. W. Richardson, F. R. S., of London. 12mo., 190 pages. Six "Cantor Lectures," showing the nature and effect of alcohol on the body and mind. Cloth, 75c.; paper, 25c.

OUR WASTED RESOURCES.—By Dr. Wm. Hargreaves. 12mo., 202 pages. The Missing Link in the Temperance Reform, giving the most valuable statistics ever published. Price in cloth, $1.50; paper edition, 50c.

This book contains ten sermons and talks by this eminent divine. They are filled with sound, convincing arguments against the lawfulness, morality and necessity of the liquor-traffic, as well as stirring appeals to all Christian men and women to take a firm, decided, out-spoken stand in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, Send for that and lend it to the ministers in your vicinity.

ALCOHOL AND THE STATE.—A discussion of the problem of law as applied to the liquor-traffic. By Robert C. Pitman, L.L.D., Associate Judge of Superior Court of Massachusetts. 12mo. 411 pages, $1 50.
It is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. It shows that the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the State; and the foe of all the objects for which the State exists; and presents such strong arguments, statistics, appeals, authorities, as will add greatly to an intelligent and wise solution of the Liquor Problem. The economy and legislative aspects of the Alcoholic discussion have never been so ably presented, and it should be in the hands of every citizen nd in every library in the land.

THE MEDICAL USE OF ALCOHOL.—95 pages. By James Edmunds, M. D., of London. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 60c.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND ALCOHOL.—12 mo., 33 pages. By B. W. Richardson, M. D., 10c.

PROHIBITION DOES PROHIBIT; OR PROHIBITION NOT A FAITURE.—12mo, 48 pages. By J. N. Stearns, 10c.

MODERATE DRINKING.—For and Against, from Scientific Points of View. By B. W. Richardson, M. D. 12mo, 48 pages. Paper, 20c.

BEER AS A BEVERAGE.—24 pages. An Address by Rev. W. Hughey, in reply to the Appeal of the Beer Congress, 10c.

ALCOHOL AND THE HUMAN BRAIN.—By Rev. Joseph Cook. 12mo, 24 pp. An able scientific address, 10c.

JULIA COLMAN'S WORKS.

SPECIMEN SETS.—Beer Tracts, Handbills, etc., 6 cents; Leaflets and Children's Tracts, 5c.; Tracts and Leaflets on Wine, 5c.; File case set of Union Leaflets, 18c.; File case set of Children's Tracts, 25c.

These file cases are of strong manila paper, nicely lettered, and they open like a port-folio, disclosing the sets; can be closed and fastened with a rubber ring; can be used for specimens for a long time, and are a great convenience in the use of tracts.

Contains full directions for the management of young and older people and children, in the study of the nature and effects of alcohol, so that they may never be tempted to learn by experience. The school is conducted on the model of the Sunday-school, both because that is a proper model and because people thus learn with so little explanation. Hundreds of these schools are being opened and are becoming very popular. The Text Books used in this Temperance School are

A work for the children. Simple, direct, concise and popular. They enjoy it much; study and learn to recite it all through—and explain it, too, provided the teacher uses also the

The object of this book is to assist the teachers in the use of the catechism on alcohol. It is arranged in short lessons, each of which is accompanied with a note giving directions for simple experiments, object lessons, blackboard exercises, followed by a little lecture on the above methods with facts and illustrations and incidents which may be used by the teacher. Every teacher and reader recognizes this Manual and Catechism to be just the thing needed: their suggestions and deductions are those of a thorough practical teacher, completely armed and equipped for that duty. No better help to temperance education has ever been produced; probably nothing that comes near it in usefulness.

These three works are especially intended for use in temperance organizations of various kinds, and there are many helps to go with them, such as the children's tracts above named, one of which is selected for each lesson. Then there are

RIPPLES OF SONG.—Paper, 15c,; boards ($1.60 per doz.), 18c.,

CHROMO TEXT CARDS.—Per 100, $1. Sewall's Stomach Plates, $9. same, mounted on rollers, $12.

And many others named and priced in the Temperance School above named. For teaching Temperance in the Day School, a movement coming now into very general favor, the new book has been prepared, entitled

An elementary text book for schools. This work is approved by the most experienced and distinguished advocates of Temperance

Miss Colman is always promptly willing to answer questions, and give explanations and make selections with the most scrupulous attention for all who call for her services in the line of temperance literature, and the RESCUE particularly recommends its readers to make liberal use of her admirable publications, and to apply for them at once at her new address,

MISS JULIA COLMAN,
54 Bible House, New York City, N. Y.

☞To get all the works in the two lists above, including 1,100 beer tracts and 1,000 leaflets, will cost about $11 if the books are bound in cloth, or $8 if in paper covers. Every lodge ought to get just the entire outfit at once, well bound for the use of its members.

BOARD OF LADY MANAGERS REPORT.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 4, 1881.

The Board of Lady Managers met at the Bernard House, Vallejo, on Monday May 2nd. Called to order at eight P. M. by the President, Mrs. Thompson.

Present at roll-call, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Alsip, Mrs. Carpentor, Mrs Robbins, and Mrs. Mayhew G. W. V. T.

Absent, Mrs. Benjamin, Mrs. Partridge, and Mrs. Rix. Mrs. Wm. H. Mills of Sacramento, being present, was invited to meet with the Ladies.

Minutes of last meeting read and approved. Officers reports read, and in each case accepted. Reports from, Standing and Special Committees read and accepted.

Applications for the admission of children to the Home, read, and referred to the Secretary with instructions to obtain all information required by our rules, concerning the applicants. In each case where such information proves satisfactory, the children will be received. Several applications were also received for the adoption of children. Many are anxious to obtain a girl. Such parties we are compelled to disappoint. There are none eligible at the present time. The Board voted a boy to Bro. John Sargent of Groveland, also one to Bro. A. VanCampen of Plainsburg.

The hour being late, the Board adjourned to meet the next morning at the Home to complete the work.

Tuesday morning May 3rd. The Board was again called to order. The roll being called, Mrs. Benjamin was noted present. Mrs. Mills of Sacramento and Mrs. Wright of Vallejo, being present, were invited to remain with the Ladies during the transaction of business.

Bills were examined, approved and warrants ordered drawn on the Treasurer for the several amounts.

Communications, read and filed. Matrons report was then submitted. From that we learned, that the present number of children in the Home is 103, number admitted during the quarter, nine, discharged ten, deceased two.

After the disposal of some miscellaneous business the Board took a recess, and met in joint session with the Board of Trustees. One hour having been spent in disposing of matters requiring joint action, a motion to adjourn was carried, and the ladies withdrew.

The Board of Managers reassembled to conclude their work. Mrs. Mayhew, G. W. V. T. presented to the Home four handsome bedquilts, the result of her own handiwork. A vote of thanks was tendered to the sister for the gift.

Donations received since the last report. Cash receipts from the following lodges, in consideration of Orphan Home Christmas fund.

Eagleville Lodge, No. 229....$1.00
Two Rock Lodge, No. 378....$1.00
Ferndale Lodge, No. 400....$1.00

Miscellaneous donations: From an unknown friend, several pairs of infant's shoes, and small aprons. From Mr. Skinner of Vallejo, five dozen eggs. Mr. Crotty, two dozen. From the vegetable man serving the Home, four dozen. These eggs were given for the children to have on Easter Sunday. From William Peck & Co. of San Francisco two dozen bottles of Worcestershire sauce. From Mr. Ray, two boxes of strawberries for the nursery children.

A vote of thanks was tendered to the donors, nothing further appearing, the Board adjourned to meet again, Tuesday June 7th.

Subjoined are a few notes of interest. Our readers will remember that at the February meeting we reported a great deal of sickness in the Home—we regret to say, it has continued since to an alarming extent. The Board were forced to refuse admission to children for their personal benefit, we have had bilious remittent, and typhoid fever, and pneumonia. The physician has been in constant attendance, nurses have been provided. and all has been done, that could be, for the comfort of the children. The Trustees believing there must be some local cause for this continued sickness, determined to hold a special meeting of investigation. Bro. Mills President of that Board called a meeting, for the 31st of March. The result of their labors, established the fact, that the drainage had become imperfect, from the worn condition of the pipes, a plumber was secured from Sacramento and immediately put to work to remedy the evil, and we are pleased to report the effort a complete success.

The new school-house is nearly completed, and does credit to the designer. The class rooms are large, well ventilated, and cheerful, as the sun lies in them all day. We are confident every Good Templar that beholds this building will rejoice to remember that each have an interest in, and have added their mite, towards the erection of a structure giving so much comfort to the children, and enabling the managers to further fulfil their mission of mercy, by making room for the reception of others in the Home building—the ladies are grateful to the Order for the cheerful response to the recommendation embodied in the annual report, at the last session of Grand Lodge.

A brick oven for baking the bread for Home consumption, has been built, It has a capacity for baking 194 loaves at one time, this is a great assistance in despatching the work—expeditiously and at less expense.

We are happy to report the children, all convalescent at the time of the meeting, and earnestly hope we shall be able to report them well, from this time forth. Respectfully Submitted in F. H. and C. MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, Sec. B. L. M.

IF NEAL DOW.

If Neal Dow had been elected President in place of Mr. Garfield, would it ever have occurred to the W. C. T. U. anywhere to call upon Christian people to pray that our president Dow might be prevented by Divine influence from opening the White House of the nation as a grogshop and drunkery, as it used to be before the term of Mr. Hayes?

Would it ever have been necessary for Christian or other people to petition President Neal Dow that he would not allow the laws of the U. S. to be evaded through an infamous sham, and the rum sellers turned loose to slaughter the Alaska Indians?

Would it ever have occurred to any one to petition President Dow that he would reconsider his revocation of the order of President Hayes which prohibited the post traders from robbing and butchering the U. S. soldiers at the military posts any more?

Would it ever have occurred to President Dow, that it would make him popular and help his reelection if he gave the rum fiends full license to destroy and debauch the American army?

If we had elected Neal Dow and had to send prayers to Heaven and petitions to Washington to keep our president from going into the beerdive business entering into partnership with the whisky and beer rings, or from committing petty crimes of any kind, would not our friends call round and tell us we had thrown away our votes, and thrown them away very cheaply too?

There is something indescribably "funny" in the idea of voting enthusiastically for a President and then praying that he wont join with the country's deadliest enemies and destroy us. People who do so should not laugh at those who may vote for Denis Kearney for President some day.

Editorials and communications all crowded out.

THE OLD SHIP.

"The ship is old," he said, but she and I
Have sailed for many a year the restless deep,
Making our stormy story on the deep;
In doubtful ways where streaming clouds hung nigh:
In perilous ways, where oft with woful cry
We've heard the drowning sink to their last sleep.

"I think I shall not part in storm or gale,
She has not failed us once through weary years;
She's known my hand upon her helm for years.
Some day, when great winds blow and tempests wail
While every man stands to his post, we'll sail
Into that sea whence no man ever steers."

The words rang in my heart: and sleeping so,
I said unto the ship, "In wildwoods green
Thy mates in freest life are strong and green;
Their branches in the woods to fresh winds blow,
And at their roots the sweet wild blossoms grow;
In the fair forest thou had happier been.

"Not so, not so," the tossing ship replied.
"Though daily winds and storms I have withstood,
Though oft the battle's storm I have withstood,
Mind of man's mind together we've defied
The canon's rage, the tempest's wind and tide.
Grander such life than bowing in the wood.

"The forest trees shall find a slow decay,
I shall go down at once; the mighty deep
Shall find me room below her lowest deep;
I and the noble hearts I bear, some day,
Doing our very best shall pass away,
And men in honor shall our memory keep."

The dream was but a parable, Dear heart,
The sternest duty is the sweetest rest;
The constant duty is the surest rest:
Be glad if storm and struggle are thy part;
If Death should walk with Duty, do not start.
Called from thy work! Ah, surely that is best!

"IN THE CURRENT."

Life is a smooth placid stream; now and then stirred by restless currents of temptation—circling eddies that unite and merge in roaring whirlpools of endless ruin.

Many a young man—many an elderly one has encountered these currents as they voyaged onward—little temptations seemingly trivial and of no moment at the time—the first sip of red wine—the first glass of beer, proffered to them, perhaps by a and they trusted, and their frail bark has insensibly drifted into a channel whose waters flow stronger and swifter until they are borne unresistingly on to the great maelstrom of woe.

We have a citation of this in the evidence given by our suffering "Victim of the wine cup" in Anaheim or vicinity.

That husband was once doubtless the idol of a fond trusting heart, the light and joy of a happy home, yet he fell in the current and is now being carried along fiercely, madly, toward the seething vortex that engulfs eternally.

The wail of that desolate broken heart, bears in its sad lament, a terrible denunciation of the christians of Anaheim—Did we say christians?—We mistake—No christian, truly and savingly imbued with the spirit of the master, ever yet proffered to his brother, the cup of poison that was to hurl him into a drunkard's grave.

In their hypocritical guise, they bear affinity to the class, whom, our Saviour rebuked when he said "Ye make the outside of the platter clean, but inside ye are full of ravening and wickedness;" their outward semblance and fair professions only cloak a Pharisee's heart.

We appeal to temperance workers to look after this insidious evil that is sapping their best endeavors to promote abstinence, and while waging an aggressive war against the rumseller and manufacturer, not to let people of seeming respectability, wrap the cloak of christianity around them and give forth death, ruin and woe to their neighbor.

The influence of example governs all humanity, be it for good or evil; hence how very important it becomes for those who have professed Christ and His righteousness to abstain from those things that make their brother to offend.

It is not from Anaheim alone that the cry arises, of a hypocritical cloaking of sentiments; for Riverside too affords its Christian (?) tipplers.

Oh, when will it be otherwise? When will dawn the era that shall witness no such inconsistent blending of sin and righteousness,—no amalgamation of right and wrong in our churches—the day when pure christianity shall not stand partially but wholly arrayed against intemperance?.

God defends the right and He will crown earnest prayerful effort with success. The tears and lamentations of drunkard's wives and children fall not upon His ear unheeded, for tender, compassionate, and merciful are all His ways.

Earnest, noble—hearted men and women are enlisted in this good work, giving time, talent and money to the subjugation of this monster evil, and must it be said, and shall they feel, that the most insidious foe they have to fear or contend with is a perverting christian influence?

We leave this question for every church member to answer. "BEULAH"

Riverside, May 2nd. 1881.

GAVAZZI.

We have schools for the instruction of boys and girls, and night schools also. Sixteen schools attached to the congregations with a corps of 21 competent teachers and a scholarship of 1800 pupils. Even the Catholics send us their children, knowing the superior education we can give them to what they can receive in the convents and papal schools. They have no rival in Italy.

When popish Italy sends her children to Christian schools for better education it is a burning shame for American people to send their children to Roman Institutions and their daughters to Catholic convents on the plea of acquiring superior attainments. Shame! shame on you! When you expect them to be better educated there, you know it is wrong; you know it is a lie, a gigantic lie. They are being taught by Jesuits. You in this country know nothing about them. We in Italy know them and know them to be the worst enemies to civil and religious liberty. To show how they have kept Italy down intellectually, I will tell you that out of 27,000,000 people 17,000,000 are unable to read or write. Believe this from an Italian, that they (the papists) believe all Protestants to be damned heretics. I am here as an independent Italian—a preacher of the gospel—one who is afraid of nobody As a parting assertion in this city of San Frsncisco, I say that all parties who send their children to the Romish schools and convents are the moral murderers of their children, and do not deserve the name of parents.

We have established in Rome a regular theological college, and have four professors and seventeen bright students—a good staff of future evangelists—that college has been my aim and I desire its success as the crown of my hopes and efforts. It is on a site near the Vatican, there is nothing else Protesant in Rome so near the Vatican. When I am in Rome, which is about six months of the year, I write a lecture every week against the Pope. My desk at the window of the college faces the window of the Popes apartment, and when he in white appears at his window and sees me in black at mine writing, he grumbles bitterly. Let him grumble to his hearts satisfaction or let him roar which is a better term in accordance with his name for he is called Pope Leo, Leo is the latin for lion and the voice of the lion is heard as a roar. Pray for our church, for without prayers we can do nothing.

In parting from my kind audience and from California, let me tell you that I started from Italy in my 73rd year, came to this country over 8000 miles from my home in the fond hope that our work would be able to go on by the collections I would receive. Do not disappoint me. Let me appeal to your heart, to your feelings.

In coming to America, this third and last time, I found something that struck me. I cannot read a book, paper or magazine without learning everything here is on the grandest scale. I buy three guide books, and I learn that you have the biggest cataracts, falls, trees, valleys in the world, when I get to Benicia I am told I am on the biggest ferryboat in the world; when I arrive in San Francisco at the Palace they tell me it is the largest hotel in the world, therefore your collection to-night should be the biggest collection in the world. Your reputation is now at stake.

We have a proverb in Italy that a beggar in coming for alms the last time before leaving the country is given a double portion on assuring the donors he is never to return. I am here for the last time, I do not think I will ever return to America, this is probably the last time I will ever leave my Italy, therefore I ought to get double the biggest collection in the world, and our free church will rejoice. May God bless you all without one single exception.

SUGAR IS DOWN.—By the barrel we now sell extra fine cube 11¼cents; extra granulated 10¾ cents; golden C., 9¼cents; coffee very cheap by the bag. All goods at wholesale, at lowest rates. Send for special price list. San Francisco grocery 519 Post street, San Francisco, Cal.

SEND IT TO THE RESCUE.

When we have succeeded in putting into good shape a presentation of a line of thought, in advocacy of some line of action, that if adopted would ensure success, it is very natural for all of us who write or talk upon the most important issue of the day, to imagine that its publication in a temperance paper is going to be an immense benefit to our cause But there is another party here and there who dont present or invent any new ideas, but plods round to get the temperance literature already in existence more generally read and learned. And that man does more than editor or correspondent; for the new ideas go out to the old temperance readers who are already converts to our side, while the other party gets more temperance people and more outsiders both equally ignorant, to read and study the old and sufficient truths of temperance science.

The one party sooths and comforts and confirms the old converts, the other brings new converts to the lodge and new voters to the temperance ballot box in good time.

If the RESCUE or the Pacific Censor or any one of a dozen weekly temperance papers that could be named, could be introduced into every family of this state, and one or two of each family be induced to give its contents a fair attention for a year, it is quite likely that without any uncommon talent manifested in the paper, a general prohibitory law could be enacted and enforced in this state, and secured in the next legislature too. But if the RESCUE contained every week the most brilliant argument and the most able and attractive articles from first to last by the most talented editors and contributors, it would help the cause but a very trifle, except just so far as new and more readers were obtained for it.

People often think or say, "that was a rousing speech or essay," or "that is a first rate article, let us send it to the RESCUE." and it is sent. Now every time that is done it is right and commendable; whether it appears in the RESCUE or not it is an evidence that the party or parties who sent it were desirous of aiding the usefulness of the RESCUE, and helping the temperance cause. That course is not in the least intended to be discouraged or made light of in the slightest degree: but a suggestion is made: If you want the RESCUE to present a certain idea, or to present your article, and think it will do good by doing so, don't you think it will do more good if you get some people to read that article in the RESCUE that never read anything on temperance before, and secure them as readers of temperance literature in the future? No work is ever done for temperance that is worth a cent unless some information is distributed—a very large proportion of the work and expense of lodges and lecturers is utterly wasted when it don't result in the dissemination of temperance literature and set people to reading. And unless something is done besides writing reports and sending communications for the RESCUE, the paper or any other work of the Order will accomplish lean and scant results.

CHINESE SAILORS.

It is the most fortunate thing that chinamen can be found to man the ships sailing from this port. They dont in that way injure white labor in the least. The white sailor derives no benefit whatever from the wages from a voyage from San Francisco: the boarding master gets all the wages, and he dont work; his mode of industry cannot be called white labor; it is the robbery of white labor snch as the saloons and beer shops practice on the white labor of the land

Whatever tends to destroy the business of these land sharks should be hailed with satisfaction. They are slave holders of the worst type, and have utterly ruined the character and physique of the American merchant seamen, or rather of the seamen who sail in American ships. But if Chinamen go in the ships, these sharks cannot get their wages. John is capable of taking charge of his own financial matters, and does very well as a sailor, provided about 20 Chinese are used where 16 white men are sufficient. But so many of the latter now a days are diseased, and only half able to do a man's work, that it is quite likely the Chinese are equal to them, man for man.

No hardship is worked to the white sailor from being supplanted by Chinamen. for under no possible circumstances that can ever befal him, can he encounter such a hsrdship and injustice as to be shipped on an American ship by the crimps and runners through an American shipping commissioner, and get all the kicks and none of the wages.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Union send the following instructions to Principals and Teachers concerning the prize-essays on the subject.

"TWIN EVILS, TOBACCO AND INTEMPERANCE."

I. The prizes are seven dollars ($7) for the Junior, Middle and Senior Classes each of the High School, and five dollars ($5) for each division of each grade in the Grammar Schools, and five dollars for the Evening School.

II. Teachers, parents and friends are requested to furnish all the facts possible, and to suggest sources from which pupils may derive information. This instruction must be given before Friday, May 6th, 1881, and may form a part of the language instruction, and the essays be credited as a part of the monthly work.

III. Teachers and parents are encouraged to have the pupils write the essays in full at least twice, but no more, previous to the day of final writing, and to correct them; the pupils, if desired, assisting in the work of correction. This is requested in order that the pupils may have an opportunity for arranging properly and expressing facts and ideas upon the subject, and for improving upon the manner of expression thru the suggestions of the teacher.

IV. The essays must be written under the supervision of the class teacher on Friday afternoon, May 6th. No instruction to be given on that day, and no pupil to be permitted to have in possession any previously written essay, notes or copy, or to receive any assistance from any source whatever. No manuscript, when handed to the teacher, shall in any way be changed or corrected, nor shall it exceed four pages of cap paper, nor contain less than one page of written matter.

V. On Monday afternoon, May 9th, all essays must be read in the hearing of the class, and the pupils may vote or otherwise, assist the teachers to determine the best essays—not exceeding one in seven—and those selected to be marked as worthy of special notice. All manuscripts must be sent to the office of the City Superintendent, on Tuesday, May 10th, and each one must be designated by number, grade, teacher and school, omitting the name of the pupil.

VI. The successful essays shall be the property of the "Union," and the best one may be published in the form of a leaflet.

VII. The "Union" will provide each teacher with literature upon the subject. Primary teachers in all grades are requested to devote the same time as the Grammar and High School classes to the discussion of this topic during the hour devoted to language work, and prizes for their classes will be awarded early in the coming term.

VIII. The following schedule may be used, to which other headings may be added if desired:

"TWIN EVILS, TOBACCO AND INTEMPERANCE."

1. Brief historical sketch of each evil.
2. How do they affect the wealth of individuals and of nations?
3. How are they enemies to health and cleanliness?
4. How do they affect the intellect?
5. How are they related to crime?
6. How do they affect home-life?
7. Illustrate the avove as much as possible by facts from history and observation.

BEER NO MEDICINE.

I remember a celebrated physician in the west of London twenty-five years ago, towhom I had been sent by a friend of our movement, the late Richard Barrett, of Craydon. Richard was afraid I should die, and he advised me to see this doctor. I was introduced to him as a teetotaler. I can see the gentlemen twinkle his eye now, and say: "Well. Mr. Whittaker, teetotalism is a very good cause; for men generally, it is the right thing; but for your particular case, I think a little beer would be of use to you." "That is all settled, doctor," I said. "O, I can give you a prescription that I have no doubt will do quite as well"; and so other doctors will say when they see our minds are made up.

Twelva years ago I was recovering from erysipelas, and my doctor said to me: "You have had a serious attack, and you are very much reduced in health and strength; and until you recover fully I should advise you to take a little ale." I said: "Doctor, I suppose I am out of danger." "Oh yes." "Well, we'll manage the rest at home. How long do you think it would take me to get quite well with a little beer?" "Three months." I did not take the beer, and in two weeks' time I was as well as ever I was in my life. If I cannot live without drink, I mean to die; and if I cannot die without drink, I mean to live forever. When I talk like that to the doctors, they talk no more nonsense to me. My family is of the same opinion.

But the doctors are not all on the wrong side. One was consulted by a tippling patient, who inquired: "Doctor, do you think a little now and then would hurt me very much?', "Why, no, sir," said the doctor deliberately, "I do not know that a little now and then would hurt you very much. but if you do not take any, it won't hurt you at all." As an example of the uselessness of beer as a medicine, we have the following:

Two friends who had been at college together met after a long separation. One had been abroad, and the other engaged in professional work at home. To the surprise of the visitor a glass of bitter beer was poured out at dinner. "Why!" said he, "I thought you were an abstainer!,' "So I was for some time, but I got below par and the doctor said I must have some bitter beer to get up the tone of my system." "And do you feel any better?" "Well I fancy sometimes fancy that I do, but I am far from being well." "How long have you taken it?" "About seven years." "Well, if I had taken one sort of medicine for seven years, and it had not effected a cure, I shoutd fancy that I had taken it long enough."

This absurdity, so often noticed, is owing to the deceitfulness of alcohol. It stills the pain by paralyzing the nerves, but it does not remove the cause; it does not effect a cure.

ABOUT KANSAS.

Governor St John called at the Signal office in Chicago lately and reported that all the State officers of Kansas, the judges of the Supreme court and membeas of congress are total abstainers: that the prohibitory sentiment is now much stronger than before the election: some of the saloon keepers are going to Missouri, but the wisest of them are replacing their saloon with an express or omnibus office: new and useful avocations are taking the place of the former "piracies:" churches all on the side of enforcement, the Methodist in the most radical fashion. They had a proposition to appoint a commissioner to assess the damages done to brewers, distillers &c with a view to indemnify them, and called on the Governor to see if he would veto such a bill if it came before him: he said no on certain conditions: the same committee should also investigate how many paupers, orphans, maniacs, had been made, how many homes ruined, how many waifs and tramps cast upon the world by the traffic in Kansas, and if Kansas owed the traffic anything, it should be paid to the last dollar: but they did not come to him any more about that bill,

CHRISTIAN INFLUENCE.

The Rev. C Manson of Lowell N. Y. says in the Signs of the Times, "Let the fact be ever borne in mind that if the Christian churches of the State of New York would, they could shut up every dram shop in the State. A few days ago I was talking with a rum-seller when, in substance, he said, "Mr. M., I know that you are right and that my business is wrong. If every minister of the Gospel would do his duty as faithfully as you do, you would shut up the traffic within one year. But as long as Christian men uphold and vote for these parties, liquor will be sold and I will sell too."

Along side of this I wish to lay another circumstance. When I visited the town of Otsego in Otsego county, in February, they were having their town meeting. One good Christian gentleman took his place at the polls to peddle "no license tickets." Just beside him stood the landlord of a hotel with "license tickets." Two members of Christian churches came up near together to vote. This Christian man offered them "no license tickets." but they turned from him with a frown, took the RUMSELLER'S tickets and VOTED for LICENSE. When they were gone, the landlord turned to the Christian man and patting him on the shoulder said, "now you see what your religious men do. These Christians want us to sell rum." I will make no comments on the above circumstances now. Let Christians read, think and then act.

HOW TO CURE A COLD.

A medical journal tells how one man was cured of cold;—He boiled a little wormwood and hoarhound together, and drank freely of the tea before going to bed. The next day he took five pills, put one kind of plaster on his breast, another under his arm, and still another on his back. Under advice from an experienced old lady, he took all these off with an oyster knife in the afternoon, and slapped on a mustard plaster instead. Then he put on some hot bricks to his feet and went to bed. Next morning another old lady came in with a bottle of goose oil, and gave him a dose of it on a quill; and an aunt arrived about the same time with a bundle of sweet fern, which she made into tea and gave him every half hour until noon, when he took a big dose of salts. After dinner, his wife, who had seen a fine old lady of great experience in doctoring in High street gave him two pills of her own make about the size of a walnut, and of similar shape, and two teaspoonfuls of home made balsam to keep them down. He took a half-pint bottle of hot rum, at the suggestion of an old sea captain visiting the next house, and steamed his legs with an alcohol bath. At this crisis two of his neighbors arrived, who saw at once that his blood was out of order, and gave him a half gallon of spearmint tea and a big dose of castor oil. Before going to bed he took eight of a new kind of pills, wrapped about his neck a flannel soaked in hot vinegar and salt, and had feathers burned on a shovel in his room. He is now cured and full of gratitude.

DISTRIBUTION OF TEMPERANCE TRACTS.

Charles Watson, Providence House, Halifax, England in Oct 1880 determined to give out one million temperance tracts to ministers, Christians and temperance workers, in packages of 5000 each for free distribution; the parties paying only for the carriage from Halifax. He advertised his offer, and it has been so gladly accepted that he has sent away five millions and has three millions more ready packed to send to applicants. Most of the tracts are new and prepared for this special purpose. When all are sent out he will have distributed twenty-five million pages of reading, weighing twenty-five tons. He circulates weekly 300 copies of the Alliance news besides, and many copies of other papers, and says: "When the entire population of Britain is well informed and persuaded of the necessity of total abstinence for the individual and prohibition by the state, the legislature will grant the necessary legal enactments.

"How necessary then," he adds, "that all Christian temperance workers should go earnestly, unitedly, constantly and prayerfully to secure that glorious consummation. The Lord Jesus Christ is leading us on to victory."

And a man who acts as he does has a right to use that last sentence. Mr. Watson is the best practical revivalist of the day. He will help to bring on such a revival as England never before dreamed of, and he knows just how to do it.

H. S. GRAVES.—Everybody knows Bro. Graves, the efficient District Deputy for Yuba and Sutter counties, if not, those who do not, have missed the acquaintance of one of natures noblemem and the largest hearted and most generous Good Templar on record, He is always at work for the cause and gives of his time to the work as freely as he does of his means, is always hopeful, never despondent and one always feels better and stronger in the good work after having met with and conversed with this good brother. His business recently called him down in Tulare county, and soon up came a club for the RESCUE. His business called him to Yolo county and at the county seat he found two lots held in the Orphans Homestead Association lot 15 block 14 owned by Geo. D. Fiske, and lot 14 block 24 held by C. P. Sprague, he secured the donation of both these lots from the parties named, to our Home for Orphans and the deeds have already been executed and forwarded. At the last session of the Grand Lodge Bro Graves pledged his District for a donation to the Orphans Home fund for $75, and that there might be no mistake or misunderstanding about the matter be placed the amount on the desk of the G. W. S. simultaneous with his pledge. Bro. Graves is a member of the Board of Trustees of the Orphans Home and owing to his farm duties, being engaged in sheep shearing, was prevented from attending the last quarterly meeting of the Trustees. For his delinquency in this matter he has notified us that he has imposed a fine upon himself of $25 for the benefit of the Home fund and has discharged himself by paying the fine. For an earnest, indefatigable worker in the cause, one who is always at it, and a thoroly consistent Good Templar from the crown of his head to the soul of his foot, commend us to the brother who honors his position of D. D. G. W. C. T. for Sutter and Yuba counties.

MORE HELP.—Col. C. N. Goulding late of Toledo Ohio, an earnest and energetic worker in the cause of Temperance has been secured as an addition to our present very efficient corps of Grand Lecturers.

His present field will be through the counties of Yolo and Colusa. His announcements will be found in the Grand Lecturers department and it is hoped that the friends of the Order and the cause, in the counties named, will at once prepare for his coming and have all arrangements made for his speaking, and the meetings well advertised by the local press etc.

PERSONALS.—The Grand Lodge office has been visited recently by a number of prominent members of the Order, among them Bro. John Landis, W. C. T. of the Lodge at Wheatland; Bro. J. W. Perry P. W. C. T. of the Lodge at Plymouth; A. P. Schnyder, W. C. T. of the Lodge at Pleasant Grove; Rev. Compton of Elko, Nevada, who has removed to Elk Grove and will unite with the Lodge there; and Bro Dean of Volcano.

PLACER COUNTY.—The District Lodge of Placer county, will be reorganized at Auburn on the 19th inst. The G. W C. T. will attend in person. It is hoped that a general outpouring of Placerite Good Templars may be had upon the occasion mentioned. Auburn is a good place of meeting and unless the Aburnites have degenerated very much of late, the visitors to the approaching session of the District Lodge will be well cared for.

NEW ROUTES.—In the Grand Lecturers Department new routes are announced this week for Bro. Crowhurst in Yuba, Butte and Tehama counties; for Bro. Culver in Sonoma and Mendocino counties; for Bro. Goulding in Yolo and Colusa counties. Consult the list and arrange accordingly, ye people of the counties named.

THE "Signs of the Times" one of the most lively prohibition papers, published at Frankfort N. Y. has been killed by remittances of good wishes and no scrip. New York and Ohio have always devotedly sacrificed their temperance papers, but as that was about the only sacrifice they ever offered at the shrine of temperance, they both make a contemptible fiasco of every attempt to get even the limpsiest form of a law, that the saloon-keeper dont approve of. Votes are not made by simply wearing regalia and having a password.

Lecturers' Reports.

☞ The only authorized Grand Lecturers in this jurisdiction are Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Messrs. Wm. Crowhurst, Hugh R. Hughes, Dr. M. D. Merrick, F. J. Culver and George Bramall.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

WM. CROWHURST.

CHEROKEE, Butte Co., May 7th 1881.

Nord Lodge aroused from sleep and reorganized with 27 members, continuing in office its earnest Lodge Deputy, Bro. H. D. Bacus

Webster appointment conflicted with a public school exhibition, leaving to us an audience of 25.

Chico turned out a very large audience. the M. E. Church being full, and obtained 25 names for the Lodges. A number of Good Templars then adjourned to the hall of Fidelity Lodge and conferred the Degrees on the members of Rising Star Lodge (colored.) A very pleasant meeting was held, and all left at one A. M. feeling that the night was spent in a glorious work. In this town exists a large and flourishing Hotel called the Chico Restaurant, where no liquor is sold. It is kept by Sister Hilton.

Dayton was alive. The members there had done all in their power to ensure success. As the result 14 names were added to the Lodge. On the following evening, a public installation, with varied exercises, even to the use of the teeth, gave encouragement to the good cause in that community.

Pentz was next visited, a large audience addressed, and Messilla Valley Lodge was organized with 30 charter members. At the helm as Lodge Deputy stands our earnest, hardworking brother, R. H. Hawkins. This meeting was presided over by the District Deputy, Bro. J. B. Mullen, who came 14 miles on horseback to aid the work. Quite a delegation from Cherokee, headed by Bro. Andrew Rapp, cheered the audience by their presence. Bro. Murray, P. W. C. T. of Sutter Creek, read, worked, and acted as G. W. S. Among the charter members was Rev. Jesse Wood, School Superintendent of Butte Co.

H. R. HUGHES.

Report too late and crowded out; Visited Knights Ferry Lodge; increased from 17 to 52. Visited 26 mile House and thence to Copperopolis Lodge; 42 members there. Faith Lodge at Telegraph, the youngest of ten new ones, has 33 members. Salt Spring Valley, good meeting in their own hall. Visited Soulsbyville and Vallicito, but got headed off there: he concludes, Vallicito has some Christian people, they keep up a small Sunday-school, have occasional preaching; but when it comes to anything practical, to try to reform their drunkards and save their boys, they prefer to sing hymns and let the Devil have the bodies and souls of those they ought lo love. Well, this may be Christian, but I have not so learned it.

MRS. STEVENS.

Has returned to her field in the South, and is awakening the people of Ventura Co. Organized Saticoy Lodge with 25 charter members; S. V. Tietsort L. D. and is having good meetings. No further intelligence has been received.

M. D. MERRICK.

The Dr.'s report came in late, and only in time to give the following: May 2d visited International Lodge, public installation, address, etc. eight names proposed for lodge. Lectured 3d and 4th at San Mateo and organized Seaside Lodge with 32 members. Missed the train to Benicia; 6th lectured at South San Francisco and completed list for new lodge. 7th organized Prohibition Lodge at Oakland, and on the 8th Mayfield Lodge, with the assistance of Rev. M. McCracker of Mayfield.

A GENUINE DISTRICT LODGE.

The Sec'y of Sutter and Yuba District Lodge has published a circular containing the minutes of the late session and the following address.

To the Good Templars of Yuba and Sutter Counties:

This District, with a little more effort on our part, ought to boast of at least a thousand Good Templars, who, if faithfully educated to the work of our noble Order, could bring about wonderful results; they could carry any measure at the polls, and their moral influence alone would almost drive intemperance from this section of our State. Do you read the RESCUE, and have you noted how Good Templars are working all over the land and what they are accomplishing everywhere? What are we doing? Our last District Lodge Meeting was a grand success, although it gave only a feeble indication of the power that is in us. In the name of our sacred cause let us not relax our efforts. A nobler work than ours never enlisted brave men and women.

One of the suggestions of Bro. Crowhurst was the appointment of the committee on Temperance Literature. Let the members of that committee correspond with me at once. Education is a primary and most important work, and in our beloved Order it is the very corner stone of our progress. Good Templars need educating in the direction of Temperance before they can go forth on their mission to save. Cannot we accomplish something by distributing Temperance Literature all over our District, and by word and example bringing the people to read it?

Be kind enough to forward me the statistics of your Lodge if you have not already done so; and any Temperance items that you send will be published in the papers, Our next District Lodge Meeting will be held at Brownsville Sept. 30th 1881 at ten o'clock A. M. Prepare to give good account of yourselves. In F. H. and C

C. COVILLAUD District Secretary.

THE committee on Temperance Literature are requested to meet on Saturday, May 14, at 1 P. M, sharp at Good Templars Hall, Marysville.

J. HARDY
Marysville, May 2, 1881. Chairman.

That is one of the best movements yet in a District Lodge. All temperance work that takes no measures to disseminate temperance literature in the community, neglects the use of the most important arm of the temperance reform. It is like oyster soup got up without using any oysters. That is where to look for our dead lodges and our numerous suspensions and expulsions.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

CURRENTS OF THE SEA.

NUMBER FIVE.

We have now seen the round that a portion of the waters of the Atlantic are constantly performing. An unceasing flow from the equatorial region, toward and past the West Indies, into the Caribbean sea and Gulf of Mexico, passing by Florida, Hatteras, New York, New England, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland, then forking into two or more streams; one of which goes warming the northern shore of Europe into the Arctic Sea, gets thoroly cooled there, and somewhat freshened and mixed up with other waters, and returns a summer cooler and a fish aquarium, down by our eastern coasts, to the equatorial regions again. Another portion of the great stream circles away round by Africa and returns to its starting point by another route, And these currents have a ceaseless, restless round of duty, from which there is no furlow that we know of, and we have seen that their object is the welfare and comfort of God's creatures.

THE SARGASSO SEA.

That means the sea of "sea weeds," from the Spanish and Latin name for a species of gulfweed. Between the latitude of 20 and 30 degrees north, there is an extent of many thousands of square miles, (larger than this state) of the Atlantic ocean, in which immense quantities of gulfweed are swimming; in some parts we find simple patches or clumps of it here and there, from the size of a handful to half a bushel or more; but in the route of a ship bound from the equator to England, we are sometimes two or more days sailing thru "wind rows of this weed, as regularly laid out and as clearly separated as swaths of hay mown in a field.

This singular feature of marine geography afforded a splendid theme for lying, to the ancient navigators in the days when few sailors went very far from home. Their ships used to get stuck in it, and they got out and shoveled a passage thru it, etc., etc, But that was all fiction. It is very remarkable without any exaggeration, however; the weed is a prettily shaped alga and has bunches of berries about the size of pepper corns on every branch that pushes out from the main stalk. A hook trailed in the water will bring up sometimes a fair armful of it, which when thrown upon the deck and shaken up, will discharge from its interior whole colonies of miniature crabs and shrimps in the liveliest health and spirits that seem to have been raising large families on that big section of ocean, ever since the days of Noah. It is a gala day for the chickens on board when a ship passes thru that region with a moderate breeze. The way the fowls stand by and watch those clumps of gulfweed shaken out on deck, and administer upon the estates of the insects dislodged, is highly interesting to witness.

The fresh new weed is supposed to be torn up by the Gulf Stream from the bottom or the rocks somewhere and sloughed off its surface into this center basin, around which the main currents revolve. While it is fresh and new it floats on the surface, and in the thorofare just mentioned is in regular rows or swaths always about the same distance apart and if I remember rightly, the rows run in about a northwest and southeast direction. When it becomes old a provision has been made to sink it to the bottom, without which it would have probably made that portion of the sea impassable as the old sailors used to report so falsely. The little tiny coral insect takes a contract and goes solemnly to work on every branch of that weed: he lays it out into sections and covers it with his beautiful deposit of coral, and when the berries are covered they are very beautiful. But he has not got along very far when the weight of the coral deposit begins to drag the weed down into the depths. and whatever becomes of the architect and his contract afterward, is a secret we may perhaps never learn in our time. Perhaps he keeps right on and expects to fill up that deep basin of the ocean some day, but it will take a good many of Professor Denton's millions of years to accomplish it. There is always to be seen nice fresh weed on the surface, and at a depth of two or three feet dead material upon which the coral was working Sundays and every day. When anything becomes too heavy to float within a few feet of the surface, there is no doubt but it reaches the bottom in a very short time, no matter how deep it is. There is nothing known as yet about any under currents that may exist in the Sargasso sea. A very remarkable current flows into the

MEDITERRANEAN,

And it is hoped you all know by this time that whenever a current of salt water flows into a sea or river or lake, there must be an equal outflow of equally salt water, or else the sea or lake would in time become a solid mass of salt. But it took a long time to make people understand that little simple proposition which you can see there at a glance.

People used to say that this four or five mile current which sets constantly into the Mediterranean, thru the strait of Gibraltar was just enough to supply the evaporation that took place in that great sea. Somebody suggested that an under current might be flowing out, but another learned donkey proved that impossible, because the sea inside was nearly six times deeper than the straits, and he said the heavy briny water could not rise and pass over the barrier. And that learned man was Sir Chas. Lyell, an eminent scientist. So you see if great men are sometimes wofully mistaken in their scientific deductions, how it is very easy for them to make terrible blunders when they undertake to tell us how the world and man and whales and elephants were created or evoluted by a process of their own: and how easy it is for us all to form erroneous conclusions.

But it was known that in 1712 a French privateer sunk a Dutch vessel loaded with brandy and oil (and sugar probably) off Tarifa Point in the straits, and a few days after the vessel came up again 12 miles further out than she had sunk, which seemed then very remarkable in such a strong inward current. Now it is very easy to understand that the evaporation causes the inflow of the surface current, and that the heavier and salter water sinks and carries its salt out with it in a returning under current, to restore the equilibrium disturbed by the inflowing current.

The uses of the Mediterranean sea are principally to afford the dry winds that have come over the thirsty continent of Africa an opportunity to collect vapor for the rains necessary to feed the people of Europe. If that sea were to become a salt bed or dry up, most part of Europe away from the Atlantic coast would be barren and uninhabitable. but with that sea and the Atlantic and the Gulf Stream they are quite as well provided for as their conduct deserves.

It used to be impossible for a sailing vessel to beat out of the straits of Gibraltar against a contrary wind and that strong current: they had to anchor in the bay or "back of the rock "till a change occurred. In the winter, when long spells of strong westerly winds prevailed there used to be fleets of vessels detained there sometimes three or four weeks before they could get out. But now nearly all the trade is carried on by steamers and the sailing vessels are things of the past, gone out of use and out of fashion.

CHURCH RAFFLING.

A boy astonished his Christian mother by asking her for a dollar to buy a share in a raffle for a silver watch that was to be raffled off in a beer saloon. His mother was horrified and rebuked him. "But," said he, "mother, did you not bake a cake with a ring in it, to be raffled off in a Sunday-school fair?'

"Oh, my son," said she "that was for the church."

But if it is wrong," said the boy, "would doing it for the church make it right? Would it be right for me to steal to put it in the collection? And if it is right for the church, is it not right for me to get this watch if I can?"

The good woman was speechless, and no person can answer the boy's argument. The practices are both wrong or they are both right.—W. Va. Freeman.

JOHN ALCOHOL MY FOE.

AS SUNG BY MR. JOHN CAMPBELL.

John Alcohol my foe, John
When we were first acquaint,
I'd money in my pockets, John,
Which now I know I ain't,
I spent it all in treating, John,
Because I loved you so.
But mark it how you've treated me,
John Alcohol my foe.

John Alcohol my foe, John,
Our sojourn down through time,
Reveals dark tales of woe, John
Deep stained with sin and crime.
Dreaded monster, haste away
No longer trouble me;
I'll shun thee, hate thee, night and day
John Alcohol my foe.

John Alcohol my foe, John,
God's grace is now my guide,
Now I've signed the pledge, John,
And by it shall abide.
John the Baptist 'tis to me
To point the heavenward way,
And now I'll sing, "Thank God I'm free."
John Alcohol my foe.

John Alcohol my foe, John,
We've been so long together,
So you must take one road, John,
And I will take the other.
For we shall tumble down, John,
If hand in hand we go,
And I will have the bill to foot,
John Alcohol my foe.

GENTLEMEN.

Last week under this heading you read, "we are apt to think it is not wrong to do what almost every boy does." That was written, "Every body does." The printer accidentally left out one letter only, but it makes often a very great difference to do such a simple violence to the truth as that, intentionally or not. It seems to me that the boys of California, even the very bad boys are better than we might expect to have them, considering the large amount of bad example and evil teaching to which they are most unjustly and wickedly subjected.

It is a sad thing indeed that so many men are engaged in a mode of life, which is constantly tempting boys to go to ruin, to be guilty of wrong and falsehood, and to acquire evil habits, which once taken up are so hard to lay off, and which make all boys, and men, too, unhappy. Inducing them to use that filthy weed, which but a short time ago was only used by some dirty savages, teaching them to drink and gamble, and that means to cheat, and these things lead to every other crime.

And then these people tell us they wonder that the boys are so bad, etc. But the wonder really is that the boys are as good as they are. No matter if a boy has a most excellent mother, who uses the wisest modes for his proper training, he can scarcely avoid or escape from evil influences in the street or outside of his home, sufficient to lead him astray. And the boys deserve a good deal of credit and all the encouragement we can give them for being just as good as they are.

It seems quite natural to suppose that bad as are the surroundings and temptations here, if our boys only keep away from those ungentlemanly habits of putting filthy and poisonous things into their mouths, their chances of becoming happy and useful men, and leading cheerful and pleasant lives, and being honored and respected and loved thru life are quite favorable.

Innocent of these vile habits and their vile associations, they will be freed from many temptations and will have time and inclination to look up in place of down. To prepare themselves for a successful career in life; to mingle with people whose companionship will help them up and not down. There is always a good time in store for good boys and girls; always going tobe plenty of room in the top ranks of every honest and honorable profession and employment. And the young folks who study and practice the habits of real gentlemen are going to fill those ranks. The ranks of smokers and idlers are always full and the times and chances there are always very ragged and illfavored.

A Supply of all the works of the N. T. Society are now for sale at the Rescue office at New York prices of course; will be sent post paid by return mail if ordered. Same are also to be had at 1041 Market St. See ad.

The offer for three months' subscription to this paper at 50 cts., is of course continued, and will be extended from now till 1st of July.

OUR FIRST TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

When we had one hundred scholars in our school (the first few weeks) and very little money in the treasury, it became a question how we were to supply them with catechisms. We saw that many of the latter would be likely to be carried away through carelessness and not brought back. So we persuaded them to bring five cents each to buy their own catechisms. This made them think more of the little book, and keep it more carefully. It was but little for each one, while it would have been much to us in the aggregate. But lest it should bear hard on any who could not get the money, we had the teachers keep careful watch, and in every such case loan the child a copy until the money could be paid, and not ask for it. This worked well, and very few of the catechisms were lost.

At the same time we had frequent evidence that they were perused in the family to good purpose. One little girl reported with some warmth that her ma said the catechism did not tell the truth about beer; her ma knew that beer was good, because when she had been washing and felt tired, a drink of beer rested her. This gave us an excellent chance to explain that the beer only benumbed the feelings so that the drinker could not tell that she was tired and needed rest. She was just as tired as before, only she did not know it, and she hurt herself by going on to work when she ought to have been resting. They would grow tired more easily the next time, and break down sooner in the end. But this sort of reasoning did not suit the girl's mother. She believed her feelings, or rather the beer that lied to her nerves by paralyzing them, and she took her little girl from the school to learn to drink beer and be deceived by it like herself.

Beer was much discussed, and we had many questions asked about it. One of the oldest boys we had was son of a saloon keeper, and he would hardly allow that beer was so filthy a drink as we made it out. He asked many questions of us and then of his father, and he was obliged in the end to say that we were right. We had five children from this family, sent by their mother who was very much in earnest that they should not become victims to the father's business. They were very studious and very much interested to learn about the consequences of taking these drinks with which they were so familiar; for they lived over the saloon, and the boy was sometimes obliged to help his father in the business. We had the only son of a wholesale liquor dealer also, sent by his mother who subscribed for the Banner, and bought him a handsome temperance picture book for a birthday present. This little fellow learned his lessons faithfully, and they made a marked impression upon him. We heard of his asking questions of his father about it. "Say, papa, is it true that there is alcohol in beer and wine and gin and whisky?"

"Yes; there is alcohol in them all."

"Well is it made by decay; do they always let sweet liquids stand and decay to make these drinks?"

"I suppose they do."

"Do they make people sick and hurt them the way it says in that book? Is that all true?"

"I suppose it is," came very unwillingly; for the man was intelligent and sensible.

"Well then, father, if all that is true. what makes you sell such drinks?"

"Because—ay—because there is money in them."

Many of these children we could not have taught at all, if we had made the pledge the door of entry to the school. We took all that came; shy and questioning or glad and confident, and taught them all the best we could, hoping for the best results just as they do in sunday-school. Our singing books we bought and kept at the room and had them distributed at each meeting. We made much of the singing. Fortunately we had the use of a fine organ and a kind friend to play it. This was an important attraction. One of the difficulties however was that our organist was not always on hand. She little thought how much of the future of some child she might attract depended on her presence and faithfulness.

We found it quite difficult to get some of our teachers to come regularly, Saturday afternoon. It was a busy day; they were making preparations for the Sabbath, and some who were school teachers found it took up more of their one weekly holiday than they were willing to spare. Almost everything else was felt to be of more consequence than the study of temperance. There was not so much enthusiasm about temperance schools as there is now, and the most of these people were not of the sort to lead. They might have followed better, if they had known of other schools that had been successful. So to accommodate these people we changed our hour from Saturday afternoon to Friday evening. But it would not do to keep the little ones late in the evening: and indeed most of the teachers would have remained away to attend any entertainment that might have been coming off; so the hour was from six to seven or a little later. We have known some very successful schools held on a week day evening at the close of the day school for an hour.

Now that the character of the temperance school is well established it has become easy to have it on Saturday evening. This keeps the boys out of the streets, and where they have adult classes and miscellaneous exercises, it makes a fine retreat for those who are likely to spend their money and their time Saturday night in the saloons. The smallest scholars who are usually much more willing to come out in the day time are taught as a primary class in the afternoon while the temperance school in the evening is taught exactly like the common Sunday-school, with classes in the seats reciting their catechism, which is afterwards explained by the Superintendent from the desk. The adults and older scholars are arranged by themselves like Bible classes, and some of them are Temperance Bible classes. But I see I am getting ahead of my story. This explanation of the lesson by the superintendent was exactly what we had in our little temperance school from the first, and all the way through. We will talk about that in our next number.

SALOON BOYS.

"There goes a saloon boy—just look at him!" a friend said to me while we were walking along the streets of a village in which I was spending a few days.

"Yes, I should have known that he was a saloon boy if you had not told me," I answered, looking at the boy in question.

He was evidently not more than fourteen years of age, and yet he was smoking a cigar, and appeared more like a rough bar-room man than a boy. His bold, reckless manner at once revealed the fact that he had been a "saloon boy" for some time, for these signs of vice can not all be gained in a day.

"Too bad! He might be a fine boy," my friend.

"Saloon influences will ruin any boy," I answered.

Saloon boys will always grow up into saloon men, and these are never honored, respected members of society. Our criminals and drunkards come out of this class. Boys beware of saloons!—Mrs. M. A. Holt.

It is well to warn the boys away from the saloons, but what is to be said of the men, most of them fathers, who every year vote to keep open 16,000 saloons and drink hells in Ohio, whose main business is to entrap and ruin the boys?—Signal.

ST. JOHNSBURY, VERMONT.

One of the prettiest and best towns of the world is St. Johnsbury, where the Fairbank's scales are made and where the plan of them was invented. In most towns and villages where manufacturing is going on and workers are employed, the vultures of the grogshop set their traps and snares thickly to steal from the workmen the money which ought to be employed to provide food, clothes and lodging to their families; to sell the workmen beer and wine and make them worthless and idle and vicious and abusive.

But in St. Johnsbury the Fairbank brothers made it a rule to employ no man who drank any liquor at all: so there was no trade for saloons. Some few workmen who came there would not stay because there was no drink, but in their place came better men: Some men were reformed there and became good citizens and other men became better because they lived there with good people.

The factory has been running about 50 years and there are 1000 workers, intelligent, industrious and frugal. Those who have been there long have nice homes of their own and are in good circumstances. Many of them are leading citizens and christians.

A lady who lately visited there says this town with its college and schools, its factory, its temperance record, its costly churches, its railroad facilities, the refinement and polish of its citizens is a miniature of Boston with the evil features of Boston left out.

Now there are many hundreds of towns that might have had just such a history as this, but because the grogshop was tolerated in them, they are sinks of poverty and crime and misery; with lots of people in jail, with boys and girls growing up in crime; no chance to learn trades or find employment; no school or church worth the name; loathsome shanties in place of neat cosy homes. There are hundreds of such places in California, made wretched and miserable by the abominable nests of vice and sin, that have utterly destroyed every body's prosperity and reduced the community to the verge of pauperism.

We shall have all the bad smelling breweries and groggeries and doggeries and dives driven out of the State pretty soon, and then there will be a chance for the boys and girls to find employment, learn trades, start a business and make themselves useful citizens of happy useful prosperous communities. Then we shall have peace when the great enemy of peace is driven out.

LETTER FROM AN ABSENT FRIEND.

My Dear Juvenile Brethren and Sisters:—The May-day sun is shining bright the birds are singing with delight, the flowers are smiling everywhere, and soft and balmy is the air; the water brooks glad praises sing, the pine woods their tribute bring, as gentle breezes search along, and tune all things with May-days song. All beauties seem to intermingle, and lure my pen to rimy jingle as here I sit, on the bank of the beautiful Lewis and Clark river, thinking about picnics, and swings, and speeches, and merry romps, and happy greetings, and joyous shouts, and harty hand shakes and all that. Now some dear juvenile reader asks, "And where is Lewis and Clark's river. Looking on your map you will find it emptying into the Columbia at the city of Astoria. Then another stops to puzzle over the name of this river. "Why," he asks, "was it two men?" and another —a sister, this time humorously answers, "Perhaps it is too big for one namesake." I will tell you why; about 75 years ago, when this coast was little known, 2 men bearing those names were exploring along the coast, when they discovered and entered the mouth of the Columbia, sailing up to the mouth of this river, they followed it up for miles and anchored their ship. built a fort upon the bank and spent the winter there.

The spot where the fort stood is well known and only a short distance from where I am writing. So you see that "Lewis and Clark," is the appropriate name. It is a most "beautiful river," and how I wish that I could have about a thousand of my dear ones from California to have a rousing picnic along its banks and on its placid wavelets, for there are many boats at hand.

We would romp upon the soft moss in the shady woods, and if we could keep still enough, hear the drum of the wild partridge on his mossy log, and perhaps see some big elks, for they are plenty in the woods not far away. And now that my lot is cast in a new field, dont think that I can forget my dear young friends in California. We are all in the same grand army yet, and let us battle bravely for our common cause. The dear old RESCUE will come to me regularly, and I hope to read of your continued prosperity and good works. I wish my juvenile friends would write for our department, and thus encourage and strengthen each other. Guerneville Temple started out bravely on that plan; who will follow?

Shall we not hear from that noble temple again, O, how I would love to hear from Mendocino, Little River and Wheatland bands.

Soon I will write you about the Salmon Fisheries of Astoria. In T. L. and P. I remain Your Friend.

and Brother T. J. ALLEY.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

SACRAMENTAL WINE.

NUMBER FIVE.

It is desired that the proposition assumed in the first of these articles should be borne in mind thruout, viz, that if it was intoxicating or fermented wine, that was used and enjoined at the institution of the communion, no one has a right to substitute anything else for that liquor, when it can be procured. If the advocates of the use of the pure natural clean fruit of the vine in that ordinance, were commending an improvement on the example and precept of the Savior, suggesting something which would answer the purpose better than the article He made choice of, their chances of finding any support from believers in the christian faith would be few indeed, and they ought to be. But on the contrary they are thoroly convinced that the example and precept of the Savior, are entirely disregarded in the substitution of the mocker, wine, for the pure element so plainly appointed.

They cannot find that Christ ever set a precedent of doubtful safety, or issued any instruction that would admit of a corrective amendment. But when it is a well established fact that reformed men after years of abstinence and of a hopeful christian experience, have been relegated to their former condition of abandoned profligacy, and have ended their lives in delirium, because they tasted of the maddening cup at the communion table, and when we know that it is dangerous to the last degree for a reformed man to touch that cup of ferment on such occasions: we are at our wits end to reconcile such a condition of things with an obedience to the teaching and example of an unerring Master. But we encounter no such doubts, without putting a forced and unwarranted interpretation upon the Scriptures, and building up a theory of inconsistencies.

The Mosaic injunctions from the institution of the Passover down, are remarkable for the frequency and emphasis with which they prohibit the use of leaven (ferment) during the Passover and in their sacrifices at all times. There was always a reason which justified the commands and restrictions of the Mosaic law. They were not an arbitrary unmeaning code, founded on heathen superstitions. The Sabbath was sanctified from labor, because it was absolutely necessary for man's physical health that he should rest one day in seven. Pork was forbidden because it is unwholesome, and a nation using it largely cannot be physically sound. Other unclean animals, those that died a natural death or were strangled, blood &c were forbidden because of their unwholesomeness. Each of the commandments of the decalog had its reason, that obedience to it was necessary to man's own welfare. And for similar good reasons cleanly habits were strictly inculcated.

In their Sacrifices the Hebrews were emphatically forbidden to offer anything maimed or unclean, impure or corrupt, or to use leaven (ferment) or anything leavened (fermented). The reason was evidently that leaven is a decaying, corrupting element; an uncleanness, a process of putrescence, and therefore an abomination upon the altar of God, and not to be at all used about his service.

And the evidence seems to be amply satisfactory that leavened drink was as strictly understood to be an abomination as leavened bread. The strong drink "poured out before the Lord" when translated properly will read sweet drink, or grape juice, as "flagons of wine" will be read cakes of pressed dried fruit. It may be that the Biblical warnings against leaven were directly and particularly aimed against the fermented drink more than against the fermented bread.

The first fruits of harvest could not have included fermented wine, for two reasons: it would have occasioned a considerable delay (Exodus 22. 29) to produce fermented wine, and it would have been a heinous offence to offer in place of the ripe and wholesome first-fruits, and as a part of them, the juice of grapes which had seethed and rotted in filthy ferment and whose only purpose then was to incite evil passions and take away the heart from God.

"Come to Bethel and transgress * * and offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven (ferment) * *, for this liketh you, O children of Israel." "But cursed be the deceiver who hath in his flock a male, and voweth and sacrificeth unto the Lord a corrupt thing." These and many other passages indicate that the offer of any rotten, corrupt, unclean thing in Sacrifice was severely reprehended.

And we know that the communion was instituted at the passover. Unfermented bread was evidently used to typify the body which should never be suffered to see corruption, and it seems a monstrous conclusion to suppose that an unnatural and filthy and sin-inciting product of corruption, should have been chosen and used, to be an emblem of the blood of the sinless, that was given to save the world from sin. It would have been a serious invasion of the law of Moses, to have used or provided fermented wine on that occasion. The enemy was anxiously watching for opportunity to accuse and condemn the Savior, and the preparation of the passover with wine of a kind strictly prohibited, would have been a public scandal, that would have precluded the necessity of procuring false witnesses, or of being at a loss to specify in the accusation an offence worthy of death.

Considering these things and the fact that there is not a word in the new testament to indicate that fermented wine was used at that supper, but that it is expressly stated that it was the "fruit of the vine," and again that no reason whatever of the least value has ever been assigned for an opposite opinion, it is strange that the restoration of unleavened bread and unleavened vine juice to their scripture-enjoined place should have been so long delayed. The reason evidently is, failure to make proper enquiry, and the generally prevailing fallacy that fermented wine is something else than a vile, rotten, filthy, poisonous, lying abomination, and that it is not Satan's master checkmate to virtue and christianity.

The total number of lodges organized since the last Session of our Grand Lodge, or between the dates of October 1st and Apr. 30 being 64.

For the term ending January 31st, 265 lodges filed quarterly returns and reported a membership of 13,068. Add to this 43 Lodges organized with a membership of 1288, showing 308 lodges and a membership of 14,346 being the largest membership and greatest number of lodges ever attained under this jurisdiction.

The following lodges have failed to fill quarterly returns for the term ending January 31st: Nos. 142 147, 187, 188, 205, 207, 213, 232, 250, 275, 282, 303, 310, 311, 312. 333, 374; A. T. 2 and H. I. 7.

We have now in our employ six Grand Lecturers, all devoting their entire time to our work, and all laboring under direct salaries. They are Sister Mrs. Emily P. Stevens, Wm. Crowhurst, M. D. Merrick, Hugh R. Hughes, George Bramall and F. J. Culver. The latter has been temporarily employed under special arrangements subject to the approval of the Executive Committee. The lecturers file regular monthly reports, a synopsis of which for the past three months is as follows: the first column of figures indicating the number of lectures and addresses delivered, second the miles traveled, third and fourth the numberof children and adults respectively composing the audiences addressed, fifth the collections received, sixth charter fees received, seventh expenses incurred.

The Mutual Aid branch of our work is progressing, but not as satisfactorily as it would, did all the Deputies take hold of and push the matter vigorously. Applications are filed now and then, and so far twenty one certificates of membership have been issued.

Usually an edition of five thousand constitutions suffices to supply all our needs for a full fiscal year. Last December the usual edition of five thousand was printed and these are now already entirely exhausted, I would recommend that a special edition of say three thousand be ordered printed at once.

Chase's Manual or exposition of the I. O. G. T. has recently been rewritten and revised. One of our plans has been to keep all Ministers of the Gospel advised as to our movement and work, as well as other representative people to whom we furnish weekly copies of the RESCUE. In furtherance of this plan I would recommend that a special edition of two thousand copies of the Manual be procured for general and free distribution, wherever they will do the most good.

Bro. W. R. Ellis having accepted a limited engagement under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of Nevada as their Grand Lecturer, I would recommend that authority be given to arrange with him to visit the counties of Inyo and Mono in our State as our Grand Lecturer, when he shall visit southern Nevada, as the counties named are more accessible from that point than elsewhere.

The report of the G. W. S. was taken up and considered seriatim, and adopted together with all the recommendations therein contained.

Upon motion the arrangements reported made with Bro. Culver were confirmed and the brother continued as a special Grand Lecturer for three months from date.

A petition from "Good Will" Lodge No. 240, of Gridley to be permitted to change its name to "Crystal Fount" Lodge was granted

Bros. Haile and Kitto of theBoard of Trustees of the Good Templars Home for Orphans were invited to seats as visitors.

A communication was read from H. H. Peckinpah, Guerneville, relative to a proposed camp meeting at that point, and asking for assistance in the way of lecturers, and containing an invitation to the Executive committee to attend the camp meeting.

Upon motion the request was granted so far as practicable, and the invitation accepted.

A communication was received from J. Mysell, asking for an appropriation of five dollars to assist him in paying postage upon temperance tracts, "Danger signals, which he proposed to print at his own expense, and mail two copies of to the address of every Masonic and Odd Fellows lodge.

Applications having been received for Band of Hope rituals and badges from other jurisdictions, and the matter having been referred to the Executive Committee by the G. S. J. W., upon motion he was authorized to dispose of Band of Hope supplies to persons and jurisdictions outside of our own at the rate of $7 per hundred for badges and $1.75 for rituals.

Bro. W. F. Brown, D. D. G. W. C. T., reported having visited the various lodges of Humboldt county as directed, and presented his bill of expenses amounting to $47.50, which was upon motion allowed, and a warrant was ordered drawn for the amount.

A communication was received from Bro. Hugh R. Hughes, but the request was not complied with, and the G. W. S. was directed to reply.

The G. W. S. presented financial receipts from J. N. Stearns of the N. T. S. and P. H., and Miss Julia Colman of the W. N. C. T. U. for the amount of Thanksgiving collection $278.60. Received and ordered on file.

The G. W. C. T. reported having ordered a special edition of four thousand Band of Hope Rituals printed, also twenty thousand leaflets of song, etc. Upon motion, his action was approved.

Bills were presented, audited allowed and warrants ordered drawn in payment as follows:

Albert D. Wood appropriation for publication of RESCUE 3 months $.500 and for 720 copies furnished weekly to ministers and others for 3 months $241 Total, $741.

Geo. Bramall 3 mos salary and cash advanced in the juvenile work $154.82.

Robert Thompson for 20,000 leaflets to A Zellubach for 5 reams paper, $20, and B. F. Sterrett printing and altering plates $15. Total $35.

Geo. Bramall submitted his report as Grand Lecturer and G. S. J. W., showing 2278 rituals and 1,884 badges distributed since last report. Also a number of lectures and addresses delivered and 560 miles traveled.

The report was received and placed on file.

D. K. Rine made application for appointment and employment as Grand Lecturer. Upon motion the executive committee declined to employ him.

Upon motion the R. W. G. L Representatives were directed to memorialize that body for a weekly juvenile temperance paper.

Upon motion the G. W. S. was directed to attend the next session of the R. W. G, L., agreeably to the request of the Grand Lodge at its last session, and the necessary leave of absence was ordered granted him so to do.

The committee heretofore appointed to act in the matter of prohibiting the sale of intoxicating liquors about the State University within the prescribed limits of the law, reported progress, and were continued.

The following resolution introduced by G. W. C., Joel Russell was adopted.

Besolved That our G. W. S. be, and he is hereby instructed to prepare and issue to each lodge an appeal for an effort on their part to increase the circulation of the RESCUE, setting forth the fact that it is now falling short of paying its actual expenses, etc.

Upon motion of the G. W. V. T., it was ordered that until the next meeting of the Executive Committee, one hundred copies of the RESCUE be furnished weekly to each regular Grand Lecturer, while actively in the field with instructions to said lecturers to distribute and use the copies of the papers for distribution, and to aid all in their power to increase its circulation.

After a general review of the work of the Order which proved eminently satisfactory, at 3:10 the committee adjourned.

BUOYING THE CHANNEL;

OR, TRUE OR FALSE LIGHTS ON TEMPERANCE.

This is a new sermon delivered by T. L. Cuyler. D. D., pastor of Lafayette Avenue Church, Brooklyn, just previous to his departure for Europe. It exposes the sophistries of the advocates of moderate drinking, and is a complete answer to the recent utterances of its most noted champion. It is a first-class hand-book for total-abstainers, and should have a wide circulation. Single copies, 5 cents; 60 cents per dozen. Address J. N. STEARNS, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, New York City.

DONT GET THE RESCUE.—The G. W. S. writes that Tehama and Ridgeville Lodges complain that they do not get the RESCUE and asks if it is sent. Yes it is sent to day 8th, the first time those lodges have been heard of in this office. The Lecturers and organizers have been asked to send a postal card to the RESCUE, notifying the institution of new lodges that they may have the paper sent to them. When they fail to do this and the L. D. and Sec. of the new lodge fail to do so, the Lodge dont get the paper till its existence is discovered here by accident or otherwise. It would seem a very light labor to send a postal card to this office if under any circumstances the RESCUE does not reach where it ought to.

IMPROVE THE RESCUE.

Several friends have of late suggested improvements of various kinds, which they think would be of advantage if adopted by the RESCUE. There is not the slightest danger of any such suggestion being received in an unkindly or unyielding spirit. On the contrary, every such kindly act is most kindly appreciated. But just at this time there exists in this office a largely accumulated lack of enthusiasm on the subject of any more internal improvements in the RESCUE under present circumstances. It has been improved to such an extent that it costs its subscribers fifty cents less a year than it did before the improvements, and it cost the Editor last week $21 more to put it into the post office than its revenues from all sources amounted to that week, and all the improvements have been internal without any external change of any moment. When any literary enterprise arrives at such an access of improvements that it costs its manager from $10 to $20 a week to enjoy the luxury of working for nothing and paying his own board; and when his effort is appreciated by a handful of people and scorned by all the rest of those in whose interest he labors, he is never at all likely to get up a sudden outburst of boisterous enthusiasm on the subject of more internal improvement on his paper. When one takes into consideration the fact that there are at least 7,000 people in this state who could improve its subscription list with their own name, or another's, or both, without the least inconvenience; that there are perhaps 4,000 nonsubscribing Good Templars whose tobacco bill for one week applied to the RESCUE for one year would make all the improvements that could be desired; that outside of a half dozen or so of old time lodges and a comparative small handful of individuals, the RESCUE and the cause it represents has not a friend in the state whose friendship is of the least assistance or encouragement.—It would seem that the first improvement to be sought and expected should be in the list of the readers of the paper.

LOVE.

The loves which men have for certain objects have much to do with the moulding of their character and with the influences which they exert upon the world. The love of money is the all absorbing motive which impels every act of some men, of the very poor as well as of the very rich. The love of fame moves some, and the love of political power is the mainspring of such men as Conkling, Denis Kearney and John Kelly. But there are some noble characters which stand out in bold relief away beyond their fellow men in a generous, comprehensive love which embraces a variety of objects. Chief among this class stands Henry Ward Beecher. He loves his own church. He loves his own congregation. He loves his own country. He loves all these things with a genuine inspiring devotion. He loves a $20,000 salary too, not only in the aggregate figures of the sum total, but in every individual, bright, cheerful happy dollar that goes to make up the pile. He could not see one of those pet dollars go astray without at once quoting the appropriate scripture for it. A man so thoroly built and equipped for love could not help a very binding attachment to that salary. They say he loves his enemies, too. And two of the meanest of his enemies he loves with an affection that is touching. The two are Lager Beer and Wine with a sprightly flavor to it. The question must have presented itself, How can I love these my enemies and my sturdy friend and guide of other days, the Bible, at the same time? Ha, that is it; "Love your enemies," the Bible says; does it ever say love your friends? No. Then I'll take my old friend at its word and bestow my first affection on my enemies.

WINE ON SACRAMENTAL OCCASIONS.

It is an agreed fact that intoxicating beverages are productive of immense harm to mankind—that total abstinence is the only safe rule. Now is it right to use on sacramental occasions, as a symbol of the pure redeeming blood of our Savior one of the beverages that is destroying our race, Is there not a most gross and palpable inconsistency in preaching temperance, total abstinence, touch not, taste not," etc., and then approaching the communion table and both touching and tasting an intoxicant? The outside world so regards it. Many persons who were once drinkers, but have resisted by terrible effort the cravings of depraved appetite. have had that appetite aroused anew at the communion table, and have been led to destruction as the consequence. If it be wrong to drink intoxicating liquor in a rum shop, is it not wrong to drink it in the house of God? It is with great reluctance that many persons approach the communion table, by reason of the element of intoxication used there. It commemorates the blood of Christ! What a paradox! The blood of Christ saves men! Intoxicating liquor destroys them body and soul. That appears much like death personating life, or Satan the Almighty. We submit that in no instance should intoxicants of any kind be used on sacramental occasions. Are we right?—J. R. W.—Ex.

ONLY ONE murder in San Francisco last Sunday. A German beer drinker Joseph Kenn butchered his wife, after having interviewed several saloonkeepers on his way home. As there are about 4000 of these murder and thief schools in the city it is strange we dont have a dozen women killed every Sunday.

PROFESSOR DENTON has proved the fallacy of the doctrine of miracles if they are recorded in the Bible, but he has another stock on hand for sale of infinitely larger and more marvelous and elastic miracles of his own. Somebody that wrote in the Bible had a miraculously accurate vision of the Professor when he said "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God."

THOSE "fanatical women,"—causing trouble every where—introducing their pet theory, temperance, in our Sunday schools, our district schools, our colleges, our churches, our legislative halls, our executive mansion, and scattering it broadcast everywhere. "Give us a rest" comes up from many a poor deluded soul, but, "there is no rest for the wicked."—Tidal Wave.

OUR LECTURERS find a pretty fair sprinkling of dead lodges in their travels; they are always lodges that never took a temperance paper or used any temperance literature, and consequently never had any real temperance life, or did any real temperance work; and if they are merely stood up again by the lecturers on the same old pedestal there will be in due time another job for some one to set them up again.

The Sutter County Farmer, No. 1, Vol. 1, comes to hand, as it seems, to take the place of the Banner and Journal. It claims to be unpartizan in politics, and proposes as its principal object to make a determined resistance to the present course of the mining companies who are destroying the farms and homes of the county. It has a pleasant and cheerful appearance, and sets out with a promise of those qualifications which lead to success in journalism.

THE ANTI-TREATING law of Wisconsin has been pronunced null and void. It was a law that was not on the statute book, which was amended in the interest of good morals and temperance. The reformers meant well, but there wasn't anything to reform. The mammon of unrighteousness will now be wholly given over to hospitality.—N. Y. Tribune.

What that means, ask some professor in the University to expound if he can.

THOMAS CARLYLE'S rebuke to an Irishman who complained of "Saxon oppression" is worthy of note at this time when the complaint is again a prominent subject of debate. The man moaning under his grievances was not a sober man, and Carlyle said to him: "No one oppresses thee, O free and independent franchiser; but does not this stupid pewter-pot oppress thee? No son of Adam can bid thee come or go; but this absurd pot of nasty drink, this can and does! Thou art the thrall, not of the Cedric Saxon, but of thy own brutal appetites and this scoured dish of liquor; and thou dost prate of thy liberty! Thou entire blockhead!

AN EPISCOPAL Minister the Rev. Archibald Beatty D. D. of Lawrence, Kansas, who was reported all over, as having declared his hostility to the Kansas law asserts that his remarks have been misrepresented: says he does not believe the law intends to interfere with sacramental usages, and that he is in full sympathy with its provisions.

SAN BERNARDINO. The Pacific Methodist notes that one of the two hotels of that place has closed its bar and come out as a temperance house. which it believes is "due to the elevation of public opinion on the temperance question, largely the result of Mrs. Stevens' labor there." Mrs S. was well received there as everywhere else and had the benefit of the assistance and countenance of the Los Angeles editor of the Pacific Methodist.

A TEMPERANCE PICNIC with a splendid program of literary exercises, music, dinner &c is to be held at Angels Camp 14th May. One of the ceremonies is a collection for the Home for Orphans and the nett proceeds of the whole affair are to be devoted to that institution. The program is a very chaste and promising one and it is creditable to the projectors that they can contrive an enjoyable entertainment without either a tom fool dramatic performance or a dancing frolic.

"MAYOR KALLOCK returned a message vetoing the ordinance making it a misdemeanor to print or have in one's possession lottery tickets. The message reads as follows: "I am compelled to return No, 1,626 without my approval. Fortunately, as I consider it, and unfortunately as you may consider it, I happen to be a minister as well as a Mayor, and therefore I am compelled to object to any such interference with the revenue of the churches of this city as Order No 1626 would seem to interpose."

TYRONE.—The Right Hon. Lord Claud Hamilton, referring to prohibition in Tyrone, said, May 19, 1870. "There is a district in that county of 61 sq. miles inhabited by nearly 10,000 people, having three great roads communicating with market towns, in which there are no public houses, entirely owing to the self action of the inhabitants. The result has been that, whereas those highroads were in former times constant scenes of strife and drunkenness, necessitating the presence of a very considerable number of police to be located in the district; at present there is not a single policeman in that district, and the poor rates are half what they were before.—Alliance News

CHARLES WATSON of Providence House, Halifax, England, offered in Oct. 1880 to give away a million temperance tracts to clergymen and christian and temperance missionaries who would apply and promise to properly distribute them. He said, it appeared clear to his mind, that if the applicants were suitable persons for the work and each was supplied with 5000 tracts, christianity and national sobriety would gain immensely by their zealous labors. And he was so impressed with that idea and received such a hearty response, that he employed eminent authors to provide over 60 new first class tracts, and has issued 8 millions in place of one as contemplated.

It is quite probable that will turn out to be one of the most successful schemes of the age for the advancement of christianity and human happiness. Mr. Watson is evidently one of the "prophets" that are raised up at times to give the world new light. If our R. W. G. L. and our Grand Lodges could borrow a little of his light and follow his example they would strike the key note of mightiest success.

ABOUT PRESIDENT HAYES.—The Western World thinks the RESCUE over severe in pronouncing to be lies the articles in the Philadelphia Times, which accused Mr. and Mrs. Hayes of being tipplers in private, and of Mrs. H. having accepted a box of whisky just before leaving the White House, etc. The World suggests it was so easy for Dr. Lanahan to go and get the proofs from the parties who would testify, etc. Why, the whole affair was a perfectly transparent lie from beginning to end: it was thoroly stamped "lie," and wooldyed "lie." And just the kind of lies that have been put up by such characters for 50 years past against temperance people. The serpent offered to produce parties to testify to Dr. Lanahan; but their names must be concealed. Why Dr. Lanahan knew that there could be produced 1000 of just that kind of parties, male or female, in Philadelphia, who for a bottle of whisky or a dollar would testify to anything that could be suggested prejudicial to any respectable total alstainer.

The falsehood of the articles was so perfectly apparent and monstrous that it was an act of the spiciest infamy in the Philadelphia Times to give them currency in any other manner than to expose their nastiness and the slimy villainy of their concoctor.

THE RESCUE,

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞ As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institu ion. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

Temperance Rally!

A TEMPERANCE CAMP MEETING will be held at GUERNEVILLE, SONOMA CO., CAL., commencing about June 30th, 1881, and continuing five days.

It will be under the immediate control and management of Enterprise Lodge, No. 356, I. O. G. T.

Every possible care will be taken to make the occasion a pleasant and profitable one to all who attend.

We cordially invite the assistance and co-operation of all friends of the temperance cause.

TEMPERANCE LITERATURE,

Below is a list of a few of the most useful and excellent works with which every reformer should be supplied, and in which he should be well posted:

BACCHUS DETHRONED.— A Prize Essay; Cloth, $1; paper edition, 50c.
Completely masters the whole subject. Everybody ought to have it.

TEMPERANCE LESSON BOOK.— By B. W. Richardson, M. A., M. D., LL. D., F. R. S. 220 pp. Cloth, 50c.; paper, 25c.
This is a series of short lessons on alcohol and its action on the body, accompanied with suitable questions, designed for study in public and private schools, and reading in schools and families. Send for it; read what this brightest and and best of medical scientists has discovered regarding all kinds of drinks; be sure to lend it to your family doctor.

TEN LECTURES ON ALCOHOL.—By B. W. Richardson, M. A., F. R. S. Comprising the six Cantor Lectures: "Action of Alcohol on the Body and on the Mind," "Moderate Drinking," "The Medical Profession," and "The Liberty of the Abject." 338 pp. Cloth, $1; paper, 50c.
The ablest and cheapest lectures ever presented to the American public,

ON ALCOHOL.—By Dr. B. W. Richardson, F. R. S., of London. 12mo., 190 pages. Six "Cantor Lectures," showing the nature and effect of alcohol on the body and mind. Cloth, 75c.; paper, 25c.

OUR WASTED RESOURCES.—By Dr. Wm. Hargreaves. 12mo., 202 pages. The Missing Link in the Temperance Reform, giving the most valuable statistics ever published. Price in cloth, $1.50; paper edition, 50c.

This book contains ten sermons and talks by this eminent divine. They are filled with sound, convincing arguments against the lawfulness, morality and necessity of the liquor-traffic, as well as stirring appeals to all Christian men and women to take a firm, decided, out-spoken stand in favor of total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors, Send for that and lend it to the ministers in your vicinity.

ALCOHOL AND THE STATE.—A discussion of the problem of law as applied to the liquor-traffic. By Robert C. Pitman, L.L.D., Associate Judge of Superior Court of Massachusetts. 12mo. 411 pages, $1 50.
It is a book for statesmen, legislators, and all intelligent, thoughtful temperance men and women everywhere. It shows that the Liquor Traffic is the enemy of the State; and the foe of all the objects for which the State exists; and presents such strong arguments, statistics, appeals, authorities, as will add greatly to an intelligent and wise solution of the Liquor Problem. The economy and legislative aspects of the Alcoholic discussion have never been so ably presented, and it should be in the hands of every citizen nd in every library in the land.

THE MEDICAL USE OF ALCOHOL.—95 pages. By James Edmunds, M. D., of London. Paper, 25c.; cloth, 60c.

THE MEDICAL PROFESSION AND ALCOHOL.—12 mo., 33 pages. By B. W. Richardson, M. D., 10c.

PROHIBITION DOES PROHIBIT; OR PROHIBITION NOT A FAITURE.—12mo, 48 pages. By J. N. Stearns, 10c.

MODERATE DRINKING.—For and Against, from Scientific Points of View. By B. W. Richardson, M. D. 12mo, 48 pages. Paper, 20c.

BEER AS A BEVERAGE.—24 pages. An Address by Rev. W. Hughey, in reply to the Appeal of the Beer Congress, 10c.

ALCOHOL AND THE HUMAN BRAIN.—By Rev. Joseph Cook. 12mo, 24 pp. An able scientific address, 10c.

TEMPERANCE AND LEGISLATION.—12mo, 24 pages. By Canon Farrar, D. D., 10c.

JULIA COLMAN'S WORKS.

SPECIMEN SETS.—Beer Tracts, Handbills, etc., 6 cents; Leaflets and Children's Tracts, 5c.; Tracts and Leaflets on Wine, 5c.; File case set of Union Leaflets, 18c.; File case set of Children's Tracts, 25c.

These file cases are of strong manila paper, nicely lettered, and they open like a port-folio, disclosing the sets; can be closed and fastened with a rubber ring; can be used for specimens for a long time, and are a great convenience in the use of tracts.

Contains full directions for the management of young and older people and children, in the study of the nature and effects of alcohol, so that they may never be tempted to learn by experience. The school is conducted on the model of the Sunday-school, both because that is a proper model and because people thus learn with so little explanation. Hundreds of these schools are being opened and are becoming very popular. The Text Books used in this Temperance School are

A work for the children. Simple, direct, concise and popular. They enjoy it much; study and learn to recite it all through—and explain it, too, provided the teacher uses also the

The object of this book is to assist the teachers in the use of the catechism on alcohol. It is arranged in short lessons, each of which is accompanied with a note giving directions for simple experiments, object lessons, blackboard exercises, followed by a little lecture on the above methods with facts and illustrations and incidents which may be used by the teacher. Every teacher and reader recognizes this Manual and Catechism to be just the thing needed: their suggestions and deductions are those of a thorough practical teacher, completely armed and equipped for that duty. No better help to temperance education has ever been produced; probably nothing that comes near it in usefulness.

These three works are especially intended for use in temperance organizations of various kinds, and there are many helps to go with them, such as the children's tracts above named, one of which is selected for each lesson. Then there are

RIPPLES OF SONG.—Paper, 15c,; boards ($1.60 per doz.), 18c.,

CHROMO TEXT CARDS.—Per 100, $1. Sewall's Stomach Plates, $9. same, mounted on rollers, $12.

And many others named and priced in the Temperance School above named. For teaching Temperance in the Day School, a movement coming now into very general favor, the new book has been prepared, entitled

An elementary text book for schools. This work is approved by the most experienced and distinguished advocates of Temperance

Miss Colman is always promptly willing to answer questions, and give explanations and make selections with the most scrupulous attention for all who call for her services in the line of temperance literature, and the RESCUE particularly recommends its readers to make liberal use of her admirable publications, and to apply for them at once at her new address,

MISS JULIA COLMAN,
54 Bible House, New York City, N. Y.

☞To get all the works in the two lists above, including 1,100 beer tracts and 1,000 leaflets, will cost about $11 if the books are bound in cloth, or $8 if in paper covers. Every lodge ought to get just the entire outfit at once, well bound for the use of its members.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED—At his home, near Stewart's Point, Sonoma Co., Cal., May 8th, 1881, Elias Loofborrow, aged forty years twelve days. He was a graduate of Oberlin, a faithful, earnest, consistent champion of Temperance and Right, and was, at the time of his death, Lodge Deputy of Horicon Lodge, No. 146. The Lodge passed fitting resolutions of respect and affection for the memory of deceased, and of sympathy for his wife and friends.

CALIFORNIA TYPE. The attention of printers and journalists is invited to the fact that the type and printing materials used on the RESCUE, were purchased at the factory of Messrs Painter & Co 512 Clay Street San Francisco, who furnish California made type, entirely the product of California material and California industry.

ABOUT ADVERTIZERS.—If you want to buy anything to the best advantage, to secure professional or educational services, engraving, printing, etc., please look over the advertizers' list in the RESCUE; there are no frauds, or cheats, or whisky beats among them; they are responsible and reliable people, all.

THE RESCUE is the only periodical on the West Coast of America (except the Pacific Censor at Vancouver, W. T., and the Santa Cruz Transcript) which makes any resistance to the empire of Satan, to the worship of the golden calves, to the destruction of the Sabbath and the moral and financial ruin and total damnation of the country. A good citizen, who desires crime and debauchery to be lessened in the State ought to subscribe for it, assist its circulation and induce his neighbor to do likewise.

SUMMIT LODGE intends to have good luck this year; it sends in a club of twelve and takes a Mrs. Hayes' picture. ENTERPRIZE has 35, and takes a Library of Universal Knowledge, fifteen volumes of one of the most useful works in the world. The Guerneville people are determined to keep their stand as the No. 1 Lodge of the world.

AND just before going to press June Lodge, Yuba City, sends a club of 12 for good luck the coming year.

BRO. LELAND sends a list of five subscribers from Oregon; two of them from East Portland, where fourteen copies of the RESCUE are now taken. That is pretty fair for a place so far off. He also says no RESCUE has reached Portland for three weeks; thinks the paper mailbags have been dumped into the mudholes of Southern Oregon and would come surer by steamer. Friends in Oregon and Washington Territory are assured that the papers are most carefully mailed every time; but if they have been lost for three weeks the loss will be made good by extending the time that much, on receipt of postal to that effect.

AT EXETER Hall the Temperance league lately had a public meeting to receive the testimony of teetotal mayors. The mayor of Leeds stated that there are now 27 of them in England; that as the temperance interest advances, the cost of local government is much reduced: so that in Leeds they find 50 policemen are sufficient where formerly 400 were required. It is strange that people require to be told these things: for altho every one in California knows that our police force are utterly insufficient to protect the lives and properties of the citizens, they must know equally well that if the grogshop was abolished, one tenth of the present number of police would be ample to fulfil all requirements in their line.

DEDICATION.—Bro W. H. Barron writes that Soulsbyville Lodge dedicated its new hall May 7th. At 10 A. M. a procession headed by the brass band marched to the residence of W. H. Barron to receive the G. W. C. T. who performed the dedicatory ceremonies in the presence of a large number of people including many visitors from neighboring lodges. At 2 P. M. our procession again formed with the addition of the Band of Hope numbering 75 members and marched to the picnic ground for refreshment and amusement. At 8 P. M. public installation and address by the G. W. C. T. and others. The new hall cost near $700, and furniture $150. The profits of the picnic were $38 a collection $80 and $418 had been previously paid toward the hall. Bro. B. says their lodge is working well and wants to hear of any one in the State that can beat it.

3552 copies of the RESCUE are printed and distributed this week, an extra demand arising all the time.

BRO. LELAND has sent nearly 70 subscribers to the RESCUE from Oregon since he left this State. He meets with much better success than ours do in that line.

THE Market Report or Price Current, prepared by the San Francisco Cash Grocery, corrected and published by the RESCUE, is worth a whole year's subscription for the paper to any one who has a family to provide for,

A NUMBER of extra copies of the RESCUE are sent, this week, to Lodge Deputies, to be distributed among the members and others. We want more subscribers, and believe if the paper is seen it will be read and subscribed for.

A LODGE of colored members organized in Chico, with the minister as L. D. That is a good way of starting in, and they are welcomed with a hope that their success may lead to a rapid extension of the blessings of the Order.

MRS STEVENS has alighted on a bonanza in the line of a health resort at Ojai Valley. The hotels there are entirely respectable, no bars nor any liquor on the tables; on the 19th she organized Ojai Valley Lodge 32 charter members.

THEY are to vote on prohibition in the State of North Carolina August 1st. What can we do in California to help them? Who knows but a few dollars worth of help in temperance literature sent them might just turn the scale on election day and carry it on the right side.

As an evidence that the RESCUE is appreciated and valued as an advertising medium, H. A. Smith, of the San Francisco Cash Grocery, says he gets inquiries, orders and remittances from nearly every county in the State, and from every State and Territory west of the Rocky Mountains.

THE District Lodge of San Francisco proposes to have a temperance re-union under its auspices at Woodward's Gardens, on Thursday June 23rd, of which further particulars and other notice will be given. The bar at the Gardens will be closed on the occasion, as the proprietors say, for the first time it has been done for any picnic or similar occasion.

IN a copy of the Fraternal Visitor published at Gold Hill Nev. Bro. W. R. Ellis gives an account of his labors in Nev. and Utah: and the successes so modestly related indicate his fitness for the work and give good promise of his future usefulness. He has organized quite a number of lodges in that very hard and sparse field.

PROHIBITION dont prohibit at all; just as much liquor sold in Maine as ever. But the liquor men who say this, are willing to spend promptly $100,000 in any State to buy votes or bribe judges to defeat any law like the Maine or Kansas or even a local option law. How anxious they are about a law that dont prohibit the sale of their poison.

THE Treasurer of the W. C. T. U. Literature Committee acknowledges the receipt of $128.40 from California on the dime collection and $190 from the rest of the United States. Of our collection $138 went to the N. T. Society, so that this State contributed more to that fund last year than the rest of the Union. Perhaps it will be more generally adopted this year.

LIBERAL.—A good many of those who talk so much of narrowness in others are so intensely narrow themselves that they never take an impartial or generous or rational view of anything; but retire like the turtle into the inside of their thick strong impervious shell of self conceit and ignorance, and make all their observations, do all their thinking and form all their opinions from that dimly lighted standpoint.

TEMPERANCE LEAFLETS.

LOOK NOT.

By Rev. W. A. DesBrisay, Temperance Sermonizer of the Episcopal Church, N. Y.

Look not upon the bright red wine,
When sparkling gleams within it shine,
And when it moves aright, the sign
That hides a secret spell:
'Tis but a spirit in whose breath
Is torment, agony and death.
And true the voice of wisdom saith,
It leads the soul to hell.

Look not upon the bright red wine.
For many a heart more stout than thine
And thousands slain around its shrine
Have yielded but to fall.
It hides the serpent's poisoned sting,
And wretched want and woe will bring;
It robs this life of everything,
Home, happiness and all.

Look not upon the bright red wine;
Awake! Oh man; a voice divine
Warns thee to-day, thy steps incline
To dangerous paths and dark;
Where sin and crime together wait
To lead thee to that last worst state;
The maddening fires of quenchless hate
Eternity will mark.

Look not upon the bright red wine,
Where demons in their joy combine
To lure thee on with prospects fine;
To ruin thee at last.
But take the temperance path of peace
Then care and woe and strife will cease;
There love and hope and joy increase,
And dangers all be past.

LICENSE—LOCAL OPTION—TOTAL PROHIBITION.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. FOUR.

We are told that this demand for total prohibition is premature, that it is in advance of public sentiment.

We must wait till this moral want has become the undoubted will of the people,

According to this public sentiment must be the measure and standard of effective law.

Is this safe?

May not public sentiment be terribly demoralized by perverted Law?

We must ever bear in mind that righteous laws have been in advance of the people ever since God gave His law on trembling Mt. Sinai.

Did God Almighty make a blunder? His laws as well as the best laws of society have not been obeyed, must they therefore be repealed? The fact is, laws to be beneficial must be in advance of the people, if they are not, they are actually demoralizing, this cry of "wait till public opinion ripens before we act" is the cry of the truckling politician who sacrifices principle for party success. This is not the watchword of the heroic reformer who goes forth in God's name resolved to deserve and achieve success by fidelity to principle. To wait is to bring disaster and defeat. To wait until Prohibition shall be easy is to wait forever.

The intrenched fortress of intemperance cannot be carried by subtle device or coup d'etat. It is stern relentless war, with a treacherous foe.

The life of this Republic is too short to be saved from the rum-fiend by local option or any thing short of total Prohibition. This demand is not, and cannot be premature, it must be made now, for the public mind will never make itself up for such a law until it is put resolutely to it as a present question. To ask for anything less is to demoralize, embarrass, and endanger this reform, and postpone the day of final victory. Then it is said again, that an unexecuted law, is demoralizing, worse than no law; we do not believe it, there is a power in right law beyond its immediate availability, No refomatory law can be a "dead letter" for though apparently dead, it speaketh mightily. Like wisdom it standeth in the top of high places and its voice is to the sons of men.

Right law is an educator and it will mould the public sentiment in the right direction, but if wrong it perverts the conscience. Let us not then abate one jot or title in our demand for total prohibition till it is put upon the statute book. Let it stand there and have a chance even though for a season, if need be it is a "dead letter" it is a thousand times better than any "License Law." It will develop more and more its restrictive energies, and be as easily and as universally applied as any other law.

There are others who say that a prohibitory law cannot be enforced.

This is another fallacy. It has been enforced, it is undeniable history—it can be executed anywhere as easily as any other criminal law. To say it cannot is not to reason but to rant.

It may not entirely annihilate liquor-drinking any more than the vigorous execution of criminal law will annihilate theft, riot, or murder, but it will stop the business of drunkard making. This is the point to which all effort should be directed, the destruction of the dramshop system. This can be accomplished by no half-way measures. Those who have been willing to accept of "Local Option," as the wisest, and best method of securing ultimate victory, will find that it is a mistake and will result in discomfiture.

Total Prohibition, based upon the criminality of the traffic, and the unanswerable logic of observed facts, kept before the people as a present issue, is the only true path to success in this reform.

Around this present, and living issue every temperance man, and woman ought to rally and never cease our efforts, until our flag waves in victory over our conquered foe. The active forces to be used in securing this will be considered in our next article.

UNION LEAFLETS.

AN ELEMENT OF SUCCESS.

Public sentiment requires education. Popular errors concerning alcoholic stimulants, their necessity, their nutritive qualities, their purity, their medical uses, must be corrected. The moral sense of the community needs quickening. We can not enforce existing laws which are in some sections and to a certain extent excellent, because there is so little correct opinion and acute moral sense to sustain right legal action. People are suffering on every hand for light and knowledge. They should be taught and stimulated to a true theory and practice. How shall this be accomplished but by close hand to hand labor on the Bible principle "line upon line and precept upon precept, here a little and there a little.' We must give the people reading (and they are eager and hungry for it). We who go to preach Gospel Temperance every week to listening crowds, would fain give them earnest, stirring, helpful words to take home to study over and to remember. But we can not give them without money. We have to steel our hearts to their mental hunger and soul-need, because we have not the few dimes that would suffice. People do not always know its value well enough to purchase for themselves. We need at the outset to force it upon public attention, to place it gratuitously and freely in their hands, at least in the shape of tracts, handbills, leaflets, and that is what we women are trying to do. Will you help us? We are freely giving our time, our labor, and our money when we have it, but these are all too little. Can you not add something to provide us with these helps? We know there is plenty of money, for we see its evidence in dress and jewelry, in liquors and cigars, in fine houses and fast horses; while we look in vain for the meagre pittance which would enable us to buy tracts and papers that would help redeem the race. How we wish we could turn things upside down for a little while, and let the amply filled coffers spill out toward us.

Can not those who hold the Lord's money see that it would further His cause to put it freely into the temperance treasury? Shall we fail because there is no money to arm and equip and provision the army, to build roads and bridges, to erect forts, to carry out the war to the very end.

It costs far less to save souls than to ruin them. Look at the vast treasure wasted in this land because of intemperance; the money actually spent for liquor and the mischief done by it, the support of the men engaged in selling it, and the enormous cost through city and State of repairing its ravages, the material perverted from wholesome food to a noxious poison, and the worse than unproductive industry employed in this perversion; and then see how little comparatively would be needed to prevent this waste, to turn the industries of the people in a profitable direction, and to save the bodies and souls now going to ruin. Oh! for the money. How we covet it for the temperance work! Who will give their thousand dollars, their hundreds, their tens, their fives, even their dimes, to swell the amount? Then we will scatter the leaves of life, fling broadcast the papers, pile up the books everywhere, with their burning words of truth, educate the people, pray down the Holy Ghost for enlightenment, that we may save our doomed people from destruction. Will you help us? H. E. B.

ANTIMONOPOLY.

The National League sends out a circular to the people from which the, following extracts are given and commended to the consideration of the reader. The principles of the League are announced to be the advocacy of the rights of the many as against the privileges of the few. The control of corporation by the State which creates them. Justice for capital and labor which are allies not enemies:

The National Board of Trade," at its last convention in Washington adopted a report which declared that:

"The degree to which the great powers of steam and electricity have been allowed to pass into corporate hands, which employ them as a means to tax the public unduly for their use, is at this time forcing iself upon the attention of our statesmen, and there is a widespread feeling that the public welfare demands that the power and privileges of corporate grants shall be limited in the future."

More than ten years ago it became apparent to many persons that the abuses which accompanied the advantages of steam highways must be remedied. The corruption of the Credit Mobilier, the stock watering operations of the elder Vanderbilt, the constant and rapid progress made in cosolidating links of railroads into vast systems, with a tendency to exercise, arbitrarily and unequally, the power thus acquired, attracted the attention of thoughtful minds to the relation which these and similar events bore to the public welfare. They called attention to the picture drawn by Mr. Greeley, in his address in Minneapolis, in 1871, where he said:

"I speak as a friend not only of railroads in general but of the land-grant railroads in particular, when I insist on a reconstruction of the policy under which they have hitherto been authorized and often snbsidized. That reform can hardly be too sweeping, and it cannot come too soon. I can but outline some of its broader features.

"A dozen or so of railroad magnates, summoned by private message, meet from time to time in one of our great cities. They consult in secret, dine and wine satisfactorily, adjourn and go their several ways. Next morning, the telegraph wires will have flashed across the land their decision that every bnshel of grain going to market, every bale of goods passing inland, shall henceforth pay twenty to thirty per cent, more freight than has hitherto been paid. In effect, this bevy of railroad kings have arbitrarily reduced the value of every farm, every quarter-section, every bushel of grain, in the Great West. If they owned the whole country, and all who live in it, they could not lord it over us more tyrannically. And perhaps they will proceed next day to make a scrip dividend, or additional issue of stocks, representing nothing but their own rapacity, so as to conceal from dull and careless eyes the fact that they are exacting from their customers an annual profit of 15 or 25 per cent, on their actual investment.

"I ask this State, and every State, to affirm and exercise its right of fixing proper and reasonable rates of fare freight on every railroad subject to its jurisdiction; that if the courts should in any case decide that the power thus claimed is not granted to Legislatures by existing constitutions, then I ask that such power be expressly conferred by constitutions, then I ask that such power be expressly conferred by constitutional amendment. There can be no doubt of the right of the people thus to improve the fundamental law; in fact, I can see no reason for doubt that the same power which sufficed to give the farmers' house and lands to a company at a price virtually fixed by the State, will suffice to insure to the farmers the right to use that railroad at prices likewise fixed by the State."

We propose that we not only have a temperance fourth of July, but that every county in the State get up a temperance camp meeting later or in the summer. Let us make temperance "boom" while the sun shines, and then when the water comes, we will go into our churches and halls and keep it "booming."—Monitor Journal, of Seymour, Ind.

That comes from Indiana but it came from Enterprise Lodge at Guerneville first, which has had its temperance 4th of July camp meeting two years and soon will have a third.

England has 90,000 members of the seceded Good Templars, by latest report.

A SUGGESTION TO LOCAL UNIONS.

The great need of our work is more systematic and persistent effort to manufacture public sentiment. Our Unions do not yet carry out the simple practical plans so often urged.

Let us beg you, dear sisters, to appoint a "Librarian" for the Loan Library. This lady should be ex officio member of the Executive Committee.

Appended to this you will find a list of books suitable for such a library. It is not absolutely necessary that you have all the books therein mentioned, but for five or six dollars you can get enough to place in nearly every home where your work is looked upon with indifference or distrust.

Let it be a part of the regular weekly report to ask such questions as—

Who has Judge Pitman's "Alcohol and State"?

How long has that person had it?

Have our physicians had "Medical Profession and Alcohol"?

Have the teachers in the public schools had "Alcohol and Hygiene?"

Have the Sunday-school and public school teachers any of our books?

What person has "Dr. Crosby and His Reviewers?"

Is "Our Union" on file at the public reading rooms and in the private libraries of our pastors?

Can we not secure the introduction of temperance books and papers in our various Sunday-schools?

Let this Librarian keep a careful record of all these points and others that may suggest themselves. She should also be authorized to invite doctors, lawyers and ministers to address the W. C. T. U. or the public on all the topics treated, giving as their speeches, if they will, an outline of the book read, and a statement of the thoughts it awakened in their minds.

In many cases it may be well to allow the Librarian to be also agent for "Our Union," which should be presented at all public meetings. Let the distribution of literature in the audience also be under her supervision, and the editing of the column in the weekly local paper, also the putting up of boxes in depots, markets, stores and workshops.

You will become more intelligent by spending a little time over these books and pamphlets yourselves, at local meetings, and the result of all this will appear in fortified and amended lives and conscientious ballots.

"God's great gift of speech," abused so long, must be wisely used to build up the cause which is a part of His Kingdom.

SEND THEM BACK.

Germany complains that her people are leaving her for America—whole villages are being depopulated. And so, between the effort to retain her own people, and to drive out the Jews, the country is quite unsettled. American emigrant agents are not very safe just now on German soil. But while Germany complains of her loss, we complain most bitterly and with good cause over the accession to our tramp, pauper and criminal population from Germany. Those who are familiar witn our prison and pauper records will agree that we are building prisons and alms-houses in this country that ought to have been built in Germany and other European countries. Another alarming fact that should arouse every true American is, that this class has no love for our institutions—no proper conception of liberty. Liberty means license, law and order means tyranny, with them.

If we could gather up the paupers and criminals and law breakers and tramps that have come from Germany during the last ten years, and return them, it would be a good riddance for us. and there would be less cause to complain of "depopulated cities." It would pay the United States Government well to keep vessels at the dock to gather up the thousands who are coming to us year after year, to be supported at public expense, and return them. To be sure, thousands of good people come from Germany to America, and we welcome them. But we insist that every nation should take care of its own paupers and criminals; and those landed on our shores should never be allowed to leave the port until they left on a return ship.

The sanctity of the Sabbath demands that we rein in these Sabbath breakers; temperance demands that we clear out the Irish whisky shops and German beer saloons; patriotism demands that politics be cleared of voters who cannot read or write English, and do not understand our institutions or our language, as well as drunkards and criminals who are controlled by appetite and avarice.—Christian Woman.

A CRAZY REPORTER OR A CRAZY PULPIT.

"Hence we see that a certain woman has got a new bonnet and her next-door neighbor is teasing her husband to get her a more fashionable one, so that she may eclipse her neighbor. A lady in the next block has got a new sealskin cloak, which has cost the lady next door many a tear and sigh, because the lady with the sealskin is driving furiously and has got far in advance of her. These petty jealousies and unjustifiable aspirations to excel in style, etc., are the main cause of the numberless evils in which our fair city is literally engulfed. They have blasted the hopes of many a hard-working husband, introduced discord into happy families, and in fine, driven many furiously to destruction. In many instances devoted husbands, rather than see their wives tortured with the demon of jealousy, accede to monstrous demands for money to purchase superfluous articles of fashion, while perhaps their home is rapidly sinking under a heavy mortgage and want is staring them in the face."

There must surely be some mistake there in the reporter's notes: it is difficult to believe a preacher could utter such an extravagant, ridiculous and utterly baseless absurdity. There are no doubt occasional evils resulting from extravagance and envy of "style" &c, but to say that such things are at all the main cause of the numberless evils which literally engulf our city, would be utterly beyond any of the gibberings of the charlatan Denton, so fertile in nonsense. It would be as fair to say all our evils are due to the waste of money upon the poor blind man who grinds hand organ distress near the custom house. It would be a gross and malignant and utterly unprovoked insult to women, should a preacher declare that a virtuous woman who purchases a stylish bonnet and another who wears a sealskin cloak, are a greater evil and sin and curse to the city than its 5000 grogshops and brothels. Such talk about women was commonly bandied among drunken male idiots on a spree at the tavern 30 or 40 years ago, when women were slaves aud chattels; but let us hope it could never have disgraced a modern pulpit. If it did, the utterer must either be very partial to the gin mills or he ought to learn something about what they do of evil.

ENTERPRISE LODGE, Guerneville sends another string to be added to its club to the RESCUE making 32 paying subscribers besides about 5 or 6 copies sent to friends in other places. If every Lodge in California made the same use of the RESCUE in proportion to its membership it would have 7,000 subscribers and its advertizing value would be such, that the paper could be enlarged and improved and the advertizing income would enable the publisher to furnish the paper at $1,00 a year: in which case it would be easy to make its circulation 15 or 20,000 and exterminate the liquor business at once.

SANTA CLARA CO. ATTENTION!!!

To all the Lodges of our Order in Santa Clara County:

GREETING—Inasmuch as we now have ten Lodges in this county it seems to me just and proper that some steps should be taken to reorganize our District Lodge in order that we may crystalize our efforts to banish the demon, intemperance. Therefore I earnestly request that all Lodges desirous of performing their whole duty to the cause we love, will correspond with me to the end that a convention may be called and an organization effected at the earliest possible time. Let us have at least a thousand members in this county before the meeting of Grand Lodge.

The foes of prohibition are always on the alert. Why should we slumber at our post with Prohibition for our watchword? Let us be up and doing "for the night cometh when no man can work."

A report from the lad's school the other day showed him to stand No. 27 in his class.

"How many are there in your class?" asked his father.

"Then you are at the foot?"

"Yes, papa."

A week afterwards the report showed him to stand No 29.

TEMPERANCE AND GOSPEL SONGS.

THE National Temperance Society has recently published an edition of the above song-book, compiled by J. E. White, and bespeaks for it a wide circulation among temperance workers. Abounding in fresh and stirring songs by eminent musical authors of the day, and containing a few anthems and male quartets, together with the best of old familiar tunes, which cannot be omitted from any collection, it is admirably adapted for home and public use. Price in board cover, neatly and substantially bound, 30 cents; $25 per hundred.

Address J. N. STEARNS, Publishing Agent 58 Reade Street, New York City.

A MERCIFUL CHINAMAN.—Yesterday morning a magnificent live green turtle, weighing about 300 pounds. was laying on its back on the sidewalk on Merchant street, opposite to stall 33 owned by A. Palladini, patiently waiting to be quartered for the benefit of some epicures, but it was decreed otherwise. A quiet, elderly Chinaman, who is not a member of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, saw the poor turtle and asked what it was worth. "Fifteen dollars," answered the Italian fish-monger. Immediately the Chinaman opened his pouch and paid the required sum, and then called an expressman and paid him 75 cents to carry him and the turtle to the Vallejo street wharf, and there threw the turtle into the bay to shift for itself and avoid all the gourmands of this city. The Chinaman's name is Doctor Wong Tze Fung.

TURLOCK LODGE.—Bro. P. R. McCabe and a younger brother from Turlock Lodge lately spent a few holidays in San Francisco. They belong to a lodge of earnest workers who are deeply interested in seeing their own labors and those of the lodge bear some fruit. Turlock Lodge has very strong opposition to meet, but that only makes it more determined to succeed, and it never under any circumstances thinks of getting sick or sending for either doctor or undertaker: its members have a good lively club of subscribers to the RESCUE and in their success bear the usual testimony to the advantages of making use of the press.

MAY 3d a law came into force in Massachusetts which removes all screens and obstructions from grogshop windows and makes whisky clubs nuisances; some of the saloonkeepers are walling up the lower half of their windows to evade the law. A sweet business to be licensed that dare not be seen except by its own slaves.

THE LOCAL OPTION LAW.

It is true that "The State is the normal unit of sovereignty," but this has no application to one of the States of our Union. No one of the States is a sovereignty. The United States is the only sovereign known to our government; so, should we take to guide us the idea that no important matter should be entrusted to any power below the sovereignty we should have to confide all important matters to the Government of the United States. This is not our theory of government. The township is the unit of power, and from it we ascend on up to the sovereignty. Our sovereign, the United States, grants a license to sell intoxicating liquors at retail, but this license does not prohibit a State from stopping its sale within its bounds. Take the same rule a little further on, by a local option law. The State grants a license to sell but this does not interfere with prohibition by a county, city, town or township. This gives each locality an opportunity to protect itself when not protected by the general laws. It is a means for curtailing, not extending the general law of license, hence, in it there is naught except prohibition. It is the entering wedge for total prohibition. Mistake No. 2 is the comparing a local option law to a general prohibitory law well enforced. It should be remembered that no one ever advocated a local option law for a permanent rule for all time to come. It is, and has always been intended as a stepping-stone to total prohibition. We have to wait before we can procure total prohibition. This is the work of years. Moreover, it is a serions question as to whether total prohibition is desirable sooner than it could be enforced. The local option brings it just as fast as a majority in any locality favors it, without waiting until some other place shall agree with them in that matter.

We must keep in mind that there is a difference between the means and an end. Those who object to local option assume that its friends look to it as the final end desired, while they claim only as a means to a higher and general prohibition—in the end constitutional prohibition. But, suppose we do put the right to license into the local unit instead of the State, and this local unit grants a license, and this granting is a wrong, how much greater is that wrong than it would be if the State granted the same license? The State now grants it. Does the wrong become greater because some other political division grants it? The granting is a wrong, but no greater in the one case than in the other. Under option we procure towns and counties enough to carry the State, then States enough to carry the United States. We commence, in all reforms, with the individual. When a majority in the unit of our government shall agree as to such reform let them have the benefit of that reform; they have earned it, and by it they can protect their interests at once. This is the natural order of all changes for the better. There is but little yeast, but if good it will eventually improve the whole loaf. Why compel the whole State to use bad bread until a majority of the bakers agree upon one plan? If one baker is allowed to improve his plan of baking his example will be seen and copied by others, and the whole State will the sooner have better food. We reform the whole by reforming the units of which that whole is composed. The exclusive prohibitionists are looking for the whole to come first. They must die disappointed. They object to option because under certain circumstances, as they look at it, it grants license. Suppose that be true; is it any worse than a law that grants such a licence under all circumstances? They compare the local option law with a law totally prohibitory, while they should compare it to one granting license to all whenever and wherever called for. Between the two latter laws we are to choose.

Why not take a law that enables a town or county to protect itself against the danger and evils of intemperance, just as soon as they shall work up the matter and conclude, by a majority, that intoxicants are evil? Then protection is in their own hands, and why deprive them of it? When we have a majority of total abstainers in a township let the laws and social customs conform to their wishes in that subdivision. Why prohibit that conformity? When we get a majority of total abstainers in the State then the laws and social customs of the State should and will conform to the wishes of such majority, and when such majority extends to the United States the same conformity of laws and customs will follow. These changes come as a consequence.

Lecturers' Reports.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

WM. CROWHURST.

MARYSVILLE, (Yuba Co.), May 21st, 1881.

Challenge Mills, a small place, which contains afew people, was visited, and its few inhabitants recommended to go to Brownsville or Forbestown and unite with our Order. The audience, though small, was attentive and appreciative.

Forbestown, on Sunday afternoon, enjoyed the blessedness of an earnest and very interesting Band of Hope meeting. The little ones are being well trained under this 15 year-old Lodge. An excellent Lodge meeting was held, at which, after initiation, one P. W. C. T. thought it might look like weakness for a strong man to cry, but he could not help it. But Forbestown people believe that they who sow in tears shall reap in joy. A Degree meeting for the exemplifying of the unwritten work and ceremonies was well attended, and this was followed by a recess for dinner. Next came a praise meeting, in the M. E. church, in which everybody cheerfully united; then the lecture, and as the direct result of the work, 8 names were obtained. After the lecture a temperance experience meeting was held, in which many took part. As the thrilling testimonies and determined resolutions fell from lips of brave men and women, all felt "It is good to be here." God bless the good work.

Brownsville was again visited, but owing to a meeting of the A. O. U. W., to be held in the same hall, special effort was not put forth, for want of time. The Glee Club supplied excellent temperance music. Good speeches might have been made by local talent of excellent quality, but for lack of time. Bro. Crane attended us through this entire mountain campaign, and made us happy in his beautiful mountain home.

Oroville was once more visited. Officers were elected and installed, and Northern Star Lodge launches out for earnest temperance work.

Marysville, in its Presbyterian church, held three good meetings, the audience increasing in numbers every night. Leaflets, RESCUES and tracts were distributed during the meetings. Everything had been well advertised, and the Lodge was repaid for its noble efforts. Nine persons were received by dispensation on the third night, when the meeting closed with an ice cream and strawberry festival.

Bros. Covillaud, Engel, Brooks and others are doing all in their power to make the cause successful. God aid them. Bro. Graves was on hand, as he always is.

The Biggs Record says: "Prof. Crowhurst is one of the most talented and pleasant speakers on the Coast, and his lectures, whether on temperance or other subjects, are worth listening to. * * He delivered two very interesting lectures on temperance, in the Baptist church, on Saturday and Monday evenings. He amused and interested his hearers during the two evenings, and all are of the opinion that Mr. Crowhurst is the right man in the right place. He has been very successful in this county, having reorganized two Lodges, and organized two new ones since he has been in this county, up to the present writing—six days.

MRS. STEVENS.

The Ventura Free Press says of Mrs Stevens at Ventura.

She has stirred up the community to a fever heat and the result is almost every body and his wife and children have signified their willingness to become members of the order of Good Templars. More than enough names have already been secured to raise the membership to one hundred,

And at Santa Paula. Mrs. Stevens is probably the most earnest and successful temperance lecturer in the state, in fact she is an evangelical team of herself, and half a dozen such women would sink the rum traffic in California so low that not a bubble would rise to mark the spot where it went down beneath the flood tide of public condemnation. She goes from our peaceful and quiet village with the hearty wishes of Heaven's choicest blessing upon her from the entire community. Mrs. Stevens has been instrumental in swelling our Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars from sixty-two to one hundred, and while at the Sespe, she succeeded in gaining for their Lodge over fifteen members. She will shortly commence a series of lectures in Ventura, and if the people of that rum-cursed city turn out and hear her, and can then frame a reasonable standing point upon which to base an argument against the Good Templars, don't join the Lodge. But if you fail, just step into the great army of Temperance that is rapidly approaching a grand perihelion of success in the state of California, for the politics of the near future of our state will be whisky or no whisky. That's the issue which men must face fairly and squarely within the next four years.

Mrs. Stevens reports Mound District Lodge organized May 17 with 30 members. 250 members added to the membership up to the 18th in Ventura county. The Good Templars agitating for a Temp. Coffee House; Two whisky murder trials now in progress are a help to open peoples eyes to the necessity of getting the throne of iniquity rooted out of this State.

F. J. CULVER.

Fulton turned out well. This new lodge is in a very flourishing condition. Windsor, likewise, gave us a good audience. Fulton stores and saloons close on Sundays. Windsor stores close, but the saloons have only partially. From here we went to Geyserville, and on the way stopped at Litton's Springs and witnessed the closing exercises of the Litton's Springs College, four young men graduating. This is one of the best schools in this part of the State; it is the old Mound City College of San Francisco. Geyserville gave us a good audience. The Lodge is struggling with the question whether Good Templars can consistently put out and cultivate the wine grape. The meaning of "Cause to be furnished to others," in the obligation, is a question of dispute. Saturday evening found us in Healdsburg. A fair audience, mostly ladies, greeted us at the Presbyterian church. Preached at this church on Saturday morning to the combined audience of the Presbyterians and Methodists, as both pastors were away. Will send more in the morning.

This Band is one of the most promising in the county, the attendance this Sunday afternoon was about 100. Recitations, readings, songs, etc. were well rendered. Sow the seed in the youthful heart and water it with care, fear not, God will give the increase. In the evening the M. E. Church was packed to its utmost capacity with a goodly number standing. Here as elsewhere we set the Sunday ball rolling, and we hope and trust that the time is not far distant when Sonoma county may not only be banner county in number of lodges, but a county where all places of business will be closed in compliance with section 300, A hobby? Yes; a good one whereby 21 saloons and bars have partially or wholly closed on the last five Sundays. We start up the coast.

M. D. MERRICK.

On Tuesday, the 17th, I found a slim audience at Temescal; and on the next evening Temescal Lodge was organized, and Tuesday fixed upon as the night of meeting. My audience in East Oakland on the eve of the 19th inst. was small, but the meeting was a pleasant one, and will, we trust, be attended with good results. The Lodge will hereafter hold regular open meetings once a month. Paid a visit to Constitution on the 20th. This Lodge is not as prosperous as it ought to be, but will, we trust, get down to work for the real interest of the Order pretty soon. Visited Degree Temple on the 21st. The degree of Charity was conferred by Bro. McCamant in a most dignified and correct manner. On Sunday, 22nd, attended a temperance mass meeting at "B. B." Hall, on Eddy street. These meetings are doing much good and should be sustained. On Monday, 23d, met with Fountain Lodge in Oakland, at the Medical College. The entertainment was excellent and the lecture most pleasantly received. Fountain Lodge, too, will continue its public meetings, and the result will be increased prosperity.

C. N. GOULDING,

Writes May 24, 1881: Lectured in the following places, 15th and 16th in Dixon, fourteen applications received for membership. 17th in Davisville; 18th attended lodge in Woodland; 19 and 20, addressed large audiences; 21 in Madison again afternoon 22d. Lodge will be organized in a few days. Sunday evening, 22d lectured in Pleasant Prairie Schoolhouse, received 19 names as charter members for lodge which will be organized next Sunday evening, 29th by District Deputy, Bro B. H. Hoag; addressed large audience here last evening, 23d; find the people aroused and determined to enforce the Sunday law. Audiences are large and enthusiastic: no doubt of the growing sentiment regarding temperance.

OJAI VALLEY.

I have never visited a more charming retreat than Ojai Valley; it might more properly be called a grand park, with its trees planted ages past by mother nature, with as much precision as a row of Riverside oranges now-a-days; so that this upland valley might be compared to an old English Park. This place is reached by a charming drive, either direct from Santa Barbara on the new grade road, or from Ventura. The drive is wooded and picturesque. The Ventura river, a beautiful mountain stream, is crossed some sixteen times en route, and is suggestive of trout fishing. One almost feels as if transported to another country when this fine old park bursts upon the view. Surrounded on all sides by lines of hills with their shifting changing lights.

Here invalids come from all parts of the earth and find speedy relief from asthma, from bronchial and pulmonary trouble in this dry mountain air. At the hospitable hotel of Mr. Frank Barrows or Mr. Magee, one may be surrounded with all the comforts and nearly all the luxuries to be found in a city home; but the chief charm of the Ojai to me is the fact that nowhere are there any saloons or wine rooms or barrooms. It is emphatically a temperance valley. The proprietors of the hotels, Mr. Barrows and Mr. McGee, are too well known for me to add one word in their favor.

Mr. Frank Barrows' of Oakland and San Francisco fame is a Good Templar and a Christian gentleman; one who loves truth better than dollars, one who has bought the truth and would not degrade it or sell it. He is deservedly popular, and the character of his guests speaks for him; it is a refined Christian home. The Rev. Taylor, a man of rare excellence, has sought the valley for bronchial relief, and here he has established a Presbyterian society and already a church is in prospect. It is to be hoped that some of our rich Christians will remember the Ojai as they did the Yosemite. Of one fact they may be assured, no saloons will confront them here as in Yosemite.

At the school house I organized Ojai Valley Lodge with 32 charter members, Mr. Thomas Barrows, L. D. The boys of Ojai will be protected from the contaminating influences of the saloons of Ventura that have so crippled and destroyed the financial and moral strength of Ventura Co.

I think as our people grow in grace and total abstinence, such homes as the Ojai offers will be greatly sought. All the citrus and orchard fruits grow in the foothills; water is plentiful there and easily obtained. One need not redeem from a desert waste as are the beautiful garden homes of Riverside, for the soil is rich alluvial, and a little thrift under the most favorable auspices will afford one all the varied productions of our state. Ojai honey has already become famous. When Good Templars feel the need of rest, remember Ojai valley.

Our obligation should lead us to foster and encourage all temperance resorts; to strengthen every community that takes care to prevent the rum fiend from destroying its homes. If the National Temperance Advocate will make favorable mention of this beautiful Sanitarium it will oblige; for a mine of future wealth lies in encouraging temperance communities. I need not add that all winter these hotels have been more than crowded and overflowed into all the available cottages, so that large additions will be made this year. No fogs or north wind ever penetrate here; the clear mountain air has been thoroly tested, the wonderful curative powers fully demonstrated. The summer days are warm, but the nights always cool, and almost every day a breeze sweeps across the hills making the atmosphere deliciously fresh and invigorating.

Ojai valley bids fair to become the future Mecca of all who will heed the first warning notes of that slight but persistent cough. There is no exile in going to Ojai, cheerful society, happy surroundings fun and fishing, horseback riding, carriage driving and all the fragrant family of evergreen trees awaiting your coming. There you can hold sweet converse with nature as it was achieved by the Creator's bountiful hand.

The wide world over there could not be found a more fitting place to enjoy rest and recreation. It is with reluctanee I leave so enchanting a spot, and the spirit of kindness prompts me to write this article with the hope that it may meet the eye of some who will be induced to seek a new lease of life by taking a trip to Ojai valley.

EMILY P. STEVENS.

It may be well to remark to the uninitiated that Ojai is pronounced Ohi as nearly as possible.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

CURRENTS OF THE SEA.

NUMBER SIX.

THE INDIAN OCEAN.

There is evidently a general circulation of the waters between the southern shores of Asia and Africa, and the frozen regions of the Antarctic. The Agulhas stream briefly described last week is the most plainly defined of these movements, but there is doubtless a complex system of currents, under and upper, which are so contrived as to keep up a healthy circulation and commingling of the waters to preserve them from being too salt here or too fresh there, and also to fulfil a constant active service in the distribution of temperature.

It is very likely that the warm currents that set southward are active agencies in the loosening of the mighty icebergs which are seen floating in vast numbers in the far south: but again these warm waters melt them before they reach the generally traveled highways of ships and steamers in the Southern Seas. We can only judge of these things by what is known of currents in the more carefully explored localities. A current enters the Indian Ocean from the Pacific through Torres Strait, north of Australia, but as it has no depth, only a very few fathoms, it cannot have any great influence.

THE PACIFIC.

A pretty constant current flows out of the Pacific, passing Cape Horn to the Eastward, and increasing the difficulties of making a westerly passage by the Stormy cape. This flow of water is probably occasioned by the almost constant driving force of the westerly gales which prevail all over the southern oceans between the latitudes of 40 and 50 degrees. This current bears at certain times a large fleet of icebergs from the Pacific into the Atlantic. After passing Cape Horn they are carried to the northward and eastward, and disappear generally before they get as far north as 40 degrees south latitude. This is certain evidence of a mighty northward drift from the polar south.

In one season the southern summer of 1855 and 6, (that expression will be understood) more icebergs were reported by navigators as seen in the Southern Ocean than the aggregate of all that had been reported in the Southern Hemisphere in all previous years. Sixty or seventy towering masses could be seen at once, as some reported; and there was a very remarkable ice island which was drifted right into the thorofare of travel, into that part of the South Atlantic where ships bound from Europe or the U. S. to the Eastern world, strike off to the east and where they frequently meet ships homeward bound that have come from the Pacific by Cape Horn.

This monstrous berg was seen by a good many vessels; the Great Britain sailed along its length six hours at ten miles an hour, which made it sixty miles in length. And it was estimated to be 300 ft. above water. It was of a form approaching to a crescent; on one side there was a deep bay; this was at one time the western side, and on a day when the weather was pretty thick and the berg could not be seen very far, two English ships bound to Australia with passengers, running before a fresh gale, found themselves suddenly entrapped in this bay, and had to turn and beat out of it. One of the vessels escaped and reported the last that was ever heard of the other; the "Guiding Star, a beautiful new clipper ship, built in St John, N. B. much after the model of the "Flying cloud" was last seen in that dilemma, and it is supposed that she missed stays (failed to turn about) and collided with the berg, and went down there with her 660 passengers.

HUMBOLDT CURRENT.

Humboldt, a scholarly observer, in one voyage discovered a great many things which men had seen with both eyes shut a thousand times before. He was the first to notice a cold current running along the coast of Chili and Peru to the northward and westward as the land trends. This must come from the Polar regions and along these coasts there is a cool bath for good, wholesome fish. Herring, mackerel of several sizes, large, larger and super large horse mackerel, smelt, sardines and various other fish of excellent quality are found in great abuudance along this coast. That is they are there, and are found when a French, Italian or American ship anchors on the coast and the seamen net or hook them. The Peruvians like fish a little, too, and sometimes they buy a few from the Italians who have settled there. Sometimes when a French man of war used to be in Callao, the French sailors used to catch at night and sell at the mole of Callao in the early morning a good sized boat load of excellent fish. The Peruvians themselves dont fish; first they dont like to soil their hands, and then they are such an intensely busy people that they have no time to waste fishing. They have to gamble so hard to make a living at Monte and Pedro and some other games whose names have unfortunately escaped my memory, that they cant afford to fish; but there are millions of sea lions, seals, pelicans and other birds and animals which are actively employed in preventing the fish from becoming too numerous on their coast. So the Peruvians dont have to fish. This current continues to the north until it merges with the great

EQUATORIAL CURRENT.

Of the Pacific. This is a continuous stream running west across the Ocean and turning to the northward as it meets with the coral banks and islands of Australia, New Guinea and the China sea.

Fifteen years ago the writer went from San Francisco to Baker's Island which is about half way across the Pacific and a few miles north of the equator. It was intended to make fast to a buoy there, the water being too deep for ordinary anchorage. Two other ships were at the buoys and we could not get in. Had lots of supplies to deliver there but while they were getting a few boatloads out we drifted away with the rapid current almost out of sight of the little low flat island. The shore superintendent said we must go up north 300 miles or so into the trade winds and there beat to windward of the island and return. I laughed at Capt Babcock and said, with such a breeze as this and one of the smartest ships in the world I should expect to have him come of to-morrow morning, bright and early and get the rest of his traps. We could and should get back by early dawn, certain.

Next day we got pretty close to the Island several times, but the current was stronger as we neared it and we missed it by ever so much: second day we saw it farther off: third day we got a westerly squall which drove us 20 miles east in about two hours, but with that fortunate help we did not get in sight of the island. Then after 3 days hard fight against that current I remembered the story of the Flying Dutchman, and concluded his policy was not sound. Went up 300 miles north, made a few tacks in the trade winds, came down again 60 miles east of the island and reached it, exactly a week after making it first time. That current runs generally about two miles an hour there: and we will let it run so for another week.

DIVERS.

In Singapore a town and harbor at the eastern end of the strait of Malacca there are some very expert divers. They will go under the bottom of a ship and examine if any of the sheets of her copper have been displaced. When the copper comes off, the worms in those waters are apt to enter the ships planks, and, boring holes in all directions, very soon destroy them. The divers moreover for a few dollars go down and replace the missing sheets and nail them on. They dont go down and stay two hours and smoke and chat tho. They take their measurements, prepare on deck and punch the sheets of copper wanted, and two of them take a sheet between them and down they go like exaggerated frogs exactly, and each of them will drive one nail after having placed it. Then they return to the surface, blow and then go down and drive two nails each time before rising to breathe: they may have to go down more than 20 feet and then 10 or 15 toward the keel to get at their work.

You can hear on deck the taps of their hammers as plainly as if it was close beside you, and a wide awake captain will count the number of holes in the sheet to be nailed before they take it down and then count how many nails they drive and in that way be pretty sure they do all their work, which might not be the case otherwise as neither the captain or mate ever goes down with them or after the job is done to look at it.

It takes some little time to drive about 200 nails in a sheet but they get thru at last and generally do it very well. And when done they want a good "chit" or letter of recommendation, which is rather a delicate matter to do, when one is not absolutely certain they have put the copper on at all or done it well. A great many of these men are named after their prophet "Mahomet," a good many more in proportion than there are of our "Geo. Ws."

ALL ABOUT A BOX OF MATCHES,

In the year 1864 a ship that had a friend of yours on board went from Hong Kong to Akyab to bring back a cargo of rice to feed the hungry Chinese. It was necessary to stop at Singapore to get there a good many thousand sacks in which the cargo was to be shipped. They came alongside in a Malay vessel just at dark, too late to be taken on board that evening. The junk or vessel was made fast to the ship with a line from the stern. There was a whole family on board, perhaps five or six children. After tea, as the captain was walking the quarter deck, the night being very dark, he observed that rope acting rather strangely; looking to see what was the matter with it, a little boy was perceived as his head rose above the ships rail. He had climbed up for some purpose, and as he reached the deck he mumbled some words of his language and produced from his pocket about a foot of a kind of coir rope, which set on fire at one end will smoulder slowly until it is all consumed. A little piece of it will last all day, and with that they preserve their fire. The pocket he had was unlike our pockets. Their lower garment is a kind of scarf or shawl wound about them in such a complicated manner that it forms three or four very secret and probably very safe pockets, in which they stow away their personal property. As soon as he produced his rope it was evident he wanted fire, theirs had gone out. It suddenly occurred that a box of matches would be a novelty to them; the steward was ordered to bring one; the matches had been purchased in Liverpool. They were "Martins" or Martindales"brand and exploded with a noise like a percussion cap. To show the boy what it was, a match was lighted, and as it snapped, the little fellow exploded into a burst of the most immoderately joyous laughter. He had heard of this thing before, but probably never had possessed such a prize: as he yelled with delight he rang out to his "papa" a message which said something about the "burra sahib" (the captain) and ended with "natchiz box." An answering shout of joy came up from the whole family young and old. They had struck a bonanza at last. The little fellow stowed away his fire rope in one mysterious receptacle and his natchiz box in the other, and decended to his boat with the agility of a trained monkey.

He was received with a shout of joy, and as he made known the presence of his trophy by a vigorous snap, the whole party went off into a delirium of screaming delight—all about the wondrous box of matches. A light was soon struck, and they cooked their rice and had supper. At first they could not resist the temptation to repeat that snap, and yell in delighted chorus at the fire miracle; they probably used up fifteen or more of the matches in those experiments; and afterward at intervals there would be a snap and a shout as usual, and the last thing I heard that evening before sleeping was one more snap and a scream of wondering applause, somewhat modified by the absence of two or three of the younger voices. The fun was immensely participated in on board the ship too. The box of matches cost about one cent and the lucky thought of presenting that little insignificant matter to those innocent barbarians, perhaps added more to the sum of human happiness for that day than did any of that day's deeds of magnificent and costly charity. An act of kindness, even one that costs very little money or labor may sometimes confer much gladness; and such a result always continues to return a many hundred per cent interest in pleasant memories.

"JUVENILE TEMPLARS TO THE FRONT."

To the front, to the front,
Little women, little men;
There is much of useful labor
You may do:
In the battlefield of life
Where man's enemy is rife;
Put your armour on,
And wage the warfare too.

You may think because you're young
That you are not over strong,
And that others will not heed you
If you try;
But, little friends, be sure,
Your success must be secure
If you ask the Lord
To grant you victory.

Then bravely to the front,
Little women, little men,
Like David in the grand,
Old story book;
Such a little lad was he.
Yet he slew the enemy,
And only with small pebbles
From a brook.

But the hand that held the sling,
By a great, Almighty King,
Was guided in this act
That proved so grand;
And to you my little friends,
He this wondrous power will lend,
If you rise against the great foe
Of our land.

In this world you may not know
How your little efforts grow,
And what harvest in the future
Will be given:
But when this life is overpast
You will have reward at last;
If through Temperanee you have Led some souls to heaven.

FOXES.

Among my tender vines I spy
A little fox named—By-and-by,

Then set upon him, quick I say,

Around the tender vine I plant
I find the little fox—I-can't

Then fast as ever hunter ran,
Chase him with bold and brave—I can!

No-use-in-trying—lags and whines
This fox among my tender vines.

Then drive him low and drive him high,
With this good hunter named—I'll-try!

Among the small vines in my lot,
Creeps the young fox—I-forgot,

Then hunt him out and to his den
With—I-will-not-forget-again!

The little fox, that hidden there
Among my vines is—I-dont-care.

Then let I'm-sorry—hunter true—
Chase him afar from vines, and you.

What mischief-making foxes, boys!
Are these that steal our grapes and joys,

But now the hunters names you know;

Nortonville, May 16, 1881.

A. D. Wood, Ed. Rescue: Yesterday afternoon Bro. Wm. Tubbs, C. S. J. W., met me here according to arrangement, and we proceeded to Somerville, and after the Sundayschool organized Cold Water Band of Hope with 47 members, Dodie Hawxhurst, Superintendent. We then returned to Nortonville. and at the close of their Sunday-school organized Well Spring Band of Hope, 53 juveniles and 4 honorary members, John H. Watkins, Superintendent. Frank Clifford, Deputy.

IN MEMORIAM.

Died—At Riverside, May 10th, Clarence Ferrender, aged 8 years and 8 months, an earnest and useful member of the Band of Hope. On the day of his departure he desired to see some of his playmates whom he had been unable to persuade to join the temperance army. His last interview with them was a very affecting one; he urged them to start night now, live right and be always prepared to be "bright jewels" with him in the better land. And his parting counsels have borne good fruit. The Band of Hope of Riverside attended the funeral of their little brother, and each member dropped in the grave a floral tribute of affectionate regard.

OUR FIRST TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.—NO. 3.

OUR LESSONS.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

Before we really commenced our studies in the catechism we contrived to make the children quite curious about alcohol. We showed it to them, holding up two clear glass vials just alike, one filled with water and the other with alcohol. When the children could not decide which was alcohol, the experimenter folded a strip of paper lengthwise, and dipped one end into the water and the other into the alcohol, touched a match to the former, but it would not burn. The latter however when touched by the lighted match blazed up rapidly, and burned till it reached the water which put it out. Then some alcohol was poured into a spoon, and the children were much surprised to see the fire take hold of that and burn it up.

"And then you cooked an egg in alcohol?" queries a friend.

No, not at that time. We had enough other wonderful things to do, so we reserved that experiment for the time when it would be specially wanted. We then asked the children what hurt alcohol does; and then what good, and when we had made them tell all we could, we bid them take those questions home, and bring back all the answers they could. When we thought the interest sufficiently excited in the subject we suggested that they learn all the answers to the questions on the first page of the little book from which they had been reading responses, and then we would explain to them still further. Fearing some prejudice against the word "catechism" we did not even call it by that name, nor make the book very prominent at first, and so in various ways we made the introduction easy.

They soon began to think that they wanted a copy, so we told them that we would lend them each one and those who would like one to keep might bring five cents for it. We thought they would be less likely to lose it, while we had the teachers keep a careful watch and see that none were left destitute; if not able to purchase the latter were encouraged by a loan. In these ways we met all cases, saved some money, and, what was more important made the books more highly prized than they would have been by a miscellaneous giving away. All places might not need the same treatment; but this was the manner in which we met the conditions we found there, and I have since found that the case was not uncommon. Where the people are eager and ready for a temperance school, fewer preliminaries will be necessay.

It is seldom desirable to teach the answers to the catechism from the desk. It is a tedious operation, it makes the older children feel that they are treated infant class fashion, and it encourages and increases the feeling already too prevalent that the temperauce school is for "little tots" only. If we would secure the attendance of the older boys and girls, anything of that sort must be carefully avoided.

When the children came with their lesson at the next meeting they found their teachers ready to hear them recite. Each one recited separately, so that it might be positively known what he had learned. Ten or fifteen minutes were allotted to that exercise, and then the attention was called to the desk where the Superintendent took up and explained the lesson. He first had them all read or recite the specified portion in concert. This was no test of their proficiency whatever. That had been made in the individual recitations in the classes. The sole object now was to understand the lesson. Experiments were made; blackboard exercises were drawn and explained, illustrative stories were told, and as we advanced questions were often asked on those portions which we had gone over to see how well we remembered what had been explained. These talks were in fact little illustrated lectures suited to the capacity of the scholars. If any one cares to see models of this sort they are to be found in the Juvenile Temperance Manual, the lessons in that book being largely the outcome of the studies in this our first temperance school.

We would recommend no one to follow these models closely. They have been purposely made flexible, and each "talk" is followed by a number of illustrations which can be used instead of those given in the previous lecture. Not more than two or three of these items should be used on one occasion; for too many figures, stories and experiments only confuse each other and injure the good effect. The remainder of the time may be given to the statements and explanation of facts. Make the reason of all things clear, and then ,by questioning make the children tell it all back to you both at the time and afterwards, using their own language if they choose.

Chemical experiments are a very great attraction to the older boys, but there is some danger of going into them too deeply and so concentrate the interest more on chemistry than on temperance. Not long since a lady who had previously called to school came again, her face fairly aglow with pleasure. talk over the best methods of starting a temperance She had found the chemical experiments exceedingly attractive to the older boys whom she had been especially desirous of winning and keeping; and she was now planning some others which had no reference whatever to the subject of temperance. She had obtained the assistance of an apothecary (a very good thing if you can keep the lead yourself) who had shown her some curious and brilliant experiments with burning phosphorus on water; she thought this would illustrate the strange fire which Nadab and Abihu offered before the Lord. The connection depending entirely on the expression "strange fire" was so very whimsical, and by none but a very forced construction illustrative of the subject of temperance or the study of alcohol that I persuaded her to abandon the experiment.

It is of the very first importance in the temperance school to make the interest cluster around the lesson, and the wise superintendent will manage to secure that result. Other things are sometimes introduced like the military drill which to those not acquainted with temperance science seems more attractive, but it does not add to the lesson and it almost inevitably detracts from it. I have scarcely ever known a school to flourish long with this appendage, while I have known many to go down and all that could be found of them after a year or two was now and then a cap and a belt and a wooden gun running the streets after the firemen to the music of the fire-alarm. Very likely more boys will come in at first but they are not the sort which will easily become interested in the subject of temperance and indeed they usually come for quite a different purpose.

It is of great importance to recognize this fact for large numbers are by no means the main element of success in starting a temperance school. You want the best intellects you can secure, for you are training temperance workers and scientists, and you wish specially to avoid all such measures as would select for you those boys whose greatest glory is to play soldier and run to fires. We can gradually work in this element at some later time, but at this formative period we want boys who are willing to learn, and exercises in which both boys and girls can join. It is a mistaken notion that girls are of very little use in temperance schools. We have learned that girls make good temperance workers and especially good temperance teachers, and it pays admirably to educate them with temperance science in the temperance school.

Haywards, May 16,1881.

Dear Rescue:—I received my paper of 12 inst, and in reading it over I seemed to miss something, viz. a short account of my visit to Pacheco, Clayton and Nortonville. I certainly wrote something, but what became of it It is not in the Rescue. Perhaps I sent it to the wrong place. I see the reports of lecturers appear in the department of the G. W. S.; perhaps I should have sent mine there.

Bro. Crowhurst has organized a Band of Hope at Pentz, Butte county, Bro. R. H, Hawkins Superintendent, rituals for which have been forwarded. Good news comes from many bands, reporting large memberships. I hope these bands will have patience; we are doing the best we can; the badges they have been anxiously waiting for have not arrived, although long over due, and as soon as I receive them I will certainly forward them to all who applied for them. I have reports of the organization of a number of Bands of Hope and more on the tapis in different parts of the state, full particulars of which will soon appear.

The following comes from Stockton:—Mr. Bramall; If you will send me some copies of the Band of Hope ritual, and anything else bearing on the subject, I will try and work up the matter at our district lodge on June 8th. Wm. Jones, Dist. Secty.

I wish every district Secretary would do likewise. I think it would be well if the president of the committee appointed by the Grand Lodge at the last annual session, to revise the Band of Hope ritual, would call them together and have them do their work; it would be much better than to put it off longer.

I enclose a letter from a sorrowing mother; you will know what she would like.

1. Total abstinence from all intoxicating liquors as a beverage.
2. No license in any form, under any circumstances, for the sale of liquors to be used as a beverage.
3. The absolute prohibition of the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors for such purposes; prohibition by the will of the people, exercised in due form of law, with the penalties deserved by a crime of such enormity.
4. The creation of a healthy public opinion upon the subject by the active dissemination of truth in all the modes known to enlightened philanthropy.
5. The election of good, honest men, to administer the law.
6. Persistence in efforts to save individuals and communities from so dreadful a scourge, against all forms of opposition and difficulties, until our success is complete and universal.

OUR PRINCIPLES.—We aim for nothing short of a sweeping National Prohibitory law endorsed by every State and Territory of the Union, in the year 1885, and as much sooner as the Christian and Temperance men and good citizens of the country may desire to accomplish it.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

TEMPERANCE IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

The Rev. W. J. Smith of San Francisco at the S. S. convention at Sacramento presented, under the topic of "the salvation of the young people of California," the necessity of earnest efforts to turn the young of the state from their present tendencies, and gave the following statistics. 474 under 19 years of age in the S. F. industrial school, and the sup't says in 4 out of 5 cases the carelessness and conduct of the parents are to be blamed for their commitment. Of 936 committed last year to the House of correction, 220 were under 21 years of age. Of 486 native born 115 were natives of this city. There were 467 of the 936 who had no occupation, and 558 of them were arrested for petty larceny and drunkenness. Of 22,000 police arrests 9.127 were for drunkenness. Of 85,000 children of school age in San Francisco 14,835 never attend school. Protestant Sunday schools have 10,000 attendants, 35,000 are under other religious systems and 40,000 left on the outside.,'

It might have been suggested too that there were probably 100,000 other fit cases for arrest for drunkenness, if the police had chosen to pick them up or had room to stow them anywhere.

A petition from the Secy of the W. C. T. U. asking the convention to introduce a temperance catechism into the Sunday schools as a regular part of the instructions, was referred to a committee, the Rev'ds J. P. Egbert, H. B. Heacock and J. M. Haven: to report next year. It is to be hoped the report and action upon it will be in the affirmative: one might wonder why action was deferred a year, but no one has any right to wonder at or offer any criticism upon the proceedings who was not present.

The statistics presented by Mr. Smith invite not only serious consideration but some serious action. There are many good virtuous worthy excellent teachers male and female in the public schools and in other benevolent and educational institutions and associations and there are many good virtuous mothers in the homes of San Francisco———but for their influences, example and teachings, we might expect that the 5000 chartered schools of vice and theft and drunkenness, of this city would have corrupted about every one of the 85,000 children of school age, and made them candidates for the industrial schools and house of correction. The machinery of this city municipal and political and conventional is exactly fitted to produce the widest possible demoralization and corruption in the young—and there are but few saving preventive influences, beside those mentioned and what good is innate in natural man.

SHAKER GOOD OF THE ORDER.

The dancing mania has come up among the Good Templars of New York again, which indicates that they have got all their Temperance work finished up, and now want some active employment. The present G. W. C. T. of New York comes at them quoting Bro. Gould's parting counsel: "Our Order lets dancing alone and insists that dancing shall let us alone."

It appears that in this state they dont let one another alone of late. A visitor reported a few weeks ago that a lodge in his vicinity was gaining a good deal in numbers of late. How is that? we dont hear of them doing anything. Oh, said he, you dont hear much about them, they have a dance once a week in connection with another dancing arrangement, and members come in because they can get cheaper dancing there than they can get anywhere else.

It is quite likely to be true that a lodge which is a dancing organization will get a good many members that will not come in otherwise. Some will say let us try to get them in that way, and when we get them we can do them good and teach them to be veritable good temperance people. But that is a fallacy; if they can only be persuaded to come in for the dancing, they wont be worth a second hand hen's nest as members, and as to the lodge doing them any good or teaching them to be better people, a dancing lodge never has any such purpose, and never accomplishes it. It will much more probably be the case that the new members will help to demoralize the lodge still further, and the lodge will reciprocate in demoralizing the member.

As for gaining members by such methods, there is a much greater chance of losing or keeping out five good valuable members than of getting in even one useless one. And the Order was organized and professes with the greatest solemnity to exist for a serious honest, philanthropic earnest struggle to free the world from a ravaging curse and to elevate and educate and strengthen our members in high and holy purposes. A lodge of Good Templars descending to the miserable buffoonery and antiquated barbarism of a dancing frolic, wears a broad lie and a glaring hypocrisy when it puts on its regalia and opens lodge in ritual form. Such lodges should be put in a separate directory and be called burlesques not lodges.

And there is one thing a little meaner and cheaper down than turning a lodge into an open avowed jig shop and bidding square defiance to the law and the spirit and the character of the Order, which is getting up a lodge dance and calling it by some other name, and adding a lie to the degradation of the order it has outraged.

Better throw up your charter and go into the beer cellars and dance there, and let somebody run a temperance organization that will be of some use in the community, that the best class of people can find some pleasure and profit in joining with. There have been scores and scores of lodges killed by dancing in this state, and there never was one benefited. Point to a lodge existing that has kept up dancing for three years, if there is such a one, tell us any good it has done, or show that it has done one-tenth of its capacity to do. There is one complete and thoroly conclusive and all sufficient argument as to lodge dances or sewing circle benevolent (lodge) dances. That kind of employment is utterly beneath the dignity and character and utterly foreign to the purposes of a Good Templar association.

It is admitted that a lodge may spend its time and many a one does to little better advantage than in dancing. But one wrong does not excuse another. Whenever a lodge meets and separates and no one in it has learned or taught anything that evening, there has been a very serious fault and failure. If an effort has been made to teach and learn something every evening, there will never be any desire or need of dancing or any difficulty in making a Good Templar meeting pleasant, joyous, happy; not only during its continuance, but to be always remembered with a fragrance of kindly, loving, bettering and blessing associations.

North Carolina on the first day of August votes for the eternal prohibition of the grogshop and murder factory and thief den. The M. E. Church as usual shoulders the musket when the great enemy of the Christian Church is to be assailed. It says the Church must be kept pure "from this and all other sins," and not from all other sins but this of making drunkards. That church dont pursue a conciliatory policy with the legions of satan, it is a very poor diplomatist indeed in that direction, but somehow it dont share in the religious decline we hear so much about. It weathers the shoals and reefs, in some incomprehensible way every-time, builds on an average two new churches a day, and always the foremost church of the world in its temperance faith and work, it keeps gaining all the time a lap or two ahead of its competitors in its march of progress.

A Provoking Mistake.—On Thursday forenoons a genius is employed in this office to bring the papers from the bindery and carry them hence to the Post office as fast as a load is ready for him. Last Thursday there were about 50 papers of the previous week on the table where those left over always remain till the next issue. On this occasion however Timothy of his own intuition picked these up and put them into the pile for mailing: they were every one mailed and the mistake only discovered in the afternoon when a last weeks copy was wanted and wanting. A copy of the 19th will be sent immediately on receipt of a postal from any one who was the victim of that mistake.

SELLING WINE GRAPES.

Some Good Templars in Sonoma county are, it appears, expressing doubt as to the consistency of planting and cultivating the wine grape. But that is not the question at all; it is whether it is right to sell grapes to be made into soul poison, to curse and kill our fellow men, our neighbor's sons and daughters, to manufacture the children of the Sunday school and the family home into drunkards and blasphemers, prostitutes, thieves and murderers. The answer to that dont need to come from a court of justice or from any other court or authority except that of common sense. It is safe to say that the consistency, justice, rectitude, propriety, honesty or respectability of an honest, proper act is never doubted or called in question, never has been. No one ever heard of a doubt as to the honesty of making or selling shoes, hats, flour, soap, sugar or anything lawful to use. No suspicion of discredit has ever attached to the business of farming, fishing, sailing, printing; the disputes have always been about the honesty and rectitude of stealing or doing something nasty. About stealing men and women from Africa, about selling a man's wife or children, about selling men, about piracy, about privateering, about bigamy and decagamy, about licensing vice and crime, about the butchery of war, almost always about stealing in some shape. The cause of the defendant has always been sturdily maintained by its able counsel, Messrs Avarice, Greed, Nipcash, Pickpurse, Grindpoor, Skinwidow, Selconscience, Bartertruth, Buyshame, Rottenmorals and others. But the chief justice, Hon. Pub. Opinion, tho sometimes mystified for a season has always settled the matter adversely to them in the end. They have never gained a single case that has been settled so far. Because a good case has never been before the court, never once been placed in jeopardy.

A case of how this thing turns out comes to remembrance here. A Good Templar more than ten years ago, a member of the church, a man of good worthy impulses, a man of daily prayer, sold his grapes to a distillery. His lodge brought him to account, some of the members stood by him, said it was a case of spite, defended the act, etc, The matter was settled by dropping all proceedings on his promise to do so no more, confessing voluntarily that the money tempted him and he knew it was wrong. But he did it next year again, dropped his membership in the lodge, next dropped his church, dropped one thing after another till he dropped his homestead and became a wreck. Love of money tempted him to his ruin.

People with eyes and ears can see and know that but a few years will pass before the grapes that are only fit for wine and brandy will be only useful to feed to pigs, while raisin and table grapes and the grapes for honest men's business will be coming more and more valuable.

The little spurt of better prices that has occurred lately for wine grapes is only a temporary sham to make sale for grape lands and entice people into the brandy business, and make capital against the coming prohibitory law. There is not a pound of grapes necessary to make wine; if every grape vine utterly perished for ever to-day, it would not in the least diminish the wine production. Anything that contains sugar can be made to produce every kind of intoxicating wine and liquor. So the outlook for those who are tempted to make money by selling drunkenness, is by no means bright.

FIRST-CLASS AGENTS WANTED.

The great reputation of JOHN B. GOUGH, the magnificent make-up of "Sunlight and Shadow," and the universal demand for it among all classes, makes this the best opportunity ever offered to energetic agents to make money. We want first-class agents in every township, to whom liberal terms will be given. Address, for territory and terms, J. Dewing & Co., 420 Bush St., San Francisco.

THE RESCUE FOR ONE DOLLAR A YEAR.

Some of the friends of temperance who have never taken a temperance paper are of the opinion that those who do, ought not to pay more than a dollar a year for the RESCUE. The N. Y. Herald, weekly, only costs a dollar a year they say, and it contains so much more than the RESCUE, that two dollars a year for the latter is an imposition. But aside from the fact that there is not a cent's worth of temperance news in a year of the Herald and it can never help our cause any and does not want to, the comparison is a very silly one.

The Herald has such an income from its advertisements that it could afford to issue 100,000 or perhaps 200,000 copies a week every year gratis and pay the subscribers a dollar each for taking it, and then make a fortune of profit every year. And the same applies in some degree to some other papers.

There is no good reason why the RESCUE should not acquire a circulation which would make its advertizements pay half or more of the cost of its publication; then it might be placed at a dollar a year. To enable the readers to understand a little of this matter the following figures are given.

Suppose that next week only one copy of the RESCUE in its present usual form should be continued. To publish that one copy a year would cost the publisher $1,800. If 500 copies only were continued they would each cost $4.79 a year. If 1000 they would cost $2.92. If 2000 $2.16. If 3000 $1.84. If 10,000 $1.24 and 20,000 $1,15. Those figures are what the publisher would have to pay out of pocket to deliver the papers in the postoffice in the present style of the RESCUE, and without paying editor and publisher one cent of salary, board or profit. And this is supposing every copy issued to be paid for.

With its circulation raised as it might easily be with one week's general effort of the 300 lodges to 6,000 or 8,000, its advertizing could be made to reduce its subscription next year to $1.00 a year; free the Grand Lodge from any expense, and yield a compensation for the labor expended upon it beside.

It is a very mistaken notion too, to suppose that the Grand Lodge is affording the RESCUE any gratuitous help; it purchases certain services, advertizing &c from the RESCUE, at a good deal less than actual cost, and at a much cheaper rate than they could be hired from any other source whatever. That is just what it does for the RESCUE.

AN EXPENSIVE FREE LUCNH.

On the 20th of April, 1878, Frank Spearman was killed on one of the California street cars, near Filmore. In the Superior Court judgment was rendered in favor of the surviving children of the deceased for $5000. During the trial of the case James A. Garrett, an engineer in the employ of the company, testified: "I was at the terminus in charge of the car, and was an eye-witness to the accident. Before the starting of the dummy which killed the deceased the driver and conductor were in an adjacent saloon. The conductor partook of some free lunch before leaving, and when he left the saloon sang out 'All right!' with his mouth full of meat. The driver then started the dummy off at great speed, whirling the deceased around and throwing him in front of the dummy." The judgment of the lower Court was yesterday affirmed by the Supreme Court.—Chronicle.

Whenever railroad and street car companies shall determine to cease employing saloon birds to take care of people's lives, they will probably save nine tenths of their present claims for damages.

A number of the Lodge deputies last week received five extra copies of the RESCUE. Another lot will be supplied similarly this week and for some weeks to come; attention is invited to the market report.

THE funeral of Mrs. DeYoung, mother of the proprietor of the S. F. Chronicle took place on Sunday last, largely attended by the many friends of the family.

LIFE OR DEATH OF OUR NATION—WHICH ?

For so long a time have the professed Christian people of this country been coddling and nursing the rum interest that it has grown strong, and is about to rend them. The church-going people of this land may make up their minds to the alarming fact that if the ravages of this power are not checked the Christian Sabbath must be given up. In most of our large cities this has been done. Three thousand open saloons control the Sabbath in Chicago.

Men may shut their eyes and cry peace! peace! but the evil is daily increasing. There does not seem to be more righteous men in these places than were found in Sodom. We should expect the church of the most high God at least to sound the alarm. If men expect to stay the ravages of this infernal whisky power with soft words and soothing utterances they have failed to understand their enemy.—Northwestern News.

The News is extreme; the saloons in San Francisco, about 5,000 of them, have bought out the Sabbath and are running it without the least inconvenience to the churches. It is thought that if all the people are converted, by-and-by, (in about two hundred and fifty millions of years at the present rate), the saloons will gradually die out after that any way; so there is no use making any uneasiness about it.

BAD MANAGEMENT.

The Sunbeam has an article on the thousands that lose their membership in the temperance orders every year. That has been the case in California, but it ought not to be. In some lodges that always keep learning and teaching something every week, they have a steady membership always gaining, never losing. When a constant going out occurs it is owing to some fault that ought to be remedied. The Order of Good Templars is not a failure; its program of exercises is not a mistake nor abortion: it has pointed out and adopted every element of success and growth; but a careless, idle, indifferent, slop-managed and pennywise organization can make a failure of anything. Whenever membership declines, the cause ought to be manfully faced and disarmed for future mischief, and a new departure taken and followed to success.

GOOD FOR GENERAL GARFIELD.

The reply of the President to Miss Willard seemed slightly ambiguous as to his understanding of the term "temperance." And the modification of the order of President Hayes which prohibited the sale of liquor by post traders, was supposed to be the work of the new President. Mrs. Mattie McC. Brown having presented the matter to him a few days ago he says he made no such modification but will see his predecessor's order carried out. The winebibbers may now surrender their hopes on the new President and the temperance people may cast out their fears of any backward step from him.

NO BARS.—The report of the S. S. Excursion to Sacramento says that there is no bar on the Pride of the River, and as long as Captains Nelson and Anderson control the boats of the Cal. Transportation Co. no bar shall be placed on any of them. It is pleasant to know that this company can afford to be respectable. Possibly some day the Central Pacific may conclude to close their hundreds of jailbird factories, and then we can consistently ask the Chinamen to shut up their opium and prostitution dens; but it is too much to ask the latter to step into a higher plane of patriotism and morality than that occupied by our great railway millionaires.

TEMPERANCE SUNDAY-SCHOOL LESSON. Those who desire to use the S. S. Lesson leaves for Sunday, June 26th, furnished by the National Temperance Society and Womens' N. C. T. Union, which contain the Bible teachings on temperance, should send in good time to J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade street, New York City, and supply themselves. They are not to be had in California.

LOOK at the list of advertisers in the RESCUE, and remember they are all genuine and reliable parties to deal with.

SACRAMENTAL WINE.

NUMBER SIX—CONCLUSION.

No attempt has ever been made nor any desire manifested to dispute the fact that fermented or intoxicating wine has been in use since the days of Noah. No one denies it. The dragon of wine has drawn its deep, broad, black, hideous, slimy trail of vice, harlotry, crime, sin, poverty, misery, death all over the map of this world's history from the times when it practiced its first lessons upon Noah and Lot and Sodom and Gomorrah, and produced exactly similar results to those we now witness every day.

It would be an act of exceeding boldness to declare that there never was any intoxicating wine till the last fifty years. But it could be done with precisely the same candor, honesty and manliness that characterize modern attempts to deny the thoroly authenticated fact that pure, natural grape juice, both fresh pressed from the grape, and also boiled and preserved, unfermented, was a common household beverage among the ancient peoples of grape countries, notably among the Jews, Egyptians, Greeks and Romans. It is a signal defiance of the truth, too, to deny that both sacred and profane writers have. from the earliest times, described the one as a blessing to humanity and the other as earth's bitterest curse.

Science has taught us, beyond cavil, that fermented wine taken into the human system can contribute to no good result under any circumstances, but that it is a poison, and its only effect is to poison body and mind and make drunk, and therefore its use, however moderate, is a sin against nature, against God and against ourselves.

But without the slightest regard to history, Bible or scientific revelation, which, in this matter are so manifestly and unmistakably in most complete accord, the adherents of the Crosby theory are ever hugging and heralding the fond delusion that the Bible and the Savior favored and inculcated drunkenness, and that there never was any natural wine in use. A few days ago, the Pacific, a journal which one would not expect to find on that side of the question, says:

"It is sometimes said that the 'fruit of the vine' used at the institution of the Lord's Supper was not, probably, fermented wine, because the use of leavened bread, and so on, was not allowed during Passover week. But there was a special reason of an historical kind for not using leaven in bread, which did not reach other articles in common use. Besides, in Spring, when grapes were just coming into blossom, it was impossible to have 'sweet wine,' unless it had been artificially prepared and preserved. Is it not the more reasonable position that the wine at the Passover was the common weak, light wine of the country, made the preceding Autumn, and sufficiently fermented to have a keeping quality, yet without fire, fume, commixture, or anything of an artificial nature in the simple, exhilarating beverage?"

That seems a most astonishing proposition from first to last. The only historical reason for not using leaven in bread that the Bible mentions is the express and repeated command of God to the Israelites from the first, that there should be no leaven in their houses; that all leaven (or ferment) should be removed from their houses: "Seven days there shall be no leaven found in your houses; whosoever eateth that which is leavened (fermented) shall be cut off." "And there shall be no leavened bread seen with thee; neither shall there be leaven seen with thee in all thy quarters." The private authority which repealed these announcements and permitted "leaven to be drank and mixed in other articles of common use" should have been quoted in the statement made by the Pacific.

Only an imagination fertile in possibilities, and anxious to discover them, could harbor the supposition that fresh, pure grape juice boiled down, bottled, sealed, and kept in a cool cellar, which was the ordinary table food-drink of the people, was an "artificial preparation," and that the natural fruit of the vine was a filthy poison, evolved from the rotten offal of the grape, by an artificial, tedious, laborious chemical process, in which every particle of the "fruit of the vine" is utterly destroyed and annihilated. "Sufficiently fermented to have a keeping quality" can only mean sufficiently putrified to remain sound; for the putrifaction of the grape is perfect when any fermented wine is produced.

Had the history of the institution of the supper stated that potatoes had been used at the meal, it would have been equally in order to have insisted that "it is the more reasonable position" that the potatoes so used were not "artificially prepared and preserved" by keeping them sound in the cellar and then boiling in a pot or roasting them in an oven—but were the natural, "simple exhilarating beverage," potato whiskey, produced by rotting the potato and converting its starch into sugar and then into alcohol.

In the understanding of this bible wine question in which the intelligent Christian people of the day have heartily concurred, there are no dubious possibilities to encounter, no improbabilities to smooth over, no lame theories to prop up with an artificial spring leg, nor a single inconsistency or inharmony to reconcile. But the leaders in the support of the other side have taken tremendous chances to save their favorite god from deposition. They have never used any argument more logical or probable that the one referred to. Nothing but random guesses and the most positive personal declarations of what they say "must have been so," because it fits their theory founded on appetite and wilful ignorance, and upon no other authority or probability whatever. First they make the bible contradict not only science and common sense, but itself. (2) They dispute the disinterested history of nations. (3) They virtually deny the divinity of the Savior. (4) They make him inferior in knowledge and morality to John the Baptist and other scripture characters, and accuse him of practices that were then, and would be nowadays not only immoral, but disreputable; for the "wine-bibber," one who made use of fermented wine, was in his time a term of severest reproach, and was always deservedly coupled with its natural other half, "glutton."

Another objector to these articles writes from Amador county, taking the same ground as that referred to. He says he is "one of those infidels whom the RESCUE never fails to hit a lick whenever it has a chance"; and that "there is no doubt that Christ and his disciples drank on all occasions the vile kind of wine that makes drunkards, and as this question involves the divinity of Christ, it has no proper place in a temperance paper."

It would seem that the Christ who preferred a drunkard-making, chemically-prepared poison to a wholesome, natural, customary beverage, and gave his example and precept in favor of drunkard-making and drunkenness, did so thru ignorance, and was only a gifted reformer, mistaken in one very important matter. If he was of divine nature and did so, all our moral and religious obligations to push or advocate total abstinence go overboard at once and right down to the bottom.

But there occurs not the slightest occasion for any uncertainty in the matter. To try to make christianity a gospel of drunkenness, and its great Teacher a winebibber, ignorant of scientific truth, a promoter of evil practices and a mistaken philanthropist, is to flounder in a bog of inconsistent superstitions as benighted as the charlatanry of Denton. To accept christianity with the wine cup cast out from its place among the holy things, where Satan's wiles and human ignorance once enthroned and still endeavor to maintain it—to take the plain, square word of the Scripture as it is, regarding wine, is to come out into the clear noonday, with no intruding clouds and fogs of sophistry and mystery to distort and obscure the sunlight of truth. Here are no doubts, no suspicions, no excuses to make, nothing to be justified or rectified or regretted, and not a symptom of any difficulty to be encountered.

CALIFORNIA VITICULTURE.

The Commissioners appointed to supervise the drunkard factories and drunkard making interest of the State, have published their report, which states that the vintage of "temperance material" in 1880 was from 10 to 12 million gallons, thus—

9,500,000 gallons Dry Wines....at 25 cents.
450,000 gallons Brandy.....at $1.15.

Which foots up to $3,312,500.

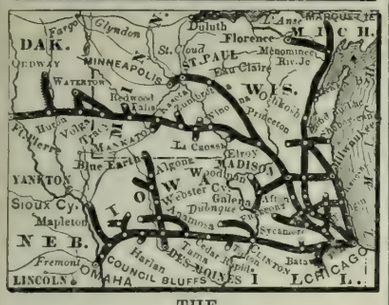
||They also estimate the raisins at $100,000 and table grapes sold at $150,000.

Shipments from the State in 1880 were 2,487,353 gallons wine and 189,098 gallons brandy. Estimating these exports at the rates given above we have

Value of wine exported	$ 684,775
Value of wine for home consumption	2,110,225
Value of brandy exported	217,462
Value of brandy used as home temperance drink	300,038
	$3,312,500

And we are treated thus to the information that to export $902,237 worth of drunkenness, we have to tax our own people to consume $2,410,263 worth of the same thing here, which is not only utterly useless, but which destroys the lives and properties of the people of the State, fills the country with murder, suicide, crime, divorce, debauchery and insanity and is naturally and logically and inevitably the most pauperizing, demoralizing and destructive agency that ever cursed a country.

The Chronicle reviewing the report, says "Viticulture properly studied and managed, is within 20 years to become the leading industry of California, yielding a larger net revenue to cultivators than all other industries confined to the soil together."



That is quite possible for Viticulture, but it will be found an excellent policy for Viticulturists to plant such vines as will be most available, when in a very few years the laws of the United States will place poison wine and poison brandy culture exactly on a level with horse stealing and other despicable crimes. And whenever that time comes the wealth and prosperity and peace and safety of the vine cultivator will be increased ten fold in the aggregate, and viticulture will be one of the happiest, most respectable and most profitable of occupations ever known.

The festive phyloxera is an inconvenient pest of the grape farmer, but it dont in the least incommode ihe wine maker. Altho it is said to have destroyed a million and a half of acres of vineyard in France, it has not reduced the volume of wine and brandy produced by one pint. As long as potatoes and rice and grain and beets and apples and molasses and sugar scrapings hold out all over France, Germany, Belgium &c they can produce any amount of precisely the same material as that from the rotted grape; the flavor only being a fabrication: the same water, the same alcohol from the same putrified sugar, the same sugar of lead and the same blue stone and drugs: and producing the same drunkenness and brutality.

In short the fabrication of wine and brandy that sells for $5 and $10 and $20 a gallon, made from potatoes, thistles, cabbage, kitchen slops, swilltubs, old boots and rags, drugs &c are rather to be commended for using a substitute and saving the wholsome grape for some useful purpose.

Any one entitled to receive the RESCUE who does not receive it, or who knows of another who does not, please notify by postal-card. The utmost care is used to avoid any mistakes in mailing or addresses. It is expected every issue of the paper will be in the San Francisco post-office by one P. M. of Thursday, in future. If it fails to reach any place in due time it will not be the fault of this office.

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

Refuses toil with lazy dread,
Choosing to "tend" a "bar" instead?

Puts some old beer kegs to be seen?

To sell out by the drink for cash—
Calling it gin or brandy smash?

Correspondence.

SAN BERNARDINO, May 22, 1881.

ED. RESCUE: It seems fitting that among the many good things in your crowded columns should appear some account of the recent open meeting of our lodge. On May 9th we had a public installation and a pleasing program of music, and literary exercises connected therewith. Thru the courtesy of the I. O. O. F., we occupied their large and beautifully furnished hall for the evening. An invitation was extended to Riverside lodge to be present, and about forty of them attended in uniform. Both resident and visiting members assembled at Good Templar's Hall, and, with the members of the Band of Hope, marched in procession, more than two hundred strong, headed by the Cornet Band, to the place of meeting. Odd Fellows Hall was crowded to its utmost capacity, all the available standing room being occupied. It was the grandest demonstration in behalf of temperance we have ever made here, as a mere home affair. The exercises were entertaining, and, doubtless, profitable. The opportunity was not lost to impress upon the audience some strong temperance truths, in essay, address and song.

The address of the newly-installed W. C. T. presented a brief review of the wonderful growth of the I. O. G. T., and of the good work it was accomplishing, and furnished some strong arguments in favor of total abstinence and prohibition.

Mr. H. C. Brooke also read a very forcible and well-written temperance essay, taking as his text the letter published in the RESCUE some time ago from a lady at Anaheim in support of Mrs. Stevens.

I believe the meeting has made a good impression. Our lodge, which was founded by Mrs. Stevens three years ago, has received a new impetus from her last visit here, and is in a prosperous condition. New members are received at every meeting, and it has an influence which is being felt in the community. We have a number of living witnesses in our order of the good our organization has done in individual cases, to say nothing of its indirect work, the results of which we may never be able to estimate.

The Good Templars of San Bernardino intend to keep the ball moving, and to do their part to hasten on the day when "the means of intemperance shall be driven from the land." Yours for prohibition, F. F.

MORTALITY STATISTICS FROM SCIENCE.

Mr. Nelson the distinguished English actuary, has made the following statistical dedications from his long years of research, respecting the degree to which intemperance shortens life. Individuals who do not use alcoholic liquors as a beverage have the following lease of life.

Those aged	22	live an average life of	44	years more,
"	"	30	"	"	36	"	"
"	"	40	"	"	29	"	"
"	"	50	"	"	21	"	"
"	"	60	"	"	14	"	"

Individuals of intemperate habits, men who indulge in the use of alcoholic liquors as a beverage, he says have the following lease of life.

Those aged	22	live an average life of	16	years more,
"	"	30	"	"	14	"	"
"	"	40	"	"	12	"	"
"	"	50	"	"	11	"	"
"	"	60	"	"	9	"	"

From the above, based on unquestionable authority, it will be seen how fearfully intemperance shortens life, and consequently of what importance the temperance question is to life insurance companies and mutual aid associations. A temperate man, associated with a class of topers as a member of an assessment life insurance company, will be compelled to pay annually double the number of assessments he would have to pay were his associates all total abstainers like himself. Hence every temperate member of an assessment company is deeply interested in weeding out and keeping out of his company every drunkard, toper and tippler. H.

SANTA CLARA CO. PICNIC'S.

A Union Picnic was held by the Good Templars on the 14th at Los Gatos where "the Lodge is thriving and prosperous." Dr. Merrick lectured and all went pleasntly.

The San Jose Lodges are to have an open meeting once a month, which they think will keep the subject alive before the people and add to their strength.

The Lodges of this county like to visit each other, and the effect is a very happy one. Wake up; stir around and visit some Lodge; find out quickly that you don't know everything; subscribe for some temperance paper—take the RESCUE; have an open meeting and let the people see you mean work; don't sleep any longer, for as it has been said, "The saloons have an open meeting every night."

Don't you know the Temperance car is moving on? Put on your harness and help.

BAND OF HOPE RITUALS.

It was recommended at the last session of our Grand Lodge that a Committee be appointed "to supervise the compilation of Band of Hope Rituals." The matter was left in the hands of the Executive Committee, who, at their second meeting thereafter, appointed P. G. W. C. T's. Gould, Wood, Haswell, Miss Julia Coleman, and the Gen. Sup't. of Juvenile Work, then Mrs. Emily P. Stevens, a Committee "to Revise and Report a New Ritual for Band of Hope in this Jurisdiction, and present their report to the next Session of the Grand Lodge." This is a very important matter, worthy of the best thought our Order can command. And the Committee earnestly invite all who desire to aid in correctly educating the youth of our land to assist them in preparing a Ritual in every way adapted to the work and worthy of the cause. The Committee, through their chairman, desire to extend to all friends of temperance the following invitation:

To Superintendents of Bands of Hope:

Permit us to ask your aid in revising the Ritual of our Band of Hope. It is desired that the Ritual shall be the best that it is possible to obtain and fully adapted to the use intended. Your experience qualifies you to make the most practical and valuable suggestions as to form, style and matter of ritual; hence we earnestly urge you to give this matter your careful and immediate attention, so that it may be fully considered by our Committee and properly prepared and reported to the next Session of our Grand Lodge. Please take a copy of the present Ritual and write on the margin of each page such changes as you may desire, or attach a new page, or re-write any portion or all of the same, as you may think best, and thus amended and revised, send it to the Chairman of our Committee at your earliest convenience.

Yours in Faith, Hope and Charity,
WILL. D. GOULD,
Chairman of Committee.

Wun uv them then took 2½ dollarz hwich were in mi poket, and the other sed kote! and made sines for me tu strip off mi kote, hwich I did." "U shot them—hwot with?" "With my pistol' ov korse." "But hware did u get the pistol?" "Oh, the pistol, y I had that ol the time up the sleeve ov mi singlet, and the Injuns never saw it there." "It iz a wonder tha did not see it, waz it not?" "Yas, I waz afraid tha wood, but tha did not."

Next trip sum ov the new passengerz wer slili told that Mr. Sawyer had sum spicy reminissenses ov Indian warfare in Kalifornia that mite be kausiousli pumpt out ov him if tha got him alone; and tha choze a good oportuniti in the dog watch to draw him out. "U had a good deal ov xperiense at sea, Mr. Sawyer, did u not?" "Yes, bin at it 16 years now." "Bin in Kalifornia?" "Yes." "Long?" "Yes, 4 yearz." Make much money there?" "No, thare waz no Injuns hware I workt."

THE JEWS. A development of barbarism and brutality that could hardly have been expected in this era of liberality, has come up in the late wretched persecution of the Jews in Germany and Russia.

The Jews are an unusually sober people and consequently more economical and accumulating than their drunken neighbors, and it is quite natural for the latter to blame their more sober friends for their own misfortune. The people who practice stoning Chinamen, are those who but for their drinking habits might have kept the Chinese from ever getting a foothold in California, except as the underlings and hired animal force of our own white workers; but because the grogshop and the beer den have pauperized our white labor to a great extent, they charge their own misfortunes to the Chinese, and desire to drive them out. Whereas if they would drive out the grogshops, our white labor would recover its lost ground and the Chinese would be reduced to a minimum number. Some parties are now moving to send the colored people to Africa; when they get thru with that, they will probably have time to attend to the Jews who are rich enough in California to offer a tempting prize to people who prefer the wealth that has already been acquired or created by others to that got in the old fashioned way.

For a great many centuries a family of nations that have disgraced the name of christians have burned and killed and robbed and shamefully maltreated in every way the Jews for no wrong at all beyond that of being Jews. There has been so much of that kind of thing and christian people owe the Jewish race so much reparation for the wrongs of the past, done in their name, that it would be no more than just for America and Britain to notify Germany and Russia that for every dollar they wrong a Jew in the future, they will be made to compensate a thousand. It is time there should be some international police regulations to prevent these cowardly nasty brutalities.

SOUTH AMERICAN EXPERIENCES.

TWO.

It was a very stupid mistake of the ancients to represent justice as blindfolded, so as not to see which way the scale tilted. It is injustice, greed, avarice and fraud that ought to be pictured as blindfolded to its own interest or anyone else's.

The English Steam navigation company which has a monopoly of the transport system of the west coast of S. America, has blindly framed a tariff of passenger fares whose monstrous extravagance would seem to have been adopted with a view of quenching all ambition on the part of the natives of the country to look beyond their native horizon. The rates of passage are so exorbitant that the revenue of the company is nearly all derived from its freight, its mail subsidy and its passengers.

The fare to Tumaco, two and a half days of very slow steaming is $50 cabin and $25 deck, a rate that one, if obliged to go, would rather submit to than build or buy a boat of his own and hire a crew to row him there.

Things used to be contrived too in the interest of the hotel keepers, doctors and grave diggers of Panama, so that passengers there if bound to anywhere else than New York or California had to wait 4 to 8 days or more. In ordinary times this made quite a help to business; but when travel was good and fever lively, the city prospered and felt thankful.

Four years ago it was my lot to wait eight or nine days there for the next steamer bound south; but finding a Colombian schooner in port which had brought up a cargo of "taguas" or ivory nuts, which was to sail five days before the steamer, and whose cabin fare was only $25 for a five days' trip, I engaged a passage. The captain received the $25 in a paper roll of dollars without opening or counting them, and threw it into his open chest in the cabin. He said he never locked that as there was not a particle of danger of any one touching it; all his crew belonged round Tumaco. Next day he returned me five dollars which he said was over paid, as a dollar in Panama was ten rials and in Tumaco only eight or eighty cents. This was very honest in him as he knew very well I had misunderstood him, and that kind of distinction in dollars was new to me.

The schooner was American built, with wire rigging which had not been set up (tightened) for many years; probably not since her purchase in San Francisco eight or ten years before. A few hours' work would have set it up nicely, but altho it was the slackest rigging ever heard of on a sea going vessel, the captain and crew seemed never to have observed that circumstance. They said the vessel was going to be calked and repaired next year probably and then it would be time enough.

The most striking article of the cabin furniture was a thoro complete set of rat holes, in every direction and in every style of ancient and modern architecture. One could not help wondering how the rats had ever found leisure and opportunity to run all those tunnels and crosscuts and shafts, and where they had dumped all the chips and borings. The suggestion presented itself that some King Pharaoh rat had acquired despotic empire over his fellows, and works 100,000 or so of them as slaves to construct for him what he supposed would be an imperishable monumental labyrinth. But if Professor Denton makes use of this and adopts it as a link in his cosmical theory he must be responsible for it himself. Next to the rat holes were the tunnels ingeniously interpolated by the various sized and various colored ants which had learned to love the climate and flavor and style of living on board of that schooner. From every rat hole examined there were chambers and galleries branching off like the blood vessels from an artery; and in these there was the same richness of variety. A cabin so complete in its appointments had not escaped the inquisitive eye of the enterprising cockroaches, who had also colonized there in force and seemed to have been most successful colonists in the way of rolling up a healthy census.

Besides the rat holes and ant chambers, a few plates and cups and the captain's chest, there was not any other cabin furniture except a few small pieces of the captain's chart which so far the rats had not injured. It was always cheerful however, nobody could feel lonesome or homesick there. There was too much company; it was like a busy market place. The rats used to grumble some at nights about the quality of food they found in the cooks pantry which was a part of the cabin, but after we caught some fine dolphin they were cheerful and contented.

The voyage would have been very monotonous but for the spirited company we had of the class described. The harbor of Tumaco is formed by one of a number of islands on the coast about one and a half degrees north of the equator. Large steamers can come within a mile of the town, and the mail steamers call there twice a month. People who live within a hundred miles of Tumaco and have not seen it have not much to boast of; but a native of Tumaco discloses the important fact of his nativity with a considerable degree of ostentation.

Here are landed large quantities of English, French and German manufactures, mostly English, but scarcely ever an article of American product except California flour, potatoes and one box of apples, and about one dozen pounds a year of canned fruits and oysters assorted. A short distance north of Tumaco is the entrance of the Patia river from which the Telembi branches southward. At the head of its navigation is the imposing city of Barbacoast (which means a shelf) the only level shelf in the country large enough to build a 7x9 little town upon.

A steamer runs from Tumaco by this circuitous route to Barbacoas, about 120 miles, but an air line would only be about 40 miles. The trips of this steamer are made whenever the steamer is ready; a matter made known to the public by a vigorous whistling on the morning of departure. Fare $10 and freight $20 a ton between these two points, a rate which the proprietors sadly lament is a great sacrifice made by them for the good of the country. All this freighting was formerly done, and a very large proportion is still done by canoes of large size manned by crews of six or more men who pole their vessels up along the shores of the rapid stream and drift down in the middle of the current returning. From Barbacoas all the merchandise for an immense district of interior territory is carried on the backs of Indians over trails thru swamps and streams and over mountain steeps for hundreds of miles, and the India rubber (caucho) the quinine bark and many other products of the country are similarly packed on the return journey. Next week we shall get fairly started after all this preliminary.

AN APPEAL.

To the Ministers and Members of the Methodist Episcopal Church in North Carolina.

BY BISHOP WARREN.

You are now called upon to consider one of the most important questions of the age, viz: whether you will protect yourselves, your sons, your daughters and fellow-citizens from the ravages of intoxicating drink. You are called upon to decide whether men shall be allowed to grow rich by your ruin and the ruin of those dear to you—whether men can murder souls for money. There can be but one side to this question What can you do?

(a) Remember the woes that the Bible pronounces on them that use strong drink, and them who put the bottle to their neighbor's lips.

(b) Remember the rules of the Discipline of our church, which forbid "drunkenness," buying or selling spirituous liquors, or drinking them, except in cases of extreme necessity;" and not only remember, but enforce them. The church must be kept pure from this and all other sins.

(c) In regard to the question of enforcing prohibition, to be submitted to vote the first Monday in August. I pray you to send to the headquarters at Raleigh and elsewhere for documents; get thoroly posted yourselves; inform others; preach on the subject with Christian prudence on the Sabbath; publicly and privately pray for the success of the movement; lecture in public halls and by the wayside; agitate, agitate, combine, and finally vote. Such discussions are healthful in the highest degree. They set before all men the possibilities of an undebilitated manhood; they lead men to know their rights, and, knowing dare maintain; they render gain by the harm of others mean and contemptible, and stir men from lethargy to intense mental activity.

You will deposit thousands of votes in the coming election, and ought to influence tens of thousands more. Let every one use his rights of franchise for home protection, and induce as many others to do so as possible, so that the old north state, glorious in its religious settlement and history, shall assert itself on the side of tempersnce. It is the key to our present safety and future prosperity. —Atlantic Methodist Advocate.

SALOON FRUIT.

It was suggested lately that the Rescue should give a weekly account or mention of some of the most prominent crimes, cruelties and disasters occasioned by drink and the grogshop, But this ghastly and disgusting record of horrible events appears in the ordinary daily and weekly papers, and it would scarcely add to their publicity to have them repeated in one paper more. It is a well known fact that in this state, more blessed with natural resources of comfort, health and happiness than any other country in the world. with abundance of churches, educational privileges, Sunday-schools, temperance organizations, charitable and benevolent influences, etc., etc., — the beer, wine and whisky sold in our grogshops, licensed by the votes of our people, cause the most bloody daily record and the longest list of savage crimes, cruelties and outrages that have ever blackened the history of any people, civilized or barbarous, of this or any other age with whose history we are acquainted.

And there is another very appalling act too, to which our attention should be directed. Daily contact and association with this ceaseless revel in blood and rampant vice has so hardened our people that when a few merciful men and women would endeavor to stay this barbarous trade in lives and souls of men they are ridiculed as fanatics; the churches are mostly silent and some of them hostile; the business world blindly thirsting for present gain is perfectly indifferent. Even the attempt to teach the children of the public schools a warning truth is steadily resisted, and the Bible is forbidden to utter in the Sunday-school a warning word against drunkenness more than once a year. Perhaps that last is the most heartlessly cruel of all rum's work, and the most directly the result of Satan's cunning instigation.

R. L. Robinson, 24 years of age, son of John Robinson of Thomaston, Maine, has been three years in California; got on a spree at Chico and put a bullet through his brain on Sunday week. John Robinson and family of Thomaston, Maine will be grateful to California for making their boy a drunkard and a suicide.

Mr. Dodge, the tailor whom the coroner's jury charge as the indirect cause of the suicide of Ida Foster is a perfect model of the work of the beer-shop; just the kind of young men that the majority of our voters vote at every election to make all the youth of California, utterly debauched, enslaved, depraved and nasty with tobacco, whisky and beer.

New York, May 15th—Mrs Bridget Quinlan, aged 44 years was shot twice to-night at her home 339 East Thirty-fourth street by her son Patrick, who is a drunken worthless character.

Professor Denton says one man, John Mills, discovered 80,000 errors of translation in the 8,000 verses of the New Testament! No wonder that any man who believes that has no room left for any other belief. A well known man of his unbelieving stripe in Baltimore once told the writer there were 32, 671 contradictions in the Bible, (or some exact figures like those). "Yes, will you tell me some of them?" "Oh, it is full of them everywhere." "Yes, I know; but tell me some of the most prominent ones, please; I would like to get hold of them. "Oh, the Bible is chock full of contradictions; everybody knows that." "Yes. but tell me just one." Well, he could not just specify any particular one; but every body knew the Bible was full of them from one end to the other: no one attempted to deny that. Poor fellow; he knew the exact count was 32 thousand and something, but he had not the most remote idea of which or where a single one of them was to be found.

IN HAMILTON, Canada, the Scott act was defeated by the four daily papers, 4 breweries, 144 saloons, the lectures of Dr. Crosby and Rev. D. J. McDonnell, lack of temperance literature and temperance statistics, and a portion of the Presbyterian and all the Anglican clergymen: so Professor Foster says, who is now a resident there.

The duty of all good temperance men to take and pay for a good temperance paper cannot be doubted; nor does his duty end here; he should strive by all honorable means to extend its circulation among his neighbors and contribute to its columns. That is what the Delaware Signal says, and it is a very sound and able paper.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institu ion. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED—At his home, near Coultervill, Mariposa county, on Wednesday morning, May 25th, 1881, Milton L. Shilling, aged 19 years and 7 months, an honored and useful member of our Order.

C. N. GOULDING

Lectured in Winters 24th, large audience; three applications for membership. Capay 25 and 26, Knights Landing District Lodge 27, 28: Cacheville 29 and 30. Ten applications for membership. The cause is gaining ground rapidly.

They gave the RESCUE a boom at Knights Landing District Lodge by appointing a committee of one from each lodge in the county as Committee on temperance literature. A prize of $10 (money raised) will be given to the lady who obtains the largest number of subscribers to the RESCUE before the next meeting of the District Lodge.

BRO. LELAND sends eight subscribers this week from Oregon, and says the circulation which the RESCUE has there is helping the cause; but it makes him feel bad to get so few additions to his list.

ARKANSAS. The Bev. H. R. Withers, editor of the Temp Banner, has his announcement to lecture, "by authority of the Ch. Temp. Union, the State Prohibition Alliance and Good Templars" It is a good plan for these organizations to pull together.

THE club of twelve credited to Yuba City, last week belongs to June Lodge, Franklin School District, four miles from Yuba City, but the latter is their Post Office. June Lodge is one of the gallant old veterans, which has always nailed its colors to the mast, and means to all the time.

EASTWARD.—Passengers bound East should remember that the Chicago and Northwestern is the safe line and the line for temperance and wise people to patronize. No grogshop nor liquor sold at any of their stations or on their property, and no drunks or beer bloats employed by the company to mash up passengers. Tickets same price. See that the ticket you buy takes you by that safest and best route.

THE N. Y. TRIBUNE GROGSHOP.—The most "conspicuous" beer dive in N. Y. city (so called by the whisky organ) in the Tribune Building has been vacated by the poison sellers, and the premises are to be occupied by some honest business. So says the N. T. Advocate, but it does not say whether the rummies would not stay any longer or whether they were obliged to leave. The building as a grogshop, however much a scandal to the honest Horace Greeley was no way inconsistent with the present principles and practices of the Tribune.

"The Holiness Tent will be pitched in Anaheim on the 27th of May and will be under the charge of a number of ministers of various denominations—The Adventist tent was rolled up on Wednesday, and Anaheim was abandoned to its fate. It grieves us to learn that the gentleman who preached in the tabernacle leaves us with a firm belief that the Sodom and Gomorrah of ancient times have a counterpart in the Anaheim of to-day."—Anaheim Gazette.

Starting a Holiness Tent in Anaheim is a most courageous Enterprise. To call it the most stupendous joke of the century would be tame.

ANOTHER county in Nova Scotia, Colchester, has adopted the Canada Temp. act by 1000 majority, one of its towns, Truro givtng 144 for and 17 against. It appears the rumbloats have succeeded in getting their rebellion against the Act appealed to the Privy Council of England to review the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada. That council knows as much about it and has as much right to deal with the question as King Cetewayo has. It is surprising what indignities people will submit to who imagine themselves a free people: but we have quite as much of that kind of thing as the Canadians.

RICHARD GRANT WHITE giving his experience of England says, "I was struck with horror at the besotted condition of many of the women—women who were bearing children every year and nursing them, and who seemed to me little better than foul human stills through which the accursed liquor with which they were soaked, filtered drop by drop into the little drunkards at their breasts. To these children drunkenness comes unconsciously, like their native language. They cannot remember a time when it was new to them. They come out of the cloudland of infancy with the impression that drunkenness is like hunger or sleep, one of the normal conditions of man."

And there are some of the same kind of mothers, raising the same kind of little helpless drunkards to day on the beer and wine of this State—lots of them.

THE Temperance Reunion at Woodwards Gardens June 23rd is expected to be a splendid affair. See adv.

OREGON. — From Amity, Oregon, information comes that there is to be a picnic of the Good Templars of Yamhill county at McMinnville June 11th. A grand good time is expected, lecture and literary exercises, a brass band, vocal music, dinner music and everything necessary to make a pleasant and happy reunion. So promises our friend sister S. A. McKune.

THE LODGE DIRECTORY has been left out for two weeks and replaced with more interesting reading. Next week it is proposed to drop it again and give in its place a splendid sermon by Joseph Cook for the National Temperance League in Mr. Spurgeon's tabernacle, which it is hoped will be attentively read and preserved for future use by every reader. It is a masterly production like all of Joseph Cook's works.

WITHIN A MILE, ETC. — In North Carolina the question of State prohibition comes before the people for ratification by vote on the 4th August. But the sale of liquor is already prohibited by the late legislature within one to five miles of certain churches, schools and other institutions. There are seventy within one mile, three within one and a half miles; 125 within two, 130 within three, 42 within 4 and 23 within five. In all 383 places cleared of the traffic; about every legislator wanted prohibition in some place, so to save time they passed the whole in a lump. But how absurd, how monstrous the principle that the traffic which is a crime, and recognized and punished as a crime if carried on within a certain limit, should ever be permitted anywhere for a moment.

LIARS FOR KANSAS were called for by the RESCUE about two months ago, and they are busily at work. They have sent an alarm to England which caused a good minister there, Rev. Edgar Jacob, while making an appeal for temperance to lament bitterly that Kansas had prohibited the use of wine in the Holy Communion under a heavy penalty, etc., etc. But that is a tame lie and will soon get found out. If they cannot do better than that they wont earn even their whisky. We have not heard a word yet about the total abandonment of all classes to universal drunkenness, so sure to follow prohibition; nor of the woe begone shriveled, dying appearance of the enslaved citizens who cant buy a drop of liquor, even for medicine, or for the most aggravated case of corns.

HELP OURSELVES AND THEM.—The rich men who have business interests in San Francisco, ought to send $10.000 to pay for help in canvassing the State of North Carolina to carry the prohibitory law on the coming 4th of August. The colored men want especial teaching to enable them to vote right, which they will about all do, if they know what is right. The whiskysellers and servants of Satan will no doubt spend $100.000 there to bribe voters to defeat the law: and good people ought to send faithful lecturers to teach the masses there the truth. And if prohibition is carried in Carolina, it hastens it so much here that this State could, if it were necessary, profitably to itself expend a million dollars in helping any sister State to rid itself of the great curse and hasten its universal extinction. And it would be a most excellent financial operation for the State of California to borrow 100 millions at 10 per cent interest if need be, and buy out every brewery, winery, distillery and grogshop in the State, carry all the proprietors to the Fiji islands and support them there in good style as long as they live. That would double in 3 or 4 years the real available cash value of all the property and all the business of this State. But the nuisance could be got rid of more cheaply.

TOOTHACHE.

FOR OUR GOOD TEMPLAR DENTISTS.

To have it out or not—that is the question;
Whether 'tis better for the jaw to suffer
The pangs and torments of an aching tooth,
Or to take steel against a host of troubles
And, by extracting, end them? To pull—to tug—
No more; and by a tug to say we end
The toothache, and a thousand natural ills
The jaw is heir to—'tis a consummation
Devoutly to be wished. To pull—to tug—
To tug! perchance to break—aye, there's the rub,
For in that wrench what agony may come,
When we half dislodge that stubborn foe,
Must give us pause; there's the respect
That gives an aching tooth so long a life
For who would bear the whips and stings of pain
The old wife's nostrum, dentists' contumely,
The pangs of hope deferred, kind sleep delay,
When he himself might his quietus make
For one poor shilling? Who would fardels bear,
To groan and sink beneath a load of pain,
But that the dread of something lodged within
The linen twisted forceps from whose pangs
No jaw at ease returns, puzzles the will
And makes it rather bear the ills it has
Than fly to others that it knows not of?
Thus dentists do make cowards of us all;
And thus the native hue of resolution
Is sicklied o'er with the pale cast of fear;
And many a one whose courage seeks the door
With this regard, his footsteps turns away
Scared at the name of dentist.

MERCED ITEMS.

EDITOR RESCUE:—Merced has about 2500 inhabitants and there are about thirty or more places where intoxicants are sold. And specimens of the work done inside can be seen almost any time on our streets. According to careful estimate made, there is about $70,000 spent annually in this place for liquor. But we have some strong temperance workers who are ready to fight intemperance to the bitter end. I think we are gaining ground. We now have under the management of the W. C. T. U. a free reading room which has taken the place of a saloon.

There is also a flourishing Good Templar lodge, and we have a white ribbon club which meets every Saturday evening. There we have quite an interesting literary exercise. At the last meeting a gentleman of this place signed the pledge and was called upon for some remarks. He said, "I commenced to drink at the early age of four years. My father every year made cherry rum. One day when he had drained the liquor off the cherries, my little sister and I eat enough to make us very drunk. I got an appetite for liquor then, have kept it up except at intervals ever since, have made a great deal of money, but it has all gone thru drink." His hair begins to show a frost of age, and time will tell whether he will be able to keep his pledge.

What a lesson for parents. What an awful thought that a child shoul l trace this terrible appetite back to the parental roof. I used to think there was no harm in using liquor in cooking, but years ago I made up my mind that my children should never say they learned to love it at their mother's table. A lady here hired a woman to work for her. She gave good satisfaction till about Christmas, when a jug of brandy was bought for Christmas preparation. After the guests had arrived on Christmas evening, the hired woman who had got drunk on the jug of brandy came in and told them all to go home, they were not wanted there. So she broke up the party. She had gone there to reform. She went to a saloon and spent all her money for drink.

A few days ago I saw one of our residents here running home in great haste. I supposed his wife or child was sick: come to find out his hired woman had got drunk on innocent beer which she had found in a keg in the house. She was raving so that her mistress became alarmed and sent for her husband. She was so unmanageable that they sent for the officers to take charge of her. All this the result of that which is considered so innocent. I used to think there was no harm in lager beer, tho I never used it; a great many are sincere in thinking so. And as the concealed enemy is more dangerous than an open one, so I regard beer.

MRS. A. B. LEACH.

CONNECTICUT has been industriously promoting and licensing the sale of poison by her citizens. As a consequence, last year it expended $575 000 for crime pauperism and insanity and $235,000 for education. And all the legislation hostile to temperance has been enacted when the Republican party was in power in all branches of the state government.

TEMPERANCE INCONSISTENCY.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. FIVE

Common sense, and consistency alike demand a thoro change in our tactics in fighting intemperance. We have tried to show some of the mistakes, and popular fallacies under which the temperance army has directed its movements. We have displayed endurance, pugnacity, grit, piety, and now if we will add common sense, and be consistent we may yet dislodge the enemy in this State. All agree that the dram shop system is the cause of drunkenness, the tap-root of all the evils from which we seek deliverance. All agree that total abstinence, and the absolute prohibition by law, of rum-selling is the only remedy and all are united in this, as the ultimate object to reach. But we have honestly differed and divided our ranks, in regard to the active forces to secure the object we all have in view. Our ablest and best advocates have honestly accepted "Local Option" as the best measure to adopt. But we honestly believe that principle is deceptive and will fail, just as surely as the "License System" has failed to prevent drunkenness. But if our objections are not valid, we are open to conviction. All, however, confess that it is not satisfactory and only adopted on the ground of expediency.

If we are willing to follow the dictates of common sense we shall correct the mistakes of the past and unite our forces on the only true principle viz., total prohibition as a present living issue, and fight it out on this line if it takes the next century to secure it. We ought to learn from experience. For scores of years we have bent all our efforts most to the subversion of an appetite which is itself the effect and not the cause of intemperance. We have thus consumed our strength and spent our money in this war upon appetite, without any perceptible weakening of the liquor traffic, the source of all drunkenness. We have lopped off a single branch of the Upas, but have left the trunk, and roots undisturbed, We have expended nearly all our energies on effects only, with the feeble weapons of voluntary associations, and the pledge system, a sort of dress parade attack, and statistics show that we have saved about one in thirty, and while getting this one saved. 50 others have become drunkards. We ought to be ashamed of the progress we have made under the existing program of warfare against the crime of drunkard making.

We have sought to remove the stream instead of the fountain. We have warred against the fact, and not against the principle of intemperance. We are free to affirm that in this whole movement we have failed to recognize the true character of the evil. The design was good, but failure was inevitable. And when this pledge system reaches its natural terminus—exhaustion, we shall then be ready to inaugurate a better method, one that strikes at the root of the evil, and places the temperance reform on its only legitimate foundation. Heretofore the movement has rested on expediency merely, and has been prosecuted for the most not as a positive moral duty, but as something merely optional. Hence the feeble measures, and the lack of an adequate moral basis. The people have felt that they might, not that they must, engage in the work. Hence the use of moral suasion, instead of ballots, and of the pledge instead of the police.

LETTER FROM C. H. PETERSON, S. D.

I have dotted down a few items of travel in the country during the last quarter. In February I stopped at Snelling (Merced county) a couple of days, visited the lodge and found Sis Kendrick, W. C. T. at the helm. I had the honor of taking the chair, initiating one candidate, had a pleasant meeting; Next day Sunday I offered my services for the forenoon as I had to leave town in the stage at noon. We had a temperance conference meeting, interchanging ideas about the work needed and how to build up the lodge by a series of open temperance meetings. Such work is needed in this place to redeem it from the liquor traffic. February 18th passed thru San Luis and Arroyo Grande; lots of work is needed at San Luis, the county seat. A lodge of Good Templars has been lingering here for some time. It is a reproach to the people of any town, village, county or state pretending to be civilized to run it in favor of the chain lightning, kill me quick doggeries, which barter the happiness of its citizens for misery and degradation and make them fit subjects for the prisons, assylums and other kindred institutions.

The Arroyo is a small town. The surrounding country with the town would supply a large membership for a flourishing lodge.

Arrived at Guadalupe, Santa Barbara county the same day and attended Vesper Lodge in the evening. Sis. Ayers, W. C. T., requested me to take the chair. Initiated two candidates. This lodge is composed of very good material; there are other small towns not far distant from here where by some effort the banner of F. H. and C might wave. They are the Graciosa, Central city and Los Alamos; they expect to have considerable addition to their membership when Sis. Stevens comes here on her lecture tour, she will find Bro. Morse L. D. and other good sisters and brothers on hand ready to help her in her work. There is a temperance hotel in this place. Next morning I drove to Lompoc accompanied by Bro. Morse who kindly volunteered to pilot me thru mountains and valleys. Met with Lompoc Lodge, was called upon to make a few remarks, enjoyed the meeting very much. The town and valley (called the Lompoc Temperance colony) is composed principally of temperance people, and better behaved and law abiding citizens can not be found in the state; although I heard there was some cannonading done in the town it has not been found out who did it.

THE SALOON LYING FLAT.

We open our forms to briefly announce that the building in which George Walker was keeping his saloon, in this town, was shaken down bodily, last night. Whether it was done by an earthquake, a nihilist from Russia, or whom, it is impossible to say, as no inquest has been held. As it was a detached building no harm was done to other property. Walker and wife have never lived in the building and it was commonly known that a couple of men who sometimes sleep there, when in town, are absent at this particular time. Consequently, no one is killed, missing or wounded. The general opinion prevails that this is not a healthy climate for saloons. We are not an advocate of this way of dealing with the nuisance and curse, but candor compels us to add that we are shedding no tears over it, Any one looking for a location for a saloon had better not select a community founded on temperance principles, where the land is sold on the express condition that no liquor shall be made or sold thereon; where public sentiment is so nearly unanimous against saloons and where earthquakes are so prevalent and destructive.—Lompoc Record. May 21st.

That is a lawless proceeding, an injustifiable violence, a moblaw outrage.——But it is not half as wicked a crime and outrage as letting a saloon stand anywhere, without blowing it up or tearing it down. That is where the outrage comes in.

NO RESPECTER OF PERSONS.

Three years ago a friend said to us. "Isn't it strange all the girls of ——family fancy and marry fast men?"

Instantly there flashed before us the picture of a fine, noble, manly, pure looking man, the husband of one of these girls. Without saying anything to our friend, we thought: "Is he fast?"

We have not chanced to meet him for months, until the other day. Alas! The bloodshot eye, red nose, downcast, evasive look, a general air of dissatisfaction with himself and indifference to things around him, betrayed too surely that he was farther down the inclined plane than was entirely satisfactory to himself. and we are very sure his face betrayed signs which could not be a source of pride to his friends.

We speak of this because it startled us so, and as a warning to girls to be slow in fancying fast men, and to young men not to imagine they can trifle with the tempter, and not fall his victim sooner or later.—Ex.

OUR county Shelbyville, has a population of 29.-95I, and it is said, has no saloons, Shelbyville has no licensed saloons, but the city charter provides that it may be sold by the gallon.

There is a Temperance Lodge, Juvenile T. Lodge, W. C. T. U, of 29 members, which has just been organized, a temperance Sunday school, with a splendid orchestra, also a sewing school with an average attendance of forty. It has distributed 40,000 temperance tracts and leaflets, and has introduced 30 temperance papers, and it is only one year old. Mrs. G. D. Chaffee is its president. She gives her money and her whole time to the work. If all the ladies were like her, there would soon be no whisky by the gallon.—Signal.

W. C. T. U.

The Officers of the Womens National C. T. U. have issued the following circular:

To the pastors of churches and sup'ts of Sunday schools.

Dear Friends—To the Christian Church we must look for final deliverance from the drink traffic and intemperance its legitimate out-come. The Sunday school of to-day is the church of to-morrow embryo.

In accordance with the above, please cut out the following petition, paste it on a sheet of paper, prefaced with the above circular, and have it signed by the pastors and S. S. superintendents of your town or townships, and return to Miss Auretta Hoyt, Indianapolis, chairman of the state W. C. T. U. committee on Juvenile Temperance work. Please arrange also to have it circulated thruout your country:

To the international Sunday school committee.

Dear Friends.—Believing that intemperance resulting largely from a lack of education concerning the duty of total abstinence, more than any other sin hinders the progress of Christ's Kingdom in the world, and that upon the Church, rests the most solemn obligation to see that the children and young people committed to her care are thoroly and wisely instructed in regard to this matter, we, the undersigned pastors of churches and superintendents of Sunday schools, earnestly petition for the provision of Quarterly Temperance lessons in the regular course.

It would seem idle to petition the European members of that committee who are doubtless all or most of them whisky drinkers and beer devotees and haters of total abstinence. And it seems as idle to petition the American members of it, who make a stand against even allowing the children to to hear what the Bible says against wine. The only result of American adherence to the international system is the success of the effort to keep the children from learning to be abstinent. There is no possible superiority in the lessons to those that could be prepared on this side. And the condition of American adherence to the International Union is that the Union shall be silent on the grogshop question and not affront the brewers—and that is a pretty condition to be accepted; uniformity is very dear at that price.

A GOVERNOR.—In his last message to the Legislature, the Governor of North Carolina said: "There is sold in the State another poison which numbers by thousands its victims slain, debauched, degraded, impoverished, wrecked, or made miserable and heart-broken." The evils inflicted upon the people of this State by the human slaughter houses and poison dens located and licensed everywhere are doubtless ten times greater than in North Carolina, but we have never had a Governor that could see any of them.

THE LOSINGS BANK.

As Mr. Reed, the builder, came into his yard on Monday morning, he met George Joyce, one of his men. A fine, intelligent man he was, and a skillful workman.

"Good morning, sir," said Joyce.

"Good-morning," replied Mr. Reed; "I wanted to see you this morning particularly, Joyce, to speak to you about a mistake you made on Satur day."

"I am sorry to hear it, sir; I was not aware—I hope no harm's done, sir."

"I wish I could say none, Joyce—but I fear there is serious harm—to me—and what I care more for, to your wife, your children, and yourself—and, I might add, to your country?"

"I don't take your meaning, sir," said Joyce, looking puzzled.

"Well, then, I'll speak my meaning plainly. You know, Joyce, that I desire to be the friend of my men. As a friend, listen to me. As I was turning home on Saturday evening, on passing the post-office, a large number of working-men and their wives were going into the Savings Bank, there to deposit part of their week's earnings, and it made my heart glad to see amongst them many of my own men. But I passed on, and as I came by Cattle's corner, I saw you and several others turn into the Losings Bank, there to deposit your wages. It's always a pleasure to me to pay my men the money they have so well earned; but I own, Joyce, I grudged what those men spent."

"Losings Bank sir? I suppose that it's the 'Red Lion' that you'r talking of. I did turn in for an hour with a mate."

'Joyce, you are a thinking man. I know that by the way you do my work. Have you ever thought about this matter?"

"Well, not very particularly, that I know of. To my mind, there isent much to think, save that after a week's work it's hard if a man musn't take a bit of rest without being taken to do for it almost as bad as if he'd been stealing or murdering."

"Well, there are thefts and murders take place in the public-houses more than ever come before a judge and jury; but they are not the less noted by Him who hath said, 'Whoso hateth his brother is a murderer'; and whose eye sees the wife and children whose money is wrongfully taken from them. But to return to what I was saying, have you ever reckoned up what you deposit every time you turn in?"

"Well, a shilling it may be, or two," said Joyce.

Mr. Reed taking a pencil and piece of paper from his pocket-book, handed them to Joyce, and said, "Let us look at it fully and make a fair calculation. You deposit your money, and lose it; your time, and lose it; your character, and lose it; your health of body, and lose it; your strength of mind, and lose it; your self-respect and lose it; your sense of right and wrong, and lose it; your home comfort, and lose it; your wife's happiness, and lose it; your children's rights, and lose them; your country's honor, and lose it; your own soul, and lose it!"

"It looks a black list, rather," said Joyce. "I did not think there was so much in it; and the last is worst of all! I think I'll try the Savings Bank instead."

Father Matthew, the apostle of Temperance in Ireland, tells in one of his addresses about a corn-dealer in Cork named Barry, who took the pledge. Some time after that he was met one day on the street by a whisky dealer, who asked, cordially, "Why is it you do not come to see me now so often as you used to do?"

"I can not" replied Barry, for my friend Father Matthew desired me to keep away from temptation."

"I'm sorry to see you looking so badly," was the next remark, "your face is quite yellow."

"If my face is yellow," said Barry with a smile, "so is my pocket too," and he pulled out four sovereigns (20,00) which he was going to put in the bank.

"The outlook for Leavenworth has not been brighter for twenty years than it has this spring. On every hand there are evidences of improvements, commenced or in contemplation, and a spirit of hopefulness and confidence, such as has not been witnessed for many years, is discernible among all our people. Everything now indicates that the year 1881 will be marked as one of much more than ordinary prosperity."—Leavenworth Times.

THE DIME COLLECTION.

The Women's N. C. T. Union has got a neat little card 7¼x2¾ inches rnled on one side and headed Dime Collections with blank for Name and No. of collector. This is folded double and on the outside which becomes thus two pages there is a list of the officers of the Union, a statement of the purposes of the Dime Collection and the following "We aim to cover every man's beer mug or wine glass with a revelation of its contents, and of their effects, and to show to every child in the land the Serpent that lurks in his path." "Take fast hold of instruction, let her not go, keep her for she is thy life."

This is a very good model to be followed everywhere when Thanksgiving comes round.

SANTA CLARA, Cal., May 21, 1881.

ED RESCUE:—The teachers of Santa Clara county during the yearly session of the teachers Institute this week passed resolutions condemning the use of intoxicants and tobacco among the youth and advising a prohibition of the sale under certain ages.

Yours in F. H. and C.

E. E. CAREY.

It is good to know the teachers of this state are coming out with the public expression of the sentiments which are known to be held by so many of that most useful and excellent class of our citizens: success to the prohibitiory movement advised and it is suggested that the age at which the restriction be removed be fixed at 120 years. People do want a little stimulant after that age.

The churches and temperance societies have established saloons by putting in power political parties who favor such institutions. The church and the pulpit have sanctioned the practice of making drunkards by voting into power politicians. Before we hear any more temperance lectures or sermons we shall be pleased to find the preachers and lecturers voting as they teach.

Saloon keepers will go into other business willingly whenever the church signifies its disapproval of the saloon business by voting for persons opposed to saloons.

The above is from an editorial in the Pine Island News, and we quote it that our church people may examine their lives and see if it is true. If true, a remedy is demanded; if not true, then it will do no harm. A careful examination of one's life is productive of good. Let every professional follower of Christ see if they are doing all they can for the cause of the Master when they vote for these whisky parties.—Temp, Review, Minn.

CONGRESSMAN PAGE is working for the removal of the present superintendent of the mint in order to replace him with an officer who will run the mint in the interests of Mr. Page's machine. Of course the only purpose of a mint and a navy yard and custom house is to make a nest of voters and ward politicians who will relieve the people of the trouble of electing their congressman. The question for a public officer to decide according to this theory is not how to run his office honestly but of which congressman he ought to make it the tool and slave pen.

EVERY week almost a manuscript that would cover, if printed, a whole page of the RESCUE is sent in, but there is no possible room for such until an addition is built on the paper. And when documents of 12 or 20 long pages come to this office there is no possible way for the Editor to find time to read them thru unless he works Sundays as well as week days or to suspend publication one week now and then, There are now quite a number on hand which cannot be examined on account of their extreme length.

REV. J. W. Webb one of our active and successful temperance workers is expected to fill a vacancy for some weeks in the Baptist Church in San Diego. He will no doubt while there afford vigorous help to the advancement of the cause which he deems it an important part of his christian duty to advocate in season and out of season.

LODGE FURNITURE.

In addition to the above, I will attend to orders for Impression Seals, Blank Books, Special Printing, Regalia or Lodge Furniture. This will be done as an accommodation to Lodges and not as a source of profit either to the Grand Lodge or myself; hence all orders filled will be sent per express by the dealers, with instructions to "collect on delivery," unless the money accompanies the order. Address—

ON THE WING.—The G. W. S. Department of the RESCUE is this week closed in Topeka, the capital of the growing and promising young state of Kansas over which metaphorically and practically waves the banner of prohibition. Having been honored with the appointment of auditor of the R. W. G. L. by the R. W. G. T. with instructions to report at Topeka on Feb. 20th, and the notice being somewhat brief it required considerable effort to arrange and leave official cares so suddenly. Sunday night the start was made via. overland train, which left the Sacramento depot at nine o'clock. At 10:45 New Castle was reached where Bro. E. J. Culver was met who passed into our car and presented a box of fine cherries which were gratefully received and the major portion of the fruit carried thru and distributed among eastern friends who had neither thought of nor seen cherries of the present season. At Reno the following morning P. G. W. S., Bro. J. F. Aitken and P. G. W. C., Bro. T. F. Laycock were met, and a brief visit with these earnest workers enjoyed. Nevada was reported prosperous in the work and as having received a decided impetus thru the help of Bro. W. R. Ellis, the special Grand Lecturer who by the way is a Californian, bred, born and educated, and a member of Lodi Lodge, No. 189 of San Joaquin county. At Elko our whilom friend and brother, James Brain was met; at Palisades Bro. W. S. Merchant; at Carlin, P. G. W. C. T. Bro. C. Williams. The usual journey across the continent, always interesting and previously described in this department was made in a variety of climates, from the heat of Sacramento to the frosts of Truckee (of which a view was had "at five o'clock in the morning" to the cold of the higher altitudes. A diversity of weather was also experienced including rain, hail and an old-fashioned snow storm, which in its tempered form ascribed to the lateness of the season, for such made it quite enjoyable. When on the Laramie plains rolling along a voluntary subject of morpheus, the piercing cry of a teutonic matron who occupied the adjoining section, awoke the echoes at an unconscienable early hour, with the exclamation of Oh, Albertine! Albertine! Blood curdling visions arose before all, and heads were poked thro the curtains of each berth, anticipating trouble of some description, when the aforesaid teutonic matron finished her sentence with the words of "Look at dot schnow!" Immediately every form and head relapsed with a benediction (?) upon that human form divine, whose daughter, a fair San Franciscan, doubtless gazed upon "dot schnow, dot peautiful schnow" for the first time. But it was a scene beautiful in the extreme, the broad expanse of prairie in the foreground, the hills and mountains in the distance all enveloped in a mantle of purity. Much time is given in transit to observing and commenting upon temporary associates and fellow occupants of the car, and the amount of alcoholic dissipation indulged in is as remarkable as it is fearful to behold. It seems to be quite the rule to put up a certain quantity of beer and wine and stronger liquors with the customary lunch and these frequently constitute the larger portion of the lunch, and must all be consumed before the end of the journey is reached. Hence it is swilled down, and no doubt habits and appetites created which are not always left behind with the residu of the more solid portion of the lunch. At Ogden the transfer was made from the C. P. to the U. P. railway, and the "time" on the road became much slower. The C. P. has recently shortened up its time some five hours. The U. P. goes blundering along at the old slow rate, the passenger hearing the constant clink-it-y-clank of the sluggishly revolving car-wheel. This should not be so, and there is no reason why the transit from San Francisco to Omaha should not be shortened at least a day's ride. An average of 19 miles an hour, which is the rate of travel of the U. P. road is anything but satisfactory as railroad travel in this day of rapid transits. By the courtesey of C. S. Stebbins, Esq. G. P. and T. agent of the U. P. R. R. of Omaha, our ticket was varied at Ogden to permit of a passage via Cheyenne and Denver in lieu of the Omaha route. Cheyenne was reached and a change made to the Denver Pacific R. R. which bowled along at a lively rate over a vast level and uninteresting plain covered with birch and buffalo grass. En route a stop was made at the town of Greeley, a temperance colony named in honor of Horace Greeley, and founded about ten years ago. It is situated in the Valley of the Cache La Poudre river, from which latter irrigating ditches have been constructed which supply an abundance of water for agricultural purposes. The town itself has grown to goodly proportions, and since the prohibition principles upon which it was founded have been jealously maintained, the people are of course prosperous and happy. The town has the reputation of having some of the finest grist mills in all the West. Night overtakes the hurrying train on these plains. At Brighton junction, nineteen miles from Denver, the piercing shriek of the locomotive and the sudden application of the air brakes awoke all to the realization that something unusual had occurred. Investigation proved a narrow escape from a disastrous accident. Three trains, a freight and two passengers, center and pass here about the same time. The switchman, by some error had switched the freight train off the rails completely, and there lay the locomotive like many a human machine, helpless and powerless because "off the track." The usual appliances were brought to bear, including three locomotives and much swearing, and after a delay of seven hours the blockade was raised and Denver was reached at 3:15 A. M. instead of 8:50 P. M of the night preceding. We should have proceeded on the 10:45 train of the night before, but of course did not, and the next train of 10:15 was patiently awaited. Meanwhile the annual horse race of Colorado fair was being held, and no hotel or sleeping accommodation could be had, wherefore a survey of the town was decided upon.

THE CITY OF DENVER in its entirety is a real surprise to the stranger who is suddenly deposited in its borders and told it is all a growth of less than a decade. It is the caiptal of the State and with all else has become quite a railroad center. It shows according to the census the largest gain in population of any city in the Union, having now a popu. lation of between 30.000 and 40.000. Its location upon a plateau or plain within less than 20 miles of the Rocky mountains is exceedingly picturesque. Seen at the gray of dawn, later enveloped in a cloudy atmosphere, with the sun glinting upon the far away snow-capped Rockies, was a scene long to be remembered and to which a brief item cannot do justice. The buildings of the city are all of a superior character, in fact fine structures all of them. The city is full of life and thrift altho not as prosperous as it has been in the near past. Rents are fablously high, as property owners aim to make their tenants pay for the property within two or three years. A city lot covers an area of 25 feet front by 125 feet deep. Recently the Times newspaper sought to enlarge its building and to do so required the adjoining lot to its property, of the size above quoted, for which it was required to pay $13.000.00. Presumably the Times is more liberally patronized and is doubtless better fixed, financially than is the RESCUE. The city of Denver presents at this time the peculiar phenomena of many buildings "to let" and "for sale" with many more in the process of erection. In our perigrinations about the city, our local pride was flattered (?) by the frequency with which "California" was used. There was the "California Chinese laundry;" "California Beer Hall" and even a street was found dedicated to the Golden State. The 10.45 A. M. train over the K. P. road bore us hence to Topeka which was reached at 2 P. M. on Friday, instead of 2 A. M. as should have been, but nevertheless "in time." At the Gordon House, the avant couriers of the R. W. G. L. were met, Bro. F. G. Keens R. W. G. S.; Bro. Uriah Copp, R. W. G. T.; Bro. John B. Finch of Nebraska and our fellow auditor, Bro. W. D. Crandall G. W. S. of Missouri. And then every train brings its addition and by Monday morning the clans have gathered and nearly all are here from every quarter of the compass and globe. All the "old reliables" are on hand Bros. Hickman, Kanouse, Hastings, Evans, Brandt, Stearns and the host of good workers whose names are legion and would occupy a column of space in their repetition are already here.

THE LOCAL OPTION LAW.

If the local option principle is wrong, how does it happen that the whole English temperance army have fallen into that wrong? Take the platform of the United Kingdom Alliance; it reads: "To secure the total and immediate legislative suppression of the traffic in all intoxicating liquors as beverages." Now as a means of accomplishing this they advocate their Permissive bill. That is just our local option. That organization has been expending from 80 to 100 thousand dollars a year to procure legislative action; and their only fight thus far has been for the local option principle. They think it the best road to prohibition. If so with them why not with us?

The advantages to arise from local option are many. As a means thru which to educate the people, it surpasses any other. When the people are to vote on the question it is extensively discussed in every household; the women as well as the voters talk up the evils of strong drink. Lectnrers are concentrated in large numbers upon a small territory. People turn out to listen, and are one by one satisfied that it will be better to banish intoxicants. The newspapers discuss it, ministers preach upon it. Even if "no license" is defeated, it turns the attention of the people to strong drink, and thereafter those evils will be noted and remembered. It gives the temperance army a chance to fight the same battle over again. With them it is an irrepressible conflict and as soon as defeated they will begin to prepare for another contest. and this active work will soon give them the victory. Then, too, when the majority once establish probibition themselves, they will see to it that their wishes are heeded, and will take active steps to see the law enforced much more promptly and efficiently than when the same law is passed by the legislature.

California had a local option law a few years since which the courts declared unconstitutional. Suppose it had stood: to-day more than half the territory of the state would be free from the greater evils of intemperance. Would not that half be of some value to us? Now we have nothing: how is this better than half the state?

The United States at the commencement of our rebellion undertook to take the whole first and "on to Richmond!" was laid away upon the shelf of experience for four years by the first Battle of Bull Run. Was it a mistake to conquer that outbreak in detail; was nothing gained in taking New Orleans, Vicksburg and Chattanooga?

The great mass of temperance workers think it the best and most efficient plan yet devised for final conquest. In every land today the temperance workers have no territory. Give them their permissive bill and they will soon have some, and with that little soon get more.

The trouble with our ardent friends is, they are too ardent. They expect to harvest in June while the corn will not ripen until Sept. I like our Brother Hastings' comparison. It is clearing the trees of vice from our country. But local option takes tree by tree out by the roots. It clears the state as far as it goes. License with restrictions innumerable only tops off the branches, but prohibition whether local or general takes them out alike, root and branch. The only difficulty with the national prohibition party is they have no patience to clear up the farm, acre by acre, yet it will have to be done that way after all. Local option gives us a chance to fight. When we have that the battle is by no means won. It is only begun. It only gives us the chance to knock the chip off our antagonist's shoulder. We must do the hard fighting after that: up to that time we are only getting him provoked. All we need to insure success is the means to keep up the incessant strife. No matter how many times we are worsted we shall conquer in the end. Local option provides this means, hence we ask it and shall continue to ask it both from our state and from our Maker until it comes.

Lecturers' Reports.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

WM. CROWHURST.

Nord, Butte Co., May 29th, 1881.

Marysville is doing good work and certainly is on the eve of a temperance revival. The firm of A. J. Batchelder and Co. has stopped selling liquors in connection with its grocery business. Quite a number of men in business and others in the legal profession, also one physician, are joining the Order. Bro. Charles Covillaud, District Secretary, is doing the right kind of work—work that will eventually arouse all Marysville and the surrounding country, He is being ably supported by earnest workers,

Cordua District was lectured; but, a saloon near by seems to have devoured everything that "slickens" has left. The McMillan family are very much in earnest, and we hope they may yet reap a rich reward for their untiring and intelligent devotion to our Order and the cause and to Cordua Lodge.

Yuba City was visited and lectured at the solicitation of our earnest Brother, Ed. Ellington. One or two old fogies there, who lead the community, will not permit the instituting of a Lodge of the Independent Order of Good Templars. Our Order is too progressive for them. Lecture given in the M. E. Church.

Gridley is doing better work, and its Lodge has increased since reorganization a month ago. The right class of people, headed by Post Master and Lodge Deputy, Bro. Henry C. Wharton, will now carry on the work successfully. At this place we were glad to greet Bro. Thos. Shields of Vallejo, 64.

Nelson is succeeding and seems proud of its new Lodge. "Perseverentia Omnia Vincit" is its motto.

Durham, the home of Avonia Lodge, is almost deserted—men having gone into haying and preparing for harvesting. A few determine to keep the fire burning however.

Chico meeting was well attended by Good Templars. Our brethren and sisters here seem very earnest in the work. Quite a large gathering in the M. E, Church, Rev. Bro Holbrook, Pastor, was proven to be almost exclusively Good Templars. This town of 5000 inhabitants needs more readers of the RESCUE: It also needs the distribution of temperance tracts, and other temperance literature.

Nord, our last appointment in Butte county, was exceedingly pleasant and at the same time very gratif ying toBro. Bacus, L. D., and other faithful workers of Nord Lodge. A number of names were obtained, and six persons were initiated by dispensation, refreshments and sociability in conclusion.

This ends our work in this county, but the temperance cause will continue to progress. Four old Lodges have been reorganized and four new ones organized. Butte Co. has now 15 Lodges in active operation. Its District Lodge will meet in Oroville on June 4th, when we hope that steps will be taken to distribute temperance literature thruout the county.

M. D. MERRICK.

The meeting under the auspices of Fountain Lodge in Oakland on Monday evening was but thinly attended owing to unusual attraction in other places, yet the entertainment was a very good one. On Tuesday after a tedious ride by rail I found a very large assemblage in the Congregational Church in Castroville, and the meeting was one of unusual interest. In the celebration of the fourth anniversary of the Lodge, the Bros. and Sisters displayed in a most marked manner the energy, taste, and liberality, that ought to characterize Good Templars everywhere. The musical and literary portion of the exercises was most elegantly rendered and the lecture was received with the most appreciative attention. After the exercises in the church; the friends were invited to a public hall where a rich and liberal repast was provided, and most heartily enjoyed.

A large delegation of Good Templars was present from Salinas. and some from other places, altogether the occasion was a grand success.

At Hollister on the 25th my audience was a fair one in point of numbers as it was also on the 26th at which time I initiated Ruby Lodge with fifty-four charter members, with R. M. Shackleford as W. C. T., one of the ablest and most influential business men of the place. Among the members we have the president of the Bank, the superintendent of the public schools, and the leading people of the place. The Lodge starts under the most favorable prospects, and too much credit cannot be awarded to the Rev's. T. C. Barton and S. Jones for the able manner in which they worked to secure the establishment of the Lodge, without their assistance the effort might have been a failure.

At Felton after a most peculiar and discouraging struggle, I succeeded in organizing Ben Lomond Lodge with 42 charter members, with almost assured prospect of its being a strong and energetic lodge. On Sunday morning visited Boulder Creek and found the Pacific Lodge is going right ahead just as I expected it would when it was started.

At Alma in Santa Clara county my lecture was well attended and a good impression was evidently made. A list of names for a lodge will be made up here, and an organization made probably in a short time. Evidences of an increased interest in the Order and in the cause of temperance is becoming every day more and more apparent.

MRS. STEVENS.

The Independent of Santa Barbara says of Mrs. Stevens.

"We are sorry to announce that her enthusiasm is somewhat chilled by the indifferentism of this community, although her eloquence has not been without a decided effect on those who have listened to it, But the prevailing tone of society here is as calm and dificult to move as might be expected in such a climate, and with such a preponderance of the invalid element."

It also quotes from her remarks: If Santa Barbara wishes to be prosperous, she must awaken from her Rip Van Winkle sleep. Nothing will contribute so much to her advancement as a good temperance revival.

Here the speaker spent several minutes in rapid and enthusiastic praise of Southern California generally, and its wealth of temperance colonies particularly, giving especial honor to the eight towns in Los Angeles county, which will not endure a saloon within their borders. She thinks that Santa Barbara seems rather apathetic in the glorious cause, but she expects her to wheel into line, so that when a division of the State shall be made the new commonwealth shall enter the ranks as a Prohibition State. (This was received with applause.(

Hell Gate, New York, was blown up by means of little holes which it took three years to drill. The Lodges of Good Templars will in time overcome the superstructure of drunkenness just as Hell Gate was blown to atoms all in a moment, by the touch of a baby's finger on the electric button. With Lodges in working order all through the land, a child's hand can finally accomplish the downfall of this tyranny of alcohol,

With a stirring appeal to all present to join in the drilling. the lecturer closed her remarks, and proceeded to canvass the congregation for persons willing to join the Good Templars. Forty names were added to the list, and the audience dispersed, evidently much impressed by the earnest magnetism of the Grand Lecturer of the Order of Good Templars.

The Santa Barbara Press says: "Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, Grand Lecturer of the Order of Good Templars, is doing a good work in Santa Barbara. As an organizer, few lecturers have the signal success which has attended the efforts of this eminent lady. Fifty new members have joined in Santa Barbara. Wherever Mrs. Stevens has lectured, crowded houses have greeted her. Those who attend her lecture this evening in the Presbyterian Church will receive a rare intellectual treat, and will help to forward the interests of one of the best causes in which humanity has ever become enlisted."

Mrs S. reports 6 Chuches and 20 saloons in Santa Barbara and thinks it good reason for the display of some active energy,

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

CURRENTS OF THE SEA.

NUMBER SEVEN.

As the great equatorial current of the Pacific nears the land of Australia and Asia, the main body of it is forced off toward the north, and then to the northeast, up the China sea to the coast of Japan and onward to the Aleutian Islands and Behrings Strait.

During our winter season the Northeast monsoon prevails with great force all along the Chinese coast and sea. Most of that time it blows a pretty hard gale, and as the current sets rapidly against the wind the sea is very turbulent. To beat up the China sea against the monsoon from HongKong to Shanghai or Japan in a clipper ship was and is a pretty serious undertaking. For Chinese vessels it was impossible, and only the strong favoring current made it at all possible for any sailing vessel. In a clipper ship with an ambition to make the best time on record, and to distance all competitors, the temptation was always present to carry all the canvas the ship could possibly bear; that used to drive her with such tremendous force into the opposing head seas, that the concussion with them would send a drenching stream and shower flying in very frequent succession over the ship from one end to the other and keep all hands pretty impartially soaked in good wholesome salt water. On one ocasion in the strength of this current about 200 miles south of the Japanese coast the writer made 145 miles clear gain in 24 hours against a fresh but not violent gale directly ahead, having made six tacks during that time. Probably the current helped us 80 miles.

Next time you go to China, dont forget to take passage in a sailing vessel bound northward in December, Jany or Feb. You will learn then all about that fierce monsoon and the warm current that has crossed the wide Pacific and is carrying, in the great volume of heat locked up in its bosom, a substitute for winter's fuel to the Japanese, and Coreans and Kamschatkans and Aleuts: and also it is going to temper very materially the winter of Alaska, British Columbia, Washington Territory, Oregon and even California. The westerly winds which sweep across the Pacific during the winter are constantly receiving from the vast expanse of ocean over which this warm Japanese current has spread itself, copious stores of heat which it distributes on its way as it passes over the western shores of this continent.

INLAND EFFECTS.

The surveyors who prospected the route for the projected Canadian Pacific railroad were surprised to find as they advanced westward that there was a much milder climate to be met with by keeping 300 or 400 miles north of a surveyors strait line, and that the road would also thus pass thru a fertile valley suitable for wheatfields and prosperous farms. The reason of this gentler climate is that the warm Pacific winds find their way there without having to pass over the colder summits of the loftier mountain range. Here is much less snow too, and we have now seen and considered the arrangements by which facilities have been provided for the support and comfort of many millions of happy people in the future, and for an unobstructed railway communication for them too. Now we must be very credulous indeed and perhaps very simple, if we do not see that there was a plainly developed design, in preparing such a singular combination of distant and foreign causes to produce this benefit for Gods thoughtless and ungrateful children. How strange that the heat for this purpose should have been gathered away at sea along the equator, locked up in the depths of the briny deep, carried away off to the westward to China, turned off to the northward, carried by a round about course Eastward again. and arriving at the proper place in the Pacific ocean, there unlocked and distributed into the air, to be carried by the obedient winds to all the different states and territories and peoples and homes and farms—just as a perfectly appointed post office system carries the letters and papers and packets to their thousand destinations.——And these air currents with their genial warmth carry a comfort and a letter of kindness and a promise of budding spring and a Fathers blessing to us all. "The fool hath said in his heart there is no God," but remember particularly, it was only the fool that said so: nobody else ever did that.

BEHRINGS STRAIT.

There is a surface current running thru this narrow and not very deep passage into the Arctic ocean, and it is quite possible that a cold one of equal volume sets outward underneath, but that is not established. The outlet of cold water from the Arctic may be all on the other side of the continent. No icebergs come out thru Behrings strait as they do into the Atlantic, and that does not indicate an outward flow. The warm current enters the Arctic from the Atlantic as an under stream, but in the Pacific it enters as a surface current, which justifies the impression that there is no return of any consequence by the strait.

A cold current from north, however, lines the shores of Eastern Asia to make a fish pond for the people there too; same as in almost every other country.

UNDER CURRENTS.

In the Atlantic where many experiments and researches have been made into the depths of the sea, under currents have been found running in varying directions as independently as the Prohibitory party's ballots at the polls. Sometimes a large piece of wood has been weighted and sunk from a boat to a depth of 600 to 1200 feet in the sea, and then suspended to a small buoy on the surface; when the buoy would immediately run off against the wind at a rate of one or two miles an hour, dragged by the under current in which the wood was sunk.

In taking soundings before the year 1858 to find the depth of the ocean, they had to use small but very strong twine on a large reel with which a canon ball was sunk. At every 50 and 100 fathoms it was marked, and the ball was let go from a boat which was kept with the oars right over the ball while it descended; every 100 fathoms, was carefully timed by a watch as it ran out: but there was always a very great uncertainty as to when the ball reached the bottom; for there were so many or such strong under currents that the twine kept running out and pulling just as hard after the ball reached the bottom, as before apparently, but the time by the watch was something of a guide. The twine always broke as soon as they attempted to haul it in; altho it was strong enough to support a weight of 150 pounds. It broke as readily after six or seven miles were out as it did before the ball reached the bottom, and it very often broke before the ball was half way to the bottom, pulled in various directions and conflicting currents, as was very evident. Since that time a plan of sounding has been invented by Lieut. Brooks, which lets the ball drop as soon as it strikes bottom, and a little tube is pulled up again with specimens of the bottom from great depths, the greatest being about five miles. At that depth the pressure of water is over six tons on every square inch, which would pinch pretty hard and compress anything soft into a small compass.

TO SUPERINTENDENTS OF BANDS OF HOPE AND OTHER TEACHERS.

Miss Julia Colman who has done so much for temperance instruction for the young is writing for the RESCUE a series of papers on temperance schools and modes of instruction. As the RESCUE goes to all the Superintendents it is hoped they will give their particular attention to these letters and gather from them whatever may be of value to our instructors of youth. Let us avail ourselves fully of every hint and method from abroad and endeavor to keep in the foremost rank, in this most important matter.

And lest you may have failed to note Bro Goulds letter in the last number it is here repeated.

BAND OF HOPE RITUALS.

It was recommended at the last session of our Grand Lodge that a Committee be appointed "to supervise the compilation of Band of Hope Rituals." The matter was left in the hands of the Executive Committee, who, at their second meeting thereafter, appointed P. G. W. C. T's. Gould, Wood, Haswell, Miss Julia Coleman, and the Gen. Sup't. of Juvenile Work, then Mrs. Emily P. Stevens, a Committee "to Revise and Report a New Ritual for Band of Hope in this Jurisdiction, and present their report to the next Session of the Grand Lodge." This is a very important matter, worthy of the best thought our Order can command. And the Committee earnestly invite all who desire to aid in correctly educating the youth of our land to assist them in preparing a Ritual in every way adapted to the work and worthy of the cause. The Committee, through their chairman, desire to extend to all friends of temperance the following invitation:

To Superintendents of Bands of Hope:

Permit us to ask your aid in revising the Ritual of our Band of Hope. It is desired that the Ritual shall be the best that it is possible to obtain and fully adapted to the use intended. Your experience qualifies you to make the most practical and valuable suggestions as to form, style and matter of ritual; hence we earnestly urge you to give this matter your careful and immediate attention, so that it may be fully considered by our Committee and properly prepared and reported to the next Session of our Grand Lodge. Please take a copy of the present Ritual and write on the margin of each page such changes as you may desire, or attach a new page, or re-write any portion or all of the same, as you may think best, and thus amended and revised, send it to the Chairman of our Committee at your earliest convenience.

Yours in Faith, Hope and Charity,

WILL. D. GOULD,
Chairman of Committee.

ABOUT THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS.

In the year 1820 some American Missionaries were sent for the first time to Honolulu from Boston. Their labors with those of others who followed them have resulted in reclaiming the whole group of islands from a very degrading type of heathenism, and making them a center of missionary effort for the evangelization of the thousands of other Pacific Islands.

For many years the Hawaiian churches have not only been self-supporting but they have educated and equipped great numbers of native teachers and sent them far and near to the various island groups of the Pacific and have lately established a Christian Mission in Japan. In Hawaii every Kanaka is taught to read and write and a large proportion of them are members of the Christian Churches.

In 1826 the American Board of Missions sent a little craft called the Missionary Packet from Boston to Honolulu round Cape Horn of course. The vessel was 49 feet long and 13 feet wide and measured a fraction less than 40 tons: she was built to carry missionaries from island to island and to visit them and supply their wants. She anchored 30 times in 20 ports on the way and had a passage of nine months: was commanded by Capt. Hunnewell, who had been mate of the "Thaddeus" which carried the first missionaries to Honolulu.

It seemed a lucky voyage for that Captain: he received the little freight money on the cargo for his pay and set up in business, prospered and finally retired to live in his old home in Mass. He presented $5000 to the Oahu college and $2000 to the Sailor's Home in Honolulu and educated a native preacher to work in the Marquesas Islands &c &c.

Those Missionaries have done a very grand and noble work and their monuments will survive among those of the most eminently useful benefactors of mankind in all ages. They have manifested unusual care in the education and training of their own families and the present descendants of the missionaries and of the whites who were their associates and friends and sympathizers, that is the actively christian population, are the only Anglo-Saxon people or people of European descent that have not degenerated physically or morally, thru transportation to a tropical climate. They have maintained their physical and mental stamina and many of them hold in other countries responsible positions of trust and are highly esteemed for their capacity and temperance and for the good principle they have carried with them from their early home.

The missionaries have always had a gigantic and Satanic opposition to contend with, which has been their persistent enemy and perhaps has prevented them from accomplishing a ten times greater result of good than they have succeeded in. Almost a ll uncivilized people, like our own, easily learn to love the intoxication produced by strong drink, and the uncivilized and ignorant see no reason for restraining themselves in their appetite for that intoxication.

As soon as the missionaries settled anywhere, the rumseller and the devil have always immediately followed and built their little place of business, where they two lived together and ate together and slept locked in each others arms. The American missionaries have always used their influence with the kings and chiefs to induce them to prohibit the sale of liquor, but have been unable to do more than put a high licence upon saloons, and prohibit the sale to natives, a law which of course no saloonkeeper would obey a minute.

It is a question however, after all the opposition made by the enemies of mankind to the establishment of christianity in Hawaii, if religion and morality and honesty and education do not make a better showing there than in any civilized country or State where the sale of liquor is permitted. The Hawaiians are friendly to the Americans and they ought to be, for the good that has been wrot among them, and they probably forgive us for the Boston rum and San Francisco poison whisky that has been sent among them, and which has produced such havoc. We should entertain a very kindly feeling for our island neighbors and take every opportunity of an interchange of the kindliest relations with them.

OUR FIRST TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.—NO. 4.

OUR PRIZES.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

One of the devices we went into quite early in the history of our temperance school was that of rewards or prizes. There was no contention or jealous emulation about the matter, for we offered a reward to every one who would commit the entire catechism to memory, bear a good examination in it, recite it from beginning to end without any mistakes. We wished them to remember it through life, not only so as to understand the subject, but to have an answer ready for the objector and for those who wished to know the truth.

The prize was to be a temperance book, a story if they preferred, and we showed them several from which they would be permitted to take their choice, such as "Jug-or-not," "The Best Fellow in the World," The Jeweled Serpent," really valuable books, costing each one dollar or more. We also made them understand that if they would succeed in learning the catechism thoroly enough to do this, they must keep it reviewed as they went along; so it soon became an important part of every recitation keep up the review. Occasionally there would not be time enough in the school, and the teacher would appoint some other hour then for a private recitation. Much of the success of this arrangement depended upon the teachers and they took it up with interest. Sometimes when I have proposed this method for other schools the objection has been made that the recitations would be dry and uninteresting where each scholar recited individually, but in practice we never found it so. The main point of excellence was to recite perfectly, and the scholars soon finding the difficulty of that, were eager to see if others were more or less successful than themselves, and they listened to the individual recitations with as much interest as the teacher herself.

Beside these prizes we held out the incentive of graduation and promotion. When the catechism was thoroly learned, the learner might enter the "high-school" class and take a higher text-book—"Story On Alcohol." That was the best we could do then; now such scholars go into Richardson's "Lesson Book" or "Alcohol and Hygiene." This reminds me that we did have some variety in our prizes. As these graduates would need a text book, and we went on the principle of each one supplying themselves, those who chose were permitted to take "Story On Alcohol," for their prize if they lied. Several availed themselves of this privilege, and we added to it the steel engraving "The Old Oaken Bucket," which we happened to have. But story books were generally preferred. In some communities and with smaller scholars less expensive books would do. Carswell's Sketches, and "A Pitcher Of Cool Water," are two books much used for this purpose. But we thought a good temperance book placed in the family would be a good investment, and we did not change our minds after trying it, Please observe we did not give the children their choice out of the catalogue; we made a selection, and allowed them to choose within this limit. If any chose duplicates they could be suited if they were willing to wait till they could be procured.

The examinations were very kind but very thoro, when the teacher announced that the candidate was ready, an early day was fixed for a call upon the superintendent alone. If the scholar preferred. The recitations might fairly be called perfect. Scarcely any word of importance was missed and the satisfaction was mutual. I never saw scholars more proud of proficiency in any science. They were equally eager to understand what was learned. This was constantly shown in the superintendents review from the desk.

It will be readily seen that this did not keep the scholars together in their private recitations. But the public lesson was uniform, those who had not studied up to it, using the book in the responses, and having the way made easier for them, while those who had gone farther were proud to show their proficiency by reciting without the book. The superintendent also used the same discretion which any teacher might in giving out the lesson. The lesson as given in the manual can be divided or repeated, or reviewed. It is not an iron rule, but intended to be very flexible.

One great advantage of this method is that new scholars can be admitted at any time, they can begin to memorize at the commencement, and then opening their books further on join in the review and listen to the explanations, and if many new ones come in as they ought in every healthy well regulated school, they can after going through once, turn back and go over the same ground precisely as they do year by year in the different departments at school, the scholars who graduate going into higher classes.

I recollect one bright girl of fourteen spending a few weeks in the neighborhood of this our first temperance school, who was eager to attend and reap all its benefits. She kept her teacher busy hearing her recitations, she attended to the superintendent's lecture with the greatest assiduity, she kept her lessons reviewed; and at last, after about five weeks, she recited the whole with perfect accuracy, and carried off her prize in triumph without causing any inconvenience to the school, only that she was not able to receive her prize with the other scholars.

This giving out the prizes in public was quite an advantage to the school. It formed a brief episode in the public exercises we had once a month, and it not only recognized the individual diligence of the successful scholar, but it gave us an opportunity of displaying our methods to the parents and friends, and it was always followed by an accession of new scholars.

AN OLD SAW.

A dear little maid came skipping out
In the glad new day with a merry shout,
With dancing feet and with flying hair
She sang with joy on the morning air.

"Don't sing before breakfast; you'll cry before night!"
What a croak to darken the child's delight!
And the stupid old nurse again and again,
Repeated the ancient, dull refrain.

The child paused, trying to understand;
But the child saw the great world rainbow spanned:
Her light little feet hardly touched the earth
And her soul brimmed over with innocent mirth.

"Never mind—don't listen—sweet little maid!
Make sure of your morning song," I said.
"And if pain must meet you, why all the more
Be glad of the rapture that came before.

"O, tears and sorrow are plenty enough,
Storms may be bitter and paths be rough,
But our tears should fall like the dear Earth's showers
That help to ripen the fruits and flowers.

"So gladden the day with your blissful song,
Sing on while you may, dear, sweet and strong;
Make sure of your moment of pure delight,
No matter what trials may come before night."

LOSSES.

Loss of money follows drinking.
Loss of time brings bitter thinking;
Loss of business follows these,
Loss of strength and loss of ease;
Loss of health, respect and love,
Loss of hope and heaven above,
Loss of friends who once admired,
Loss of mind by frenzy fired;
Loss of usefulness, alas!
Loss of life's goal for the glass!
Loss of life and loss of soul
Crown his loss who loves the bowl.

SAMON FISHERIES OV ASTORIA.

My Dear Juvenile Frends: When I was a little boy at skool I used to se Astoria marked az a fort on the map near the mouth ov the Columbia and wondered what kood be the use ov a fort in that far of wilderness upon the unknown Pacific shore. There was then not a house on the sandhills or swamps where the proud city ov San Francisco now stands, and perhaps not a rezident white person in al California. I soon lerned however that Fort Astoria was the hedquarters ov the Pacific Fur Company, and named for John Jacob Astor ov New York, the leading man in that great enterprize. The company employed hundreds ov hardy daring men tu hunt and trap al over the vast mounten wilds ov the Columbia, Missouri and Yellowstone, and the furs were gathered to Fort Astoria, wher ships kood kum and take them to al parts wher tha wer wanted. The supplies of food, clothing and other necessaries for the trappers wer brot by ship to Astoria and taken by boats and pak mules tu al the kamps in the mountens. Fort Astoria was founded in the year 1809, four years after Lewis and Clark spent the winter at Fort Clatsop on the bank ov the river which bears their names. Fort Astoria was taken by the British in the war of 1812, and given up agen at the kloze ov the war. Astoria was little more than a site and name til a fu years ago, but has sprung up tu a posishun ov importance and iz rapidly groing tu rank with the great seport cities ov the world. Sum ov mi youthful readers wil not hav ended ther skool days before San Francisco and Astoria wil stand on ther maps az the rival great cities ov the Pacific cost ov America. The biznes streets ov this new city ar bilt on piles as San Francisco was; and ther ar plenty ov hils near by to fil in with. These stilted bizines streets extend along the river sum thre miles, while the rezidences ar bilt on the hils Ther ar no roads leading into the country. The fu country peple in the vicinity liv near the many rivers, and think boats cheaper than wagons, while the sails eat no ha and oats.

Now I hav given yu a breef deskripshun ov Astoria, the center ov the Columbia samon fisheries, and in my next I wil giv yu an akount ov the fisheries—the hundreds ov boats, how the fish ar kaut and kanned and the great dangers tu which the fishermen ar expozed. And yu think I hav dun sum "awful bad" speling in this letter; but look if I hav not saved the riting ov many letters, and realy speled the words better than the old wa which the speling reform is hapily bringing into disuse.

In this letter however I fear that I have induljed a little beyond the present limits ov the reform, but if Capt, Wood wil pardon me, and giv us agen the rules that have been adopted for the gidance ov this much neded improvment, I hope we "reform" fokes wil adhere strictly tu them in al our riting. THE BOYS AND GIRLS OF IOWA.

BY MRS. J. ELLEN FOSTER.

I want to tell the boys and girls of our Band of Hope about our little soldiers at Exira. I was on my way hither by invitation of the W. C. T. U. I was very tired for I had a very hard week of it; having ridden one day fifteen miles in a lumber wagon, to get around the water of the Missouri flood. I had been taking a little nap on the shoulder of a kind woman who sat with me, when as the train pulled up to the depot, I heard first of all, the voice of the dear children singing "Hold the Fort," and then the band struck up and the banners waved and the ribbons fluttered, and altogether it was a joyous time. It seemed to me I never saw brighter faces nor heard sweeter voices, and best of all they were our little soldiers pledged to fight old King Alcohol. They marched up town, stopping before a saloon and singing "My drink is water bright water bright," and I guess the saloon folks knew these boys and girls were determined to oppose their business, for the reason that it oppresses the homes of so many boys and girls. I've been in many great meetings the last few months and seen a great many fine people, but no welcome has so touched my heart as the one from these precious children that Mrs. Goode had organized into that Band of Hope. And I know too there are many hundred such in this good State of Iowa, and I am sure they give us good help in our amendment campaign. It seems to me if at every polling place a band of children could stand and sing, it would be very hard for any man to vote wrong. God bless and save the boys and girls of Iowa.—Prohibitionist,

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

JEROBOAM THE SON OF NEBAT.

The history of Jeroboam as detailed in the Bible is as perfect a picture of the human nature of our day, as the fossil bone or tree or plant that is exhumed from the book of geology is of its modern living type. And the history of a good many of his successors is as faithfully repeated in the conduct of great numbers of modern leaders who should profit by the scripture lesson, but do not.

Jeroboam, according to the word of the prophet delivered to him in his youth, became King; but in the most direct contravention of the solemn warning of the prophet given at the same time, he left the service of the true God and for political reasons, (similar to that of securing the German vote,) he set up two golden calves, one in Bethel and the other in Dan to prevent the people from going to worship at Jerusalem where there are another King.

It is always recorded afterward when his name is mentioned, that he "made Israel to sin," and the records of a number of the best men among his successors state that altho they had been splendid fellows in all other respects "they departed not from the sin of Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, who made Israel to sin."

Now altho it was a blasphemous and sacrilegious sin to set up those calves and to tolerate their existence and worship afterward, we are nowhere told that the consequences of worshiping those idols were very dreadful, beyond making the people forget the true God. But that was bad enough. The calves did not teach a day school and a night school and a Sunday school of blasphemy and obscenity and brutality and gambling and theft and murder.

It is nowhere mentioned that after worshiping the golden calves, a man ever dashed his baby thru an upstair window, took the axe to his wife, stamped his mother to death, or became savagely vicious.

Yet the summing up fact of the life history of several worthy Kings was, that they departed not from this sin, or they removed it not. For this crime Jeroboam was told that the last of his family should be cut off from the earth. And if the sin of the maintenance and countenance of the worship of those silent innocent calf images was so enormous, how shall we estimate the wickedness of countenancing and voting for the worship of 250 thousand active open howling blaspheming temples of Hell, cursing God day and night and sacrificing nearly 300 human victims every day, by the most cruel and barbarous death ever inflicted upon men?

Now there were no doubt the usual variety of daily sins among the Israelites, but this appears to have been the entering wedge which led men to sin, and the sin of idolatry was singled out beyond all others for constant reproof and denunciation; not at all because it was the wickedest thing that men could be guilty of, but because it was the open door that led to all other sin.

Civilized men have most of them got beyond the ignorance of worshiping golden calves and snakes and Baals, but the setting up of a grogshop is a thousand times greater outrage and defiance of the living God than the worship of any graven or golden image was, and yet we are called fanatics for trying to save our country from being utterly engulfed in the horrible pit of filthy debauchery which is all around us.

We are told a hundred reasons why we ought to do something else than attack this seat of the beast. Men who profess to love and serve God, have fifty other things to attend to, which prevent their taking any part in this warfare. Men are talking of converting the world without raising a finger against this throne of iniquity. Men have occupations and callings which really prevent them coming to the help of the Lord and his people. But if there is a history for us to earn, the saddest one it would seem will be, that with the clearest light, "he departed not from the sins of Jeroboam who made Israel to sin."

ANOTHER GOOD TEMPLARS ORPHANAGE.

The seceded Good Templars of England have purchased a building with three acres of land at Sunbury (London) for $10.000 to cost about $12.500 when in order. It has present accommodations for 60 children and of course can be enlarged to any extent. The Order contributed during the year over $4500 to the building and furnishing fund. Inmates of last year 32 orphans well cared for and in good health; two of them drew two of the six first class prizes won by the Juvenile Temples of the whole country. They had a building previously, but sold it to get a more satisfactory location, and to avoid some litigation possibilities. The expenses of the Home the past year have been about $5.200. The institution seems to meet general favor and no doubt is the nucleus of a very extensive one, altho it appears as yet to be confined to the children of Good Templars.

Our English brethren are to be commended for the progress they have made in this direction, and the Good Templars of California, who have contributed generously to make our Home a success, may take comfort from the fact, that their tender care for the orphans of this State has set in motion a similar charitable interest in England and let us hope in other places yet to be heard from.

O. Home, May 27, 1881.

Editor Rescue:—I hereby acknowledge the receipt of 125 picture Lesson papers from R. H. Mc Donald, President of Pacific bank, San Francisco for which our thanks are tendered. The new school house is nearly completed on the second floor; we hold our closing school exercises to-day in this building which is to be dedicated to the purposes for which it has been erected at an early date. We are enjoying good health thruout the Home.

ENGLAND.

The Grand Lodge of England (seceded branch) has just held its annual session and shows a good condition, chiefly in the fact that the order is beginning very seriously to find out and face and correct the causes of declension. They have about 90,000 members but have lost rather more than they gained last year.

This the committee on good of the Order attributes to 12 prominent causes, most of which are specific variations of the words "negligence" and "laxity". No 4 is "injudicious selection of officers and selection of injudicious officers". No 6, Failure to visit absentees &c. No 7, defective initiation. No 8 "Frivolous and sensational amusements, which tend to demoralize our members and unfit them for work, while they also give offence to many of our most earnest workers." Too much entertainment of a kind which ought to be announced in the opening ceremony thus, "we are all here for recreation, let us have it, and so injure our common cause and dishonor our Order." No "9, an unwise readines, to take offence". No 11, is "foolish and wretched squabbling on points of Order and undue straining of the constitution.

The committee recommends positive action in various specified directions to remedy these evils; No 6 is constant effort to improve the tone and elevate the character of our lodge meetings. No 7 the circulation of their paper, the Watchword; a copy to be given to every member on initiation. No 8, aggressive action by means of,

Frequent open air meetings,
Sabbath evening meetings after Divine service.
Temperance campmeetings.
House to house visit withs tracts &c.
Circulation of temperance literature.
Temperance sermons.
Reunion gatherings.
Meetings for inebriates.

Employment of an agent for the district either permanently or for short periods, as possible.

In the juvenile work they commend, a temple in connection with every lodge. Good templars should cheerfully assist the superintendent and lighten that officer's labor. Make the temples bright and pleasant and the exercises educational and profitable, so that the members may be qualified to become useful working members of a lodge at proper age.

They tell the members that self help is the best, tho help from Grand officers &c is valuable: it is better to walk, even slowly, than to go fast with the help of crutches: and finally commend "united temperance prayer meetings where practicable for help from Him that is mighty, thru whose favor alone our Order can grow till it covers and blesses the whole land".

That committee made a very sensible report; its recommendations are quite as well suited to the latitude of California as of England and are commended to the consideration of our membership.

THE PACIFIC BUSINESS COLLEGE.

This is one of the most useful institutions on the coast, for the young Californian who aspires to any future mercantile employment that requires a knowledge of accounts and commercial routine. Here in a short time and at a moderate expense the inexperienced youth may be prepared to fill a situation of responsibility and enter upon an active commercial life, with a clerical competency that could not be acquired in years of haphazard experience. A few months study in this commercial school under its experienced teachers has enabled many a youth to step into a remunerative employment.

It offers equal opportunities to male and female and is commended to the readers of this paper. A commercial education is a grand thing for the farmer, mechanic and everybody to have even if they have no intention of pursuing a mercantile life.

REPORT OF SECRETARY OF SONOMA DISTRICT LODGE AT SEBASTOPOL.

Officers and members, I have the the honor to submit for your consideration the first official written report ever presented by a secretary of this District Lodge. None here are more sensible of its imperfections than myself, but its incompleteness is mainly due to the want of correct sources of information.

STATE OF THE ORDER.

It is impossible for me to give you any report concerning the numerical strength of the Order in this district, not being in possession of any statistical data whatever. General information, however enables me to say that in my opinion it is, considering the circumstances, in a condition as prosperous as could reasonably be expected. There seems to be a sentiment with many that not only is there more earnest work needed in order that subordinate lodges may be built up and sustained, but also a determination to prosecute that work more vigorously than ever before.

NEW LODGES.

At the time of our last annual meeting, the lodges in this district numbered thirteen. Redwood Lodge, No. 353 and Dauntless Lodge, No. 375, having been organized a short time previous, the former by C. B. Proctor and the latter by Rev. F. J. Culver. Since then six new lodges have been organized in this district, viz.

Dashing Wave, No. 143 Horicon, No. 146 and Evergreen, No. 147 by Wm. Crowhurst and Forestvillie No. 176, Fulton No. 274 and Azalia No. —— by F. J. Culver, D. D. Of these Dashing Wave No, 143, seems to have already ceased to exist, thus making our present number eighteen. The remainder are still in working order so far as I am informed, tho Evergreen Lodge No. 147 gives evidences that its life will be short unless it receives assistance from some source.

And just here permit me to suggest that this district lodge should consider seriously whether the present system of Grand Lecturing is at all adapted to the work of keeping our lodges in good working condition. Consider the circumstances and condition of two of the lodges hereinbefore mentioned: Dashing Wave Lodge, No. 143 which died ere it had sent a single report to the G, W, S., and Evergreen Lodge, No. 147 which has made but one report, and if left to itself, in all probability will never make another.

Now ask yourselves whether the present condition of those two lodges may not be attributed mainly to the want of proper care. I dare venture the assertion that the brother who instituted those lodges has not paid them a single visit since completing their organization. In all probability he could not do so. Having completed the tour of the coast, he was doubtless immediately sent elsewhere. Hence you can easily perceive that the Grand Lodge has provided no adequate means for sustaining our lodges, and keeping them in good working condition.

That being the case it may be permitted to ask whether we have the means within ourselves to prosecute this important work. If not, let us acquire them as soon as may be, and then rally to the support of our subordinates. In my opinion, if the proper efforts could be made, you would ere long see the lodges of this district in a condition of prosperity never before known. As an organizing officer our present cannot be too highly commended. He seems to be the right man in the right place. Should he conclude not to remain with us, our cause in this district will have lost one of its most efficient supporters. I am glad to be able to inform you that the Executive Committee of the Grand Lodge have been induced to recognize his abilities by appointing him as special lecturer for this and adjacent counties.

DISTRICT SECRETARY.

The character of this office seems to be changing. The District Lodge is manifesting a desire and determination to engage more actively and aggressively in the temperance work, and proportionately the office of Secretary is becoming a laborious one, and is no longer simply an honorary position with little to be done.

In view of all this—the writing—the reports, the returns of lodges which ought to be tabulated in a book provided for that purpose, and other duties not mentioned, it becomes imperatively necessary that one holding the office shall attend every session of this District Lodge.

To make this the more certain, I recommend that hereafter, beginning with my successor, the District Secretary be allowed his expenses in attending each session; to be paid out of the District Treasury.

DISTRICT RETURNS.

At the last session I was instructed to prepare a Postal card form for District quarterly returns. After carefully considering the matter, I came to the conclusion that a Postal card is too small to contain the necessary data. I also consulted the G. W. S, who gave me a similar opinion. Accordingly I have prepared a form to be printed on paper. I have also prepared a Postal card form but, in my opinion, it is too brief and so cannot recommend its adoption.

In conclusion, I would recommend a careful considerationof the code of By-laws to be presently submitted: and would suggest that the document be not disposed of hastily, for it contains matter of much importance; and which should not be lightly passed over. H. H. PECKINPAH, Dist Sec.

WHERE IS OUR HELP?

"The Good Templars are not doing anything; the church is the place for solid work." This was the reply to a Good Templar's soliçitation of his Christian friend to join our Order, and this is the plea of many a Christian: "The church is the temperance society, and we cannot work outside the church;" and the effort made by others to drive the means of intemperance from our land is not to be considered solid work. In conversation with a liquor dealer, prominent in this city and a church attendant, he said: "If the Christian ministers and Christian papers should handle the traffic as does the RESCUE, without gloves, the liquor business would be doomed; but such a revival as has just been held here don't seriously affect our business; a few reformed drunkards wont break us up." Now he said "if the churches took hold of this work and joined in with the Good Templars, or if the Templars had the numbers that the Protestant churches have, they would put down the traffic in strong drink; but the churches do not heartily co-operate with you; they use fermented wine in the sacrament; many of them drink wine. I have partaken of the social glass in many homes of professing Christians. I understand the whole thing; we liquor dealers contribute to the churches. Some one sent me the RESCUE; I have read it," and laughing he said, "it has stirred my conscience, I will ease it by giving fifty dollars to the Y. M. C. A." "Then you have faith in Good Templarism," I said. "Well," said he, I am sharp enough to see that an organized body of people with financial strength could succeed when they were banded together for a common purpose, if they had a large army. They have beaten us in Kansas; but we think we are safe until you get this big army. Now if your RESCUE had fifty thousand subscribers you might educate the people; but you have not those subscribers. The religious papers fling their slighting remarks at your lecturers and your Order. I read not long since an article on secret societies, and the injury they were doing; this was a religious paper. 'Well,' I said, 'the early Christian chnrch always worshipped in secret; they were afraid of their enemies.' "Yes I know that," he said, "your Order is wise, you have effectually barred out the drunkard maker, your closed door is your element of strength. But the religious people will fight you on that. That is not the real reason, however; they dont intend to give up the wine, and we have the church on our side as long as fermented wine is a part of their most sacred things." I said "you talk in favor of this then?" "Oh. no I dont," he replied, but I know what making an honest effort is. I admire the energy and pluck of your RESCUE. You have brains back of that paper, but your work is unpopular. It is more fashionable to be a professor of religion and not be a Good Templar than to be a professing Christian and a Good Templar."

Thoughtfully, sadly I turned away. Is he right? Is it possible that this shall be our stumbling block? Is there more than one Dr. Crosby? Is the traffic seemingly resting because they think the church will not come and help us? When our cause is a little stronger perhaps the traffic will not rest because the churches rest, for then the churches will blush to think that they ever disowned the Bible by daring to say that our Savior made any fermented wine. When will our Order awake to the fact that our strength is in the wide circulation of the productions of the temperance press. Put me down for another subscription and send the paper to ——. If one liquor dealer can be led to acknowledge that we have brains and pluck by reading our RESCUE, then another can be converted. Let us agitate, sow temperance seed, and by and by the indifference will be in the minority.

A chance for agents, some of our elder juveniles could come in for an effort to dispose of a few copies of it.

IT is a belief in the Bible, the fruits of deep meditation, which has served me as the guide of my moral and literary life. I have found it a capital safely invested and righly productive of interest.—Goethe.

SOUTH AMERICAN EXPERIENCES.

THREE.

Something over 16 years ago one Louis O'Connor found himself in Barbacoas. He had come from New York where he left a wife, and lived some time in California where he left another: so report said, He leased a mine called the Cargazon, about ten miles from Barbacoas: the proceeds to be equally divided between the owner and himself. He struck two bonanzas and people say he took out $600,000 of gold dust, finding two lucky deposits. Perhaps the amount was exaggerated. The broken appearpearance of the country, the humid atmosphere, the rapid and dense vegetation, the complexion, color, manners, religious creed and social habits of the people all combine to give one the impression that possibly the truth might get slightly trifled with, on an emergency like a find of $600,000. of gold.

Mr. O'Connor was at once seized with a sudden fear of being robbed and with utmost haste prepared for leaving the country. He had a body guard of faithful negroes watching over him night and day, when there was no danger whatever: and left by first steamer, always in terror of a possible thief or murderer or both dogging his tracks. History says that he reached New York a sick man and died on the night of his arrival or in a day or two after, leaving most of his money to wife No 1.

The mine owner, Mr. Pastor Castilla, found $300,000 altogether too much money to stay in Barbacoas with. Lima the capital of Peru is or rather was the Paris of that country, the place where one could gratify a taste for style and magnificence, and display wealth to good advantage. Thither he removed with his family and money. He found it all his fancy painted it and more: he gratified his taste for the fine art of faro and some other financial amusements in which the writer's education has been so miserably neglected that he can give not the least description or outline of them. But Don Pastor could enjoy that kind of thing and he did for just 12 months, and then he borrowed enough money to get back to his old thatch in Barbacoas. His residence abroad had been a complete success: all his ambition had been gratified and more so.

A RUSH.

But the news of this great find of O'Connor's took down such a crowd of adventurers in 1866 to look for bonanzas, that the people there always speak of it as "the immigration" ever since. About 600 miners went there then, chiefly from California. But they did not find any bonanzas. Perhaps half a dozen of them got $1000 to $5000, but if they did, they all lost it but one or two soon after. Many of them sickened, some died and most of the survivors all but half a dozen or so were conveyed home at government expense. But it has always been a current belief that there is another bonanza lying round there somewhere, and every year somebody drops in to take a look at the country.

The chronicles say that O'Connor's wife No. 2,the California one, went down to Colombia to call and see Lou one day. Arrived at his mining camp she found he was not at home. Her curiosity led her to pry into things a little, and coming across a package of 60 pounds of gold dust and not liking the general appearance of the dwelling, she did not wait till Lou came back, but left as soon as possible: on arrival at Tumaco she found that somehow that package of gold dust had got mixed up with her baggage, and she embarked on the first homeward steamer with her ambition and curiosity gratified. Lou had found a substitute for her and she had found a substitute for him.

MAIL FACILITIES.

The movements of the steamer are too uncertain for mail requirements in this part of the country. After the mail steamer has arrived in Tumaco and a reasonable time has elapsed, a canoe leaves with the mail and government dispatches for Barbacoas. The subsidy offered by the government to the river steamer of $28 a month to carry the mail was declined by the company on account of grave responsibilities in the event of her not starting in time. The government officials were punctilious about starting properly, but they would never have complained if the trip had occupied a week so the start was properly made. The steamer was laid up three or four months at the time of my arrival; there were some repairs that would have occupied 3 or 4 days in California.

The canoe makes a short cut, goes up inlets aud bayous, and we come to an isthmus of about three miles, where everything has to be packed over on men's backs to another canoe. Our canoe men knew everybody on the route, turned in one place and cooked or were invited to eat at their host's expense and always accepted the invitation religiously. At another they took their lodgings, and the whole company spread their beds and slept. There was no charge for anything.

The people are certainly very hospitable there; will receive generally whatever little coins are offered by strangers, but most of them would share what little they have to eat as cheerfully without pay as with it.

At the portage where our baggage was transported, one of our passengers, a native merchant, gave a box of $1000 in silver to a peon to carry over, and he started off alone with it over the trail thru the forest. My dear sir," said the stranger; "is it possible you entrust that package which everybody knows to be money out of your sight like that ? do you know that fellow ?" "No," said he; "I never saw that fellow before, but that box is perfectly safe; there is no danger whatever in that way in this country." And it was true. An employer can send a negro, man, woman, boy or girl any one of his neighborhood away 10 to 50 miles to take or bring $100 or a larger amount, in a sack or handkerchief, unsealed, and there is not any danger of a dime of it being stolen.

When our canoes (there were two of them in our fleet) approached a dwelling on the bank of the river Don Juan, the pilot would salute with powerful lungs, and his friend on shore would answer with the most perfectly regulated etiquette, about as follows: "Don Pedro, (good evening." Don Juan, good evening "how are you ?" "Beautiful." "How is Dona Antonia ?" "Beautiful." "How are the little misses?" "And all the family ?" "Beautiful; thanks muchly." Then the second in command would call on Don Pedro, ask exactly the same questions regarding the whole family in rotation, and elicit precisely the same answers. Then No. 3 would repeat the same process precisely when Don Pedro would open fire on Don Juan and ask how he was and his Dona Serafina and the little Miss Seraphinas etc.

There were rather too many of us to get round, for before the parties had gone thru their passage of etiquette, we had got out of hearing on most occasions. It is a pleasant thing to note that they are very respectful to each other. It does not incur any labor or cost to be courteous and polite and respectful in our intercourse with each other.

The S. F. Chronicle has come over and says:

"The French seem disposed to continue their senseless warfare on American pork, and are not very scrupulous in their modes of attack. It might not be to Johnny Carpaud's taste to initiate the same kind of warfare against French wines. If the Americans would ever start, they could without much difficulty produce abundant proof that the wines and brandies of La Belle France are prejudicial to health and ought to be rigorously excluded from our ports."

That has been abundantly proved time and time again, and it is the solemn conscientious opinion of every one except the densely ignorant. The wine and brandy makers and sellers and drinkers all know it to be true. And if such things should be rigorously excluded from our ports, much more should their manufacture be rigorously excluded from our homes and our state. But if we are going to have these things at all, it is far better to permit their importation by the gluttons and drunkards who desire them than to blot our country all over with drunkard and thief factories, the vilest plagues that ever cursed any civilization.

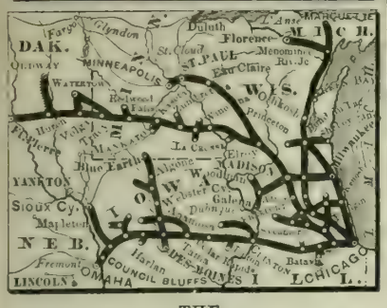
SOLANO DISTRICT LODGE.

Extracts from an address by the District Deputy. "We must not become discouraged. We are working for the good of the whisky seller and drinker. We are working for the good of their million suffering victims. Never in the history of the world were the cause and principles of temperance advancing as fast as to day. Kansas has made a clean sweep and forever banished whisky from church, state, rumhole and parlor. Six years ago Kansas had no such temperance sentiment as California has to day. Only six years ago he who now addresses you led five ladies from the Methodist church to the saloon of C. R. Jennison the most aristocratic rumhole in Kansas, to inaugurate the Womans Crusade, that recently culminated in constitutional prohibition.

Kansas was then worse cursed than California is now. Whisky sellers were then so sacred in the hearts of courts and juries, you could not convict them. In many cases where a whisky seller would be proven guilty by a dozen witnesses, the juries would not only say "not guilty" but would fine the prosecuting witnesses. Those defeats have turned out to be grand victories, and so it will in California. The prospects for prohibition are much brighter in California to day than they were five years ago. This nation cannot and will not exist cursed as it is by the liquor traffic. The temperance issue is breaking up the great political parties. The Democrats of Georgia, Texas, and Missouri join hands with the Republicans of Kansas, Iowa, and Minnesota, and vote for temperance. That big city of Cincinnati that brews lager enough every year to make the republican party get down on its knees to her lager beer Dutchmen, at her last election elected a democrat, only because he was an earnest temperance man, so it will be in the future. All that are good manly and honest in those parties are going to join hands under the temperance banner, and vote to rid this nation of its greatest curse —Then we will see a wide field and big fight, temperance, prosperity and happiness on one side, whisky makers, drinkers, their victims, sots, loafers, criminals and paupers on the other. All know who will gain the grand final victory. It is fast coming, the night is past,—

> It must be near the morning
> Of the day we've prayed to come;
> The day is surely dawning
> That will see the end of rum.
> You may hear the distant thunder,
> Can see the lightning play
> In the mighty storm that's coming
> To wash the curse away.

THE SORT OF A GIRL TO GET.



The true girl has to be sought for. She does not parade herself as shop goods. She is not fashionable. Generally, she is not rich. But, oh! what a heart she has when you find her! so large and pure and womanly. When you see it you wonder if those showy things outside were women. If you gain her love your two thousands are millions. She'll not ask you for a carriage, or a first class house. She'll keep everything neat and nice in your sky parlor, and give you such a welcome when you come home that you'll think the parlor higher than ever. She'll entertain true friends on a dollar, and astonish you with the new thought how little happiness depends on money. She'll make you love home (if you dont you're a brute.) and teach you how to pity, while you scorn, a poor fashionable society that thinks itself rich, and vainly tries to think itself happy.

Now do not, I pray you, say any more "I can't afford to marry." Go find a true woman, and you can. Throw away that cigar, burn up that switch cane, be sensible yourself, and seek your wife in a sensible way.—O. W. Holmes.

Sorry to differ with an authority like Dr. Holmes; but there are lots of young printers, clerks, mechanics &c, who know better because they have tried smoking, and they know that to pay ten cents five or six times a day for one cent's worth of one of the filthiest weeds, prepared by filthy hands, in the most filthy manner—and to curse themselves and their clothes an their surroundings and everybody they come near, with a vile odor that would make the most experienced and armor plated polecat howl and weep tears of bitterest disappointment—these are enjoyments a thousand times beyond the tame bliss of being the virtuous mate and equal companion of a good loving girl, a true woman, like your mother was. And besiede there is the ambition ahead of being a dirty ragged tramp some day and at the close of a glorious life, occupying the post of honor at an inquest. Go it while you are young, boys, and take the solid, honest, genuine, genteel comfort derived from imbibing tobacco juice.

PERIHELIA.—People who use that word and will air their experience in ancient languages ought to be cautious and be sure to select the right word when they put their hands or tongues into the grab-bag of clasical terms. Perihelion and phenomenon are singular and the plural is made by changing on into a. Many people speak too of the western termini of a road, one end is a terminus, but termini means both ends or any number of ends. The word per capita tax or cost per capita is an improper term but it has become right by use, it is literally by heads or each heads whereas it ought to have been singular, per caput.

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞ As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

$5 Outfit sent free to those who wish to engage in the most pleasant and profitable business known. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. $10 a day and upwards is easily made without staying away from home over night. No risk whatever. Many new workers wanted at once. Many are making fortunes at the business. Ladies make as much as men, and young boys and girls make great pay. No one who is willing to work fails to make more money every day than can be made in a week at any ordinary employment. Those who engage at once will find a short road to fortune. Address H. The publishers are life-long temperance and prohibition advocates, and Mr. Russel's name as editor is a sure promise as can be that the magazine will be inferior to none in ability. This is a publication much needed, is not the organ of any special society, but will reason mightily for the overthrow of the most desolating curse that ever infested the world and tormented mankind. Any one who has 15 cents ought to send and get a sample copy, and then subscribe regularly so as to do what is the duty and charge of of every individual, to keep this much-needed enterprise from going to the wall.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

When you call on any of these places please say you saw their Ad or card in the Rescue.

COL GOULDING has been actively at work in Cacherville, Blacks, Willows, Knights Landing &c and with good result,. A report of Bro. Winchester's of organization of Faithful Lodge at Blacks Station where he had lectured, is with much other matter crowded out: Bro. Gouldings labors are evidently bearing good fruit, but his reports are not at all voluminous.

Any one entitled to receive the RESCUE who does not receive it, or who knows of another who does not, please notify by postal-card. The utmost care is used to avoid any mistakes in mailing or addresses. It is expected every issue of the paper will be in the San Francisco post-office by one P. M. of Thursday, in future. If it fails to reach any place in due time it will not be the fault of this office.

Mr. John Arnoup is an accredited agent for the RESCUE and has to get 250 subscribers on this trip or stay away altogether.

HOLLAND is moving against drunkenness as all fools who drink have done heretofore by punishing the poor drunkard for not being able to carry his load, and by very slightly reducing the number of hell-pits.

MR. JOHN ARNOUP, is an authorized agent for the RESCUE to take subscriptions and advertizements, and the Good Templars of Mendocino county or elsewhere will find him an able helper in the cause he represents.

Attention is called to the advertisement of Crocker's Reversible Self-packing and Self-Cleansing Filter; James O. Garlick, 329 Market street, agent. It is without doubt the best ever invented, and should be used by every family on the coast.

EXTRA COPIES. This week five extra copies of the RESCUE are sent to each of the last sixty of the Lodge Deputies in the Directory. In the three weeks preceding, all the L. D's of the jurisdiction were furnished with five copies similarly, with a hope that they would distribute them to those likely to become subscribers: and at the same time to direct their attention to the Market Report and other advertizements.

IT IS A MOCKER.—Dr. Andrew Clark, an English physician of eminence, who has written of the terrible hereditary effects of alcoholic drinking, and has pronounced against prescribing liquors medically, confessed lately in a public temperance (?) speech that he could not resist the temptation himself "to take a little and then a little more." But he added that to take more than half a pint of beer, a glass of ordinary wine or a tablespoonful of spirit well diluted, is to pass to criminal indulgence." To take it how often he did not say. And that is one of the advanced men in England; that is, he is about 100 years ahead of the masses of churches and people there, and as far behind the really intelligent temperance reformers.

LEFT OUT. Because there is not room enough and because they come too late, there are some matters left out every week, that would otherwise appear. And because there is so much work on the RESCUE that must be done the last 24 hours before going to press, there are frequently items and matters left out inadvertently and accidentally, and in the hurry and bustle their nonappearance is not discovered till after the paper is out, and this happens without intention and sometimes to the serious annoyance of the Editor as well as of the other party interested: which ought to be some comfort to the latter when he feels disposed to think himself slighted. An announcement of the election of Bro. Katzenstein as R. W. G. T. prepared on Monday was thus overlooked by editor and foreman printer last week, till the former looked for it in the RESCUE printed. And that was about the last thing which would have been left out intentionally in that issue.

WIDE AWAKE.—Our friends Bros. Graves and Covillaud and Sutter and Yuba Dist. Lodge are keeping people alive on the temperance question. They have a nine inch advertisement in the Daily Appeal containing a list of the various lodges and the number of members, a short history of the Order and its purposes, of our Home for Orphans, terms of the Mutual Aid, the pledge, fees and dues, &c. Bro. Covillaud has a postal card with the lodge list and membership of the District printed upon it from which it appears there are 14 lodges and 676 members in the two counties, an increase in the past year of 4 lodges and 234 members. Every body will say that is an excellent method of keeping our cause before the public: if it is, the other District organizations had better try it too. It is safe to predict that Sutter and Yuba will next year make a much larger increase, if their literature committee does active duty: they ought to and can double their membership; they have much more than doubled their working power.

PACIFIC LODGE at Boulder Creek less than three months ago organized with 49 members, has grown to 90, has fitted up and furnished a nice hall and is prepared to purchase an organ and set up a reading room in good style.

AN ENGLISH paper has an advertisement for a journeyman baker a "teetotaler preferred: if not a teetotaler he must have three suits of clothes." That means that he must be a virtual total abstainer for even a moderate drinking workman dont have three suits there.

It is hoped this number of the RESCUE will be satisfactory and will be attentively perused. The sermon of Joseph Cook on page 509, the letter of Messrs Jones, Fitch and Robinson, reports of R. W. G. L. &c &c, everything but the editoriais, will be found interesting: the latter are only as usual.

THE proprietor of the "Bull's Head" a doggery in Birmingham has two gold watches on exhibition to be presented at Christmas to the best indoor and the best outdoor customer of his bar and second and third prizes of $2.50 and $1.25 are to be given to each class also. That is a very generous thing to do, for theden-keeper knows he oan get back watches and money for drinks in a week or two.

MR. ARNOUP.—Another lecturer goes out this week to fill the appointments advertized for Bro. Culver in Mendocino Co. Mr. John Arnoup of Oakland will perform that duty very pleasantly and satisfactorily to those who are fortunate enough to hear him: and he will make an active canvass for the RESCUE at the same time. He is commended to the kind attention of the friends of the cause.

ANOTHER good Rector in England commends in the Record that temperance should be taught every time with scripture lessons in the Sunday school. He says that at the meeting of teachers in Jerusalem chambers on Thursday he was sorry the feeling against total abstainers was somewhat bitter and they were put down as thinking themselves better than their neighbors on that account. That is the kind of people who make out the Sabbath school lessons for American children.

MR. GLADSTONE, the prime minister who is going to introduce a local option measure into the British Parliament, is first going to introduce a clause into the Revenue Bill, giving "license to sell intoxicating liquors and tobacco" (those are his words) in all railway passenger cars that desire the privilege. We can judge what a chance prohibition will get under a minister who calls beer the best drink in the world. Members of parliament and many other respectable people are clamorously opposed to Mr. Gladstone's movement. Some of the blackguard press commend it highly in anticipation of future deadhead soaks.

AN ENGLISH clergyman writes to the Temperance Record imploring the people all to work for a Sunday closing bill for England; he says: "Let us organize meetings in every city, town, village, etc., so that public opinion may be in favor of closing the public houses on the Lord's day. He concludes "Oh, that God would raise up a noble band of Wilberforces, Farrars, Goughs, and such men as Joseph Cook of Boston and R. T. Booth, and then, sir, we shall find at the end of the year, that public opinion would demand of parliament Sunday closing for England."

They have 30 or 40 thousand ministers in England and it is pertinent to ask of what earthly use have the great mass of them been, or any of them beyond a dozen or so, if it now needs the services of a band of men like American temperance advocates to turn the public opinion of England against making Sunday a special day for drunkenness, debauchery, blasphemy and violence. It is pleasant however, to record that the chairman of the Band of Hope says the attitude of the churches to the movement of Sunday closing is most hopeful!!

BUILDING ON THE SAND.

'Tis well to woo, 'tis well to wed,
For so the world hath done
Since myrtles grew and roses blew,
And morning brought the sun.
But have a care, ye young and fair,
Be sure ye pledge with truth;
Be certain that your love will wear
Beyond the days of youth!
For if you give not heart for heart,
As well as hand for hand,
You'll find you've played the unwise part,
And "built upon the sand."

'Tis well to save. 'tis well to have
A goodly store of gold,
And hold enough of shining stuff,
For charity is cold.
But place not all your hope and trust
In what the deep mine brings;
We can not live on yellow dust
Unmixed with purer things:
And he who piles up wealth alone
Will often have to stand
Beside his coffer chest, and own
Tis "built upon the sand."

'Tis good to speak in kindly guise,
And soothe where'er we can;
Fair speech should bind the human mind,
And love link man to man,
But stop not at the gentle words;
Let deeds with language dwell;
The one who pities starving birds
Should scatter crumbs as well;
The mercy that is warm and true,
Must lend a helping hand,
For those that talk yet fail to do,
But "build upon the sand."

ELIZA COOK.

CHRISTIANITY AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

BY REV R. E. JONES OF PETALUMA.

You ask me can a man be a Christian and indulge in the use of intoxicating drinks. I feel that you have imposed upon me a delicate and important task, when such men as Rev. Howard Crosby, D,D. LL. D., Rev. Washington Gladden in the Independent and Rev. Horace Burnstead in Bibliotheca S. intimate very strongly that a man cannot be a Christian if he is a total abstainer, or believes that intoxicating wine is injurious to the human constitution or that the use of it is condemned by the Bible.

I understand that they have several followers among ministers of less note and especially among dealers in intoxicating drinks and habitual topers. I know nothing about the private life of either of these gentlemen; therefore I do not class them among their army of followers who defend the drink because they like it. It is by no means a bad omen that some of the opponents of temperance should now and then write some bitter things, for it shows that their consciences are awakened if not convinced. There was a time when temperance men were expected to do all the apology and defence of their position; but for some years now, the drinkers feel that the burden of proof has fallen upon them.

About forty years ago or more, the Rev. Dr. Raffles of Liverpool presided over a ministers' meeting, and said, "Here is wine for you, gentlemen; but if there are any weak brethren here, we have provided water for them." Twenty years later the same gentleman in a similar circumstance said, "Brethren, I hope you will sympathize with a weak brother now getting old and requiring a little wine for his frequent infirmities." Thus in the first meeting those who did not drink wine were the weak brethren; but in the second, when temperance had become common, those who did drink wine were the weak brethren. The three gentlemen I have already named complain bitterly that any should dare assert that total abstinence from intoxicating drink is a Christian duty, and they have felt it imperative upon them to come forth as champions of what they deem the Christian liberty of moderate drinking. I am sorry that neither has given us the formula of a moderate dose of wine.

This seems to be absolutely necessary, For men differ very much as to what moderation is when left to measure for themselves. I remember a good deacon being accused of getting drunk. When he denied the charge I asked him how much he had drank. He replied, "We were two, and we only drank eight quarts of beer between us." I replied, "If you were not drunk you certainly ought to be, and should be expelled for over indulgence. The whole church concurred in my opinion, and he was expelled from office but not convinced that he had exceeded the bounds of moderation, I heard of another being charged with drunkenness, who when called to account began to weep bitterly. The minister asked him why did he weep. He replied, "I find that I am getting weak: I remember the time that I conld drink twenty-four quarts of beer with out being in the least affected; but now if I drink eighteen quarts I become shaky and they say I am drunk."

I presume our ministerial brethren would not allow such large doses. But why not tell us what is a proper Christian dose. It is no use leaving every professing Christian at liberty, for some, yea many of them by indulging often pass the bounds of propriety, and even sobriety. Some can bear but very little. I remember calling upon a friend who was confined to his bed by a severe cold. When I went in he was perfectly sober, but shortly afterward his good wife brought in a small glass full of gin or whisky and water to help him over his cold. In less than ten minutes he was a raving maniac, saying that he was ashamed of himself lying in bed when I had done him the honor of calling upon him. In spite of all I could do to pursuade him otherwise he persisted in dressing in honor of my visit. I suppose all defenders of drink would agree that twenty-four, eighteen or even four quarts is rather too large a dose for a Christian. I am a living witness that one glass was in one instance too much of a dose. Now then, how much is a safe Christian dose? which would neither imperil the brain nor generate an appetite for more or stronger in the future. Moderate drinkers cannot deny the fact that there are now millions of drunkards, dead or alive, who were once moderate drinkers, and that it is from the ranks of moderate drinkers all drunkards came. The conclusion, then seems to me very natural that moderate drinking leads to drunkenness, while total abstinence will not. Hence salvation is with total abstainers.

The experience of all ages since the days of Noah, proves that a moderate drinker is in danger of becoming an immoderate drinker. Therefore every moderate drinker puts himself in a way that is not good. Like Samson he goes in to Delilah and sleeps on her lap. He may escape once and again but he may also be caught.

Death is in the pot and it kills daily some one or more of the number that drink of its contents. Therefore my advice to you is, "Touch not, taste not handle not. Paul used the above words for another purpose, but I think they are very appropriate here. You know there is an herb in California called poisoned oak. They say that many can pass by and even handle that herb without being injured; still, since so many are injured by it, the best plan is for all to abstain from handling or even going near it if they can.

CINCHONA RUBRA.

The gentleman who under the signature of Cured sometime ago, wrote for the RESCUE a commendation of Cinchona Rubra sends an explanation of the mysterious features of his letter which were rather sarcastically alluded to by "Not Cured." There can be no doubt of his sincerity and truthfulness and no reason for doubting.

I am quite sure the appellation "Not Cured" is no misnomer for of a verity, did he really want to be cured, he would take some better and surer method of getting information about Cinchona Rubra than imputing to me the committal of a contemptible crime; for to have written my letter as an advertising dodge would have been contemptible and criminal. Just here let me say that at this writing, I am neither a student nor a "celebrated student." I am a very humble wood-chopper, eating no piece of bread that is not earned by my own two hands. I was a student of medicine when the civil war began, Four and one half years of army life obliterated nearly all of good within me. But, an exile from home, my life shortened as to its years, and deprived of the power fully to enjoy what is left me of time, by infernal whisky, precipitated from rather more than comparative wealth to the most positive poverty, there are still three ideas implanted early in my brain and still green and of vigorous growth, with roots imbedded in, and entwined around my heart, which have withstood the withering blast of twenty years dissipation; these are, my adoration for my Maker, my love for my mother, and my respect for the honorable profession of medicine. Judge then with what horror I hear myself accused of being a Quack.

It was no part of my duty, nor even my privilege to prescribe Cinchona Rubra (for the very essence of quackery is gratuitous prescription) I could only say truthfully what it has done for me, leaving those who really desired to be cured to enquire for, and use it, as I had done.

A single word about the remedy itself, which by some persons seems to have been declared a humbug. I believe a man may use it and afterwards return to the habit of drink; but I am morally sure that no man can, or will use whisky and Cinchona at the same time; and its virtue as a remedy consists in the fact that unlike opium in any shape, chloral hydrate, cannabis indica or extract of lettuce, its after affects are not deleterious. Of the other sedatives it may be truly said that the remedy is often worse than the disease; but Cinchona may be taken whenever (and it must be so taken to be useful) the thought "I wish I had a drink" comes to the unfortunate, and with never a tithe of intoxication, with nothing after an hour to remind the patient of his dose except the repugnance for whisky which is the very object sought. CURED.

Lompoc May 23rd 1881.

EDITOR RESCUE:—I am sorry that my letter speaking of what I have tried to do here, happened in the same issue as the Dist, Lodge resolutions asking that a resident Lecturer for this part of the state be appointed and mentioning my name as their choice. I have always approved of that resolution except the naming of myself. The motion was carried before my arrival and not reconsidered when I protested against that part of it. A lecturer who does not know the lay of the country, is unacquainted with prominent and active temperance workers, who has to depend on others to map out his route and assign him the length of his stay at each place and who learns the history and circumstances of the various localities when it is too late to be useful to him, is always under disadvantages. If he does not intend to travel over the same route again he cannot profit by errors committed or knowledge acquired. He cannot follow up the advantage gained as he could if able to leave an appointment for a not very remote return.

It seems if we could district the state and have Ward lecturers, to travel in each state as Methodist presiding elders do, more thoro and permanent work would be done. The present hurried visit of a stranger, unable to diverge as the circumstances might require or to stay an extra night or two, gives no time to look after, instruct and enthuse lodge, Band of Hope, Sunday school &c, to canvass for the RESCUE or take orders for standard temperance literature. A "circuit rider" could often take a little stock of temperance books, papers, pictorial and other tracts and sell and give away "colporteur fashion," a good number.

Our great present prospective strength lies in the country and the field should be systematically cultivated.

But enough on that, I was at Pine Grove Graciosa Sunday to lecture on temperance. This is where no grand lecturer has yet been, but I arranged for sister Stevens to go; eight months ago there were a great many very hard drinkers, but some of them and the school teacher, Capt Whitford, decided to make a strike for temperance, accordingly the "Pledge of Honor society" one after another joined in earnest and from principle, until it now numbers 90 members; indeed nearly every resident, except those too young, have joined.

What a happy change! all along the line the people are anxiously looking for sister Stevens, whose success is astonishing and glorious news has just come of 128 names gained at Ventura for the lodge.

How the faithful few who have stuck to their post there must rejoice. Fraternally J. W. WEBB.

A MEMBER of a most prosperous lodge writes "We shall in no wise relax our efforts in behalf of the RESCUE. It exerts too powerful an influence to be neglected. It seems to me that a temperance worker who never freshens his ideas, may be likened to a well with no running stream to keep it supplied. The ideas like the water will become stagnant. Would that all could be convinced of the urgent necessity of sustaining the RESCUE."

A preacher gets into trouble with his church for marrying a Catholic women, but for blaspheming and vilifying the Savior of the World we dont hear that Dr. Crosby is at all molested. The Champion of the Brewers, a denier of the Divinity of Christ, a D. D., a Chancellor of a University, President of a Moderation Society, and a minister of the gospel, are a little too many offices for one man to hold at once.

Mrs. Fannie Wood of Amador has sent in 15 subscribers. There are a good many others who could easily do the same.

DR. CROSBY AND THE SALOONS.

The Chicago Brewer in a recent issue re-published Rev. Dr. Crosby's "Calm View" with the following heading "Rev. Dr. Crosby's Great Sermon;" one millon copies to be circulated by brewers. Then after stating that it has stereotyped the sermon and can furnish unlimited copies adds to its patrons. "You can afford to circulate this sermon, its circulation is worth more to you than money in government bonds and will bear better interest." The spectacle is curious, Rev. Dr. Crosby as Prest. of the New York "Law and Order Society," doing his best to close saloons in New York, the keepers of which by his "calm view of temperance" as a choice investment admirably calculated to increase their patronage. By the fruits of a theory its character may best be known.

LOCAL OPTION.

EDITOR RESCUE:—For some time past the RESCUE has contained some very able articles in regard to local option and total prohibition. First comes the able and logical arguments of P. R. W. G. T. Hastings, then the sound reasoning of G. W. Fitch on the same side of the question. Both opposed local option as they think it will always fail to accomplish the desired result; and now the able special pleading of our honored G. W. C. T., Judge Thompson, is presented for our consideration.

I do not intend to enter at length into the description of this question, I will merely notice some points. In some respects local option appears fair; an appeal to the popular will that does not interfere in the least degree with old party ties is very likely to have a short lived popularity. People will say, it is right that the majority shall divide on questions, but will local option stand the test submitted by the judges? Is local option really practical? Does the history of local option movements show it to be what the people want and should demand? I think not. All know the history of local option in this state; it was very popular, and in a large majority of the places where the question was submitted to the people, the popular verdict was no license; but the supreme court decided the law to be unconstitutional. The popular feeling in favor of the law subsided immediately (as will always be the case where such questions are not kept before the people by party organization). The opponents of local option altho in the minority were victorious, and to illustrate how practical local option movements are, the people at a succeeding election led by the old political wire pullers, voted to again place on the supreme bench the very man who had been most prominent in setting at naught the popular will.

Judge Thompson is right in saying there are able and excellent men in the ranks of the National Prohibition party, and a leading paper in the East reluctantly admits that the Prohibition party is noted for the ability, purity and integrity of its leaders. Yes; and this ability led them to adopt the only practical method of accomplishing the object to be attained namely, total prohibition. It is said they have failed to carry any great number of the temperance workers with them. True; ten thousand votes is not a very large number, but quite large enough to grow and conquer our local option friends in detail, and then united we will conquer our enemies and confer on the nation the greatest boon ever received by any people—freedom from the enslavement of alcohol—total prohibition of the liquor traffic.

But says the judge, a general prohibitory law is not yet within our reach. How does he know until we reach for it? How does he know local option is within our reach? Why does he not ask for a high license law? Because he has advanced beyond the idea involved in high license and wants prohibition So it is with the National Prohibition party; they have thought of local option, advocated local option, voted (some of them) for local option, seen local option tested and have got in advance of the ideas involved in local option. They know that efforts in favor of local option are only an advance here, a retreat there, and no permanent advantage gained anywhere.

The advances of the N. P. P. may be slow, but the organized advance of a party fighting for so grand a principle is not likely to fail. In fact, prohibition can never be attained except thru a party organized with prohibition as its grand central idea. What can we expect from any law in opposition to the rum traffic, so long as its enforcement is left in the hands of parties whose policy it is to perpetuate that traffic.

Fraternally yours,
JOHN ROBINSON.

ON EXHIBITION.

There is a rich woman in Paris who keeps herself on exhibition as a millionaire; on the same principle that Barnum used to exhibit a prize ox, the bearded woman, the wooly horse, the gorilla and the French giant. The motive of exhibition is different however. Barnum demanded money for seeing his monsters. This woman has all the money she can waste and exhibits herself for applause.

Poor thing with many millions at her command she starves for something: has to leave her home and kindred and go among strangers, and live among and associate with those who have no sentiment for her but envy or pity. To put herself on exhibition she has to do and suffer all these things which the little Italian organgrinder or fiddler has to do when he leaves home and comes to New York to put himself on exhibition to gain his bread.

One would suppose a woman with her opportunities could find something to do in this country to which she owes all her wealth. Could institute or aid some industry or furnish employment to worthy people, who cannot obtain it while 10,000 grogshops are pauperizing the State and destroying its industries.

She might be expected to help the National W. C. T. Union, which if it was presented with what this useless rich woman on exhibition spends on the ornamentation of her person to go to one evening ball or reception, could and would with that money, scatter rich blessings of temperance and christian truth over every State in the Union.

What a wretched and ridiculous failure! what a scandal to American womanhood!! An American woman in a foreign country spending perhaps millions every year to keep herself be-jewelled and butterfly painted and peacock feathered on exhibition as a sample of American womanhood!!! As a painted, peahen burlesque she is a success—in all else she is a failure and an object of the most derisive contempt.

THE GOOD TEMPLARS.

From the Santa Barbara Press: "There is no secret organization that is more abused and maligned than the Independent Order of Good Templars. There is no disreputable loafer who does not consider it his perfect right to cast slurs at this society. And yet, the Good Templars are doing a work that is as noble and commendable as any ever undertaken. There is scarcely a town in America in which drunkards have not been reformed thru their instrumentality. There is scarcely a village where the pure principles of their order have not influenced some man to abstain from the way that leads to ruin. In California their work is carried forward in a manner that is especially systematic and beneficial. Their Orphan's Home is one of the grandest institutions in the State, and is annually doing a charitable work which is equaled by no other society. The plan of having lectures delivered thruout the State by learned and forcible speakers, is calculated to do a vast deal of good, and to speed the cause in its efforts toward the amelioration of the condition of mankind. One of their Grand Lecturers is now in this city, and her eloquent words are being listened to with great interest. Temperance, handmaid of religion, is worthy of the respect of all good people, and none but the weak-minded or vicious will stoop to scoff at the great moral work it is accomplishing.

THE WINE BUSINESS OF CAL.

The literature Committee of the N. W. C. T. Union have issued a series of beer handbills, of which millions have been distributed and have done and will continue to do an immense good. They are now similarly engaged in a Wine Series, and it is in the power of some of the readers of the RESCUE in the valleys of Napa and Sonoma, and in all the wine growing districts of the State to render them valuable assistance, with facts regarding the wine interest in this State, that have come under their notice. True statements of actual experiences of the evils or blessings (?) wrought by the wineries and their wine will be eminently useful, if addressed to Miss Julia Colman 54 Bible House, New York City. We want every body to know the exact truth about our pure cut-throat and cut-purse product. If we could get authentic statistics of the number of men and women who have rotted to the grave, committed murder and suicide and gone to the mad house thru the use of our pure California product of putrid rotten grape sugar, it would astonish the ignorant but would be no matter of surprise to those who have looked on and seen.

WEAKER VFSSELS.

Frances E. Willard, J. Ellen Foster, Amanda Way, Mrs. Livermore, Julia Colman, Mrs. M. C. Johnson, Mrs. Hunt, Mrs. Youmans, Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Mrs. Mary B. Willard, Margaret E. Winslow, Caroline B. Buell, are a dozen of the practical revivalists, whose names occur first to mind as the most prominent and effective workers for the salvation of the country and the world from the dominion of Satan. They are all "weaker vessels" but it will be received and acknowledged as a special favor if some obliging friend will tally off a dozen men of this country of equal talent, power and eminent usefulness. And those named are only a handful out of hundreds. And what will people think fifty years hence when they are told that these truest heroes and patriots were denied the ballot to which the right of the other sex be it ruffian, drunkard or barbarian is never called in question.

BETWEEN TWO FIRES. A complaint is made by one individual that the RESCUE is "stabbing infidels in the back at every opportunity and thus dividing good temperance men away from the temperance army." A minister lately said or wrote that the course of the RESCUE was such that he would never have anything to do with a temperance organization again. Probably both these individuals are intensely sensitive and are much keener in their search for stabs than for the truth, and mistake themselves. They are probably both better than they think they are, for if any man infidel or christian can at all withdraw his help and countenance from the temperance cause for the reason that the RESCUE dont print from his stereotypes, neither his help or his opposition will ever be worth an ounce of powder.

SAN LORENZO.—The Good Templars of Alameda Co. had a picnic on Monday at San Lorenzo Grove: everything passed off pleasantly, In the evening the District Lodge met at San Leandro, and had a public meeting well attended; but some drunken roughs created a disturbance and in trying to quell it a police officer was cut in the face by a desperado who is said to have been already implicated in two similar outrages. The roughs drew pistols but concluded it was hardly safe to use them. The citizens of San Leandro intend to see whether the grogshop is to rule that town according to its sweet pleasure.

THE YOLO DEMOCRAT has one column or over, every week devoted to the temperance question, and edited by the Rev. E. M. Stuart. That journal is therefore in that respect true to the best interests of the people and presents a double claim to the confidence and material support of the people of its county.

Cataline Conklin and his man Friday Platt appear to have made a disastrous somersault. It is to be hoped they will be treated with a generous portion of the world's contempt.

THANKS TO ALL.—After an absence of twenty days, employed in going to, returning from and attendance upon the R. W. G. L., we are once more on duty. Bro. A. M. Seymour, who conducted the business of the G. W. S. office during the interim has our thanks for his efficiency in so doing. To the many friends whose congratulations are being daily received, thanks are rendered in this general manner for their many good wishes expressed, if but a tithe of the kindly allusions made are felt to be really merited, one might will feel, not proud, but grateful. The distinction accorded by the R. W. G. L. to an humble member of this jurisdiction is felt not to be a personal or an individual one, but accorded rather in recognition of the great state and jurisdiction of California. Deeply sensible of the mighty responsibility unwillingly assumed, and grateful to the membership under the Grand Lodge of California who have always and ever accorded us their cordial support and undissembled sympathy, we return to our duties confident that each and all will assist in advancing the best interests of our beloved Order and the cause it so well represents.

On Monday evening, May 23d, the citizens of Topeka, Kansas, the new prohibitory State, accorded a public welcome to the R. W. G. L. of the I. O. G. T, The reception was held in the Presbyterian Church, the largest of the city, and it was filled to overflowing. J. Q. Detwiler, G. W. C. T. of Kansas, presided, and welcomed the R. W. G. L. in behalf of the Grand Lodge. Gov. J. P. St. John welcomed in behalf of the State, while City Attorney McFarland performed the same kindly office in behalf of the Mayor and City of Topeka. Responses were made in behalf of the R. W. G. L. and order by R. W. G. T. J. J. Kickman, John B. Finch, of Nebraska, and Geo. W. Bain, of Kentucky. Vocal music was rendered by Sisters Arnold and Hitt, of Nebraska, and P. R. W. G. V. T. A. A. Brookbank, of Indiana. Sister Mrs. J. A. Brown, of Wisconsin, delivered an address in behalf of the Sisters, and the R. W. G. V. T., Sister Mrs. C. E. Gilbert, of South Carolina, read an appropriate poem, all of which constitated an intellectual feast seldom equaled and rarely excelled.

GOV. ST. JOHN,

In the course of his remarks. said it gave him great pleasure to welcome this lodge to Kansas, a State, though young, that was at the front in morality, temperance and right. A number of years ago the people of Kansas became convinced that the sale of liquor was wrong, and no license system could make it right. (Applause.) The history of the temperance campaign was recited by the Governor in his telling manner. After the Act had been passed and the Supreme Court had said it was constitutional, men who had not been in a church for twenty years were very sorry to think that the new law prohibited communion wine. (Laughter.) For himself, he believed that intoxicating wine was no better in the church than in the saloon. (Long continued applause.) The Governor compared the history of South Carolina and Kansas in the past, and was glad to meet so many from the former State united with the people of Kansas in the great work of temperance. With the exception of Dodge City, Atchison and Leavenworth, the temperance law is enforced, and they comprise only one-thirtieth of our inhabitants. And thank God for that. Kansas gives her heartiest welcome, and may success crown your deliberations.

JUDGE M'FARLAND,

City Attorney of Topeka, said he was delegated by the mayor and people of Topeka to extend a cordial and generous welcome to the visitors. We welcome you in part because you are strangers, and also because you are a part of the great brotherhood. We do not close our door to any one. We let the exodusters come; we are not afraid of the Chinese. There's nothing mean about us. (Laughter.) But we welcome you because you believe in and work for temperance. The Judge then spoke of the commencement of Topeka and its growth. We are proud of our city. Speaking of the temperance work in Kansas, the Judge said we had passed the baby stage. We are in the fight which is fairly begun, and though the victory is not yet won, that time may not be far distant. The license system, which in nine cases out of ten favored the saloonkeeper, had been discarded, and we now had the vantage ground, with the law on our side.

The Right Worthy Grand Lodge convened in A. O. U. W. Hall, at 10 A. M., and was called to order by the R. W. G. T., J. J. Hickman, of Kentucky. It was announced and expected that the R. W. G. L. would hold its session in the State Capitol, but during the interim of legislative sessions the State property is in the custody of the Secretary of State, and that great office being held by a particularly small man, vested with a little brief authority, and whose interests and sympathies are seemingly with the purlieus and slums of the whisky ring, he found it necessary and thought it proper to refuse the use of the capitol for such purpose, although urged to do so by all the State officers, from the Governor down.

The usual preliminary business was transacted, the committee on credentials reporting representatives present from thirty-seven Grand Lodges, including those from the States and Territories of Alabama, California, Connecticut, Dakota, District of Columbia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maine, Maryland, Massachusetts, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Missouri Dual, Mississippi, Nebraska, New Hampshire, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Ontario, Oregon, Pennsylvania, Quebec, South Carolina, Tennessee, Tennessee Dual, Vermont, Virginia, West Virginia and Wisconsin, each of the jurisdictions named being represented by from one to five representatives. The attendance comprised one hundred and fifty brothers and sisters, of whom ninety-six were representatives.

The body proved itself a hard-working body, by fixing its hours of session from 9 A. M. to 12, 2 P. M. to 5:30, and at 8 P. M., which was maintained throughout, the night session continuing until near or quite midnight, and on one occasion, until the "wee sma' hours."

Much difficulty was experienced in seating the Missouri delegation, the Grand Lodge having elected five representatives on the basis of their membership reported at the annual session of their Grand Lodge. Meanwhile, the membership had fallen off to such an extent as to make them entitled to but four representatives on the present basis, upon which facts but four representatives were credentialed and paid for by mileage tax. The fifth representative, Bro. R. R. Scott, appeared, however, and claimed his seat, which was finally accorded him, and the representative tax of the five representatives required to be paid, before either would be allowed to vote. The R. W. G. L. holding that the basis of representation was the membership reported at the annual session of a Grand Lodge.

Letters of regret were read from R. W. G. C. Samuel Capper, of England; A. S. Draper, of New York; A. G. Clark and wife, of California, and W. P. Roberts, of Minnesota, all of whom were representatives, and detained for various causes.

REPORTS OF OFFICERS.

The reports of the officers were able and exhaustive. No brief synopsis within the space at command could do them justice, and as the journals of proceedings will be published within sixty days, when all can read the reports in full for themselves, none will be attempted. A good degree of prosperity and increase was reported throughout the whole Order. Six new Grand Lodges had been organized—five in the United States and one for Sweden. There are 78 Grand Lodges, 2 Worthy Grand Lodges, 6,512 subordinate Lodges, and a membership of 310,115. The financial affairs appear to have been excellently managed, and a decided decrease in the liabilities of the R. W. G. L. is observable. Another year of similar management and the body will be lifted out of the slough of financial despond, and be enabled to do more aggressive work, and aid its declining subordinates when assistance is required.

The R. W. G. T., and R. W. G. S. were directed to petition the President of the United States relative to "Order No. 24," issued by General Sherman prohibiting the sale of liquors at all military posts, and, urge that the prohibition be made to include wine, cider, beer and ale, which it seems were deemed to have been excepted by a subsequent order of the Adjutant General.

The place of meeting for the next session was chosen early in the present session, and an amusing rivalry was indulged in bidding for the next meeting of the R. W. G. L., Manchester, N. H.; Baltimore, Md.; Charleston, S. C.; Raleigh, N. C.; Indinapolis, Ind.; Saratoga, N. Y.; and Philadelphia, Pa., were each advocated as being the place. On the first ballot, Charleston, S. C., was selected, and to its palmetto groves the R. W. G. L. will hie itself away one year hence.

During the sessions Mrs. C. B. Buell, one of the Secretaries of W. N. C. T. U., was received as a fraternal delegate, and duly welcomed. The sister addressed the R. W. G. L. relative to the work of her organization, and presented a protographic copy of a painting of Mrs. President Hayes, which is now being engraved, when the following was adopted by the R. W. G. L.:

WHEREAS, The friends of total abstinence have caused to be placed in the Executive Mansion of the Nation a full length portrait of Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes, wife of ex-President R. B. Hayes, as a testimonial in honor of her noble and praiseworthy example in banishing wine from the table of the chief home of the United States; and

WHEREAS, This testimonial will ever stand as a silent protest against a return to the old custom of drinking at national banquets, and

WHEREAS, It is proposed to have a first-class engraving of the portrait which shall be not only an ornament to any drawing-room, hall or lodge room, but will thereby mark an era in the temperance reform, and be a continual lesson to our children, therefore

Resolved, that we recommend to every Grand and Subordinate Lodge under our jurisdiction so far as practicable, to secure one of those engravings by the payment of the sum of five dollars, to hang on the walls of the Lodge Room, thereby perpetuating the memory of her example, and acting as a lasting memorial for total abstinence.

The following complimentary to P. R. W. G. T., S. D. Hastings of Wisconsin, was adopted:

WHEREAS, We have learned with much pleasure that Hon. S. D. Hastings, P. R. W. G. T., has received an invitation to visit Australasia during this year; and,

WHEREAS, From our long acquaintance with Brother Hastings, and knowing his untiring efforts for our Order, its interests and extension; therefore be it

Resolved, That we unanimously and heartily recommend Brother Hastings to our brothers and sisters in Australasia, and hope for him a successful visit, believing that our Order will receive a fresh impetus from said visit.

A resolution was adopted setting forth the need of a weekly juvenile paper, and the N. T. S. urged to make its monthly "Youth's Temperance Banner," a weekly. It is believed that the N. T. S. will make the experiment soon, and issue the Banner weekly, in which event it is hoped that every member and Lodge of our Order will exert themselves to make the change a permanent and satisfactory one, by giving it increased circulation and patronage.

The laws of the Order were so amended as to make the representatives from five Lodges a quorum in any Grand Lodge.

The upper, or peninsular portion of the State of Michigan being isolated and separated from the remaining portion of the State, and too far removed to attend the sessions of its Grand Lodge, and the Grand Lodge of Michigan, having petitioned for a division of their territory into two Grand Lodge jurisdictions, it was ordered that a new Grand Lodge be organized in the Upper Peninsula of that State.

The laws were amended so as to require the reports of the officers to be submitted to the R. W. G. L. in printed form.

The proposition to abolish the reobligation ceremony came up on the report of the special committee presenting a form in lieu of the ceremony now in use. The proposition received 56 votes in favor of the change and 36 opposed thereto; but lacking a two-third vote was defeated.

A radical and beneficial change in the law of the Order was made, permitting lodges to again receive persons who have lost their membership, dispensing with any portion or all of the initiatory ceremonies except the obligation, which must always be administered. The usual preliminaries of proposition, investigation, etc. must of course be complied with as in all cases of petition for admission.

The matter of a change of the regalia of the Order was again considered, and the whole matter relegated to the individual members of the Order. The reformers propose to go at it cautiously, hence have made an attack upon but one grade of the regalia, and that the white or initiatory collar which it is proposed to abolish and substitute therefor a small metalic badge to be worn on the left breast. A vote is to be taken simultaneously in every lodge on the third meeting night of October, when the members are to vote whether they desire to retain the present regalia or substitute therefor the metalic badge. The votes are to be certified by the Secretaries to the Grand Secretaries and by them to the R. W. G. S. who will present the result to the R. W. G,L. at its next session, whose action will doubtless be based upon the wish of the members as represented by their vote.

That great bone of contention the worthy Grand Lodge system was again gnawed and scraped and allowed to lie over once more in the bleachery of time to be again resurrected and once more dissected at the next session.

Authority was given the Worthy Grand Lodge of Australasia to prepare a ritual for use of that body, and the matter of canceling certain Grand Lodge indebtedness was referred to the executive committee.

The R. W. G. S. was instructed to send the passwords to the Secretaries of Worthy Grand Lodges, instead of to Grand Lodges under the jurisdiction of the Worthy Grand Lodges. To cover other points that have been raised in connection with Worthy Grand Lodges it was decided that no Grand Lodge under the jurisdiction of a Worthy Grand Lodge can withdraw from the jurisdiction of such Worthy Grand Lodge without the censent of a two-thirds vote of the W. G. L. at a regular annual session and in case such consent is given such Grand Lodge shall come under the immediate jurisdiction of the R. W. G. L.; that the charter of a W. G. L. cannot be surrendered while three Grand Lodges are in favor of retaining it.

The Executive Committee of the R. W. G. L. was instructed to prepare a special ceremony for the reception of Juvenile Templars into lodges, and report the same at the next session of this body, and notice was given to amend the R. W. G. L. constitution so as to place the Juvenile Templars under their own management.

The R, W. G. L. directed that a collection and systematic canvass be made for funds in every subordinate Lodge of the I. O. G. T. at their meeting held nearest the date of the third Sunday of November next and each succeeding year thereafter. The results of such collections are to be forwarded to the G. W. S. and thence to the N. T. S. who are to return one-half in such publications as may be ordered by the Literature Committee of the R. W. G. L. to our weaker jurisdictions and the Freedmen of the South.

The R. W. G. L. appointed as delegates to the National Temperance Convention at Saratoga, R. W. G. Templar and R.W.G.S. ex-officio and Mrs J. A. Brown, Wis. J. F. Pinkham, Ia.; C. A. Farwell, Me.; A. Henry, Ontario; B. K. Douglas, New York. For delegates to Lake Bluff, J. J. Hickman, Kentucky; J. B. Finch, Neb.; Geo. W Bain, Ky.; J. W. Nicholls, Ill.; Mrs A. A. Brookbank, Ind. Mrs A. A. Brookbank was also appointed fraternal delegate to return the greeting of the W. N. C. T. U.

The Committee on temp. literature was named as Jno. B. Finch of Neb., W. H. Lambley of Ontario; C. W. Bassett of Ills.; T. B. Crews, S. C. and Mrs. M. E. L. Connard of Philadelphia.

The manuscript history of the Order prepared by Rev. T. F. Parker of New York was approved by the R. W. G. L. It was ordered that as soon as printed it shall be kept in stock as supplies and sold at a rate not exceeding seventy-five cents.

Much proposed legislation was nipped by the chilling frosts of disapprobation. Some withdrew and died on the spot, while others recovered sufficiently to come up again as notices for future action. Considerable routine and unimportant legislation was also had, all of which is intentionally omitted.

Lecturers' Reports.

MRS. STEVENS.

The Rev. J. A. Van Anda writes "that owing to a mistake made in the notices the first audience addressed by Mrs. Stevens at Santa Barbara was a slim one; 6 names were secured and all determined to succeed better next time. On Tuesday evening May 24th she met with Seaside Lodge. On Wednesday evening lectured in the Methodist Church and 40 names were added. On Thursday at the Congl. Ch. a few names were given for membership. On Friday Santa Barbara Lodge met and received 8 members as the first fruits of Mrs. Stevens labors here. At the Presbyterian church, it being the most commodious and central, Saturday's meeting was good. Rev. J. W. Webb of Lompoc being present spoke a few minutes, Mrs. Stevens making the principal speech, and the number of candidates rose to 68. Mrs. Stevens had said she must have 100 names, on Sunday evening the churches adjourned their servcies and the people came together to the number of 500 or more, Mr. Webb made a very fine effort, and awakened the audience as well as himself. Mrs Stevens followed in a grand plea for temperance and the "Orphans Home" lifted a collection of $30, without having been previously announced, and secured the balance of her coveted 100 names, and 4 or 5 to spare. This ended the work of one week in the temperance cause in Santa Barbara. I forgot to say in its proper place that Mrs. Stevens organized a Band of Hope in the Methodist church on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock; a large number took the pledge and Mrs. P. L. Moore was elected Superintendent with a suitable set of assistants.

Mrs. Stevens will be kindly welcomed to Santa Barbara whenever she can make it possible to come. Much more we could say which would be favorable. Keep Mrs. Stevens in the field."

The Santa Barbara Press says: "The temperance meetings of Mrs. E. P. Stevens at Montecito Monday and Tuesday, were well attended. A Lodge was instituted at that place last evening with thirty-five charter members. The Good Templars will have a social in the lodge room in Cook's building this evening. The affair is given as a testimonial to Mrs. Emily Pitt Stevens, who leaves to-morrow. There will be an address by Mrs. Stevens, and singing by a number of young ladies, and a pleasant time generally. All are cordially invited to attend. Mrs. Stevens takes her departure for Goleta to-morrow, where she will deliver a course of lectures, after which she goes to Lompoc and Guadalupe. She is very well satisfied with her labors in this vicinity, having made upwards of 150 converts to the cause of temperance in Santa Barbara and Montecito. She is an ardent worker for the cause of temperance, and a forcible lecturer."

Mrs. S. reports having spoken 36 times in May, organized 5 lodges and 1 Band of Hope, added abont 500 members to the order and set RESCUE subscriptions well going. No saloon in Montecito.

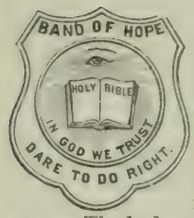
H. R. HUGHES.

May 26th visited Mt. View Lodge, they have 80 members and are doing a good. work. Put off my lecture Friday so as to see the D. D. Holland, to postpone D. L. one week. So matters are harmonized and on June 18th Tuolumne D. L. in Sonora, will hold their session, and show their colors.

The 28th lectured at Jamestown to a small audience, met with the lodge after, they number 45 and for a lodge 10 weeks old, surrounded by three other lodges close by are doing well.

The 29th visited Table Mt. Lodge, and instructed them in the Degrees. Was to have lectured, but found my notices had failed to come, only 15 miles away and a daily stage within one mile and yet a double notice sent a week ahead had not reached them.

I will visit every lodge in the county before D. L. if sickness does not compel me to go home, I am not well but will fill the appointments if possible. If I fail to et with the ads may know the reason. But let everture in the Good at least have "Open Lodge."



F. J. CULVER.

Lectured May 31st to a good audience in the evening, at Horicon: Lodge is in splendid working order a No 1 Lodge. It is in deep mourning over the death of their most worthy Bro. and L. D. E. Loofborrow. You may look for a good list of subscribers to the RESCUE soon from this Lodge. Wednesday friend Fletcher brought us down to the Bay: drove to Gualala, one day earlier than advertized time, as Bro. Simmons desired to have us fill in our extra night at Fish Rock; owing to the change our first audience was small: on second evening had a good audience; at the close Bro. Simmons took pencil and paper got 24 names for a new lodge or to resuscitate the old. Here the G. T's. own a good hall, organ &c. Some of the staunch members of the old Lodge are here ready to put their shoulder to the wheel and help pilot the ship that she may not again be dashed against the breakers of indifference. At Fishermans Bay and Horicon steps are being taken to enforce the Sunday law.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

CURRENTS OF THE SEA.

NUMBER EIGHT.

There was a very remarkable warm current discovered about 30 years ago by the captain of the Sovereign of the Seas, one of the famous clippers built by Donald Mackay of Boston. Captain Mackay found the water grow colder 19 degrees in one day in latitude 48 deg. south and about 250 miles west of San Francisco. There are no doubt warm currents going toward the south in the South Pacific: but our friend made a mistake. The writer passed over the same places on two occasions afterward and with careful attention found no such changes. He suggested to Capt. Mackay that he had fallen into an error likely to occur from want of caution. In taking the temperature of sea water, we use a thermometer which has a cup at the bottom of its case that holds some water, and it is always tipped up to let the water run out. Sometimes the mercury in the tube separates when inverted and an inch or two goes into the top of the tube and stays there till carefully shaken down. This was the matter with our friend's observations; his theremometer which had read 62 yesterday read 43 to-day, but the other 18 or 19 degrees were up in the top of the tube disconnected, and thus a beautiful and important discovery was utterly spoiled.

MOVEMENTS EVERYWHERE.

Wherever man has searched for information and been able to make reliable experiments in sea or air, he has found both in motion, here slower and there more rapid: and there can be no doubt that a constant movement,—regular in its general features and obedient to a preconceived and wondrously contrived system of laws and influences—exists everywhere in the sea and in the atmosphere, above and below. And the purpose is to keep both the air and the water pu[illegible] wholsome and fit to maintain the health a[illegible] of all the inhabitants of earth. [illegible] causes a constant commingling and pur[illegible] cleansing and restoration of the particles and portions which have become defiled and vitiated and unwholesome. It is but fair to presume that every single particle of air or water that is at this moment at any particular point of our atmosphere or in the buried depths of the boundless ocean, is moving in some direction, slowly or quickly and will keep on moving in the millions of centuries till it will one day return to the same point, after visiting almost every other locality of sky or sea possible to it.

And this doctrine of constant movement formed from men's practical observation and actual experimental proof; and not at all from the guesses and wild imaginings of crazy theorists, sweeps away every vestige of the sandy foundation upon which the fool (of scripture) has constructed his theory of a natural, blind, unintelligent creation and evolution, without the presence or direction of a creating and governing spirit.

The machinery by which the winds and the tides and current streams great and small are put in motion and kept in operation—exerting at one season their greatest activity, at another slowing up, or reversing their action in some localities—and every movement tending to produce some beneficent result to people and animals inhabiting some very distant clime—altogether preclude the possibility of chance or blind development in their origination. There is no work of man in the greatest triumph of his inventive and creative genius, that has ever compared in ingenuity, simplicity and power with the miraculous machinery which has been contrived and employed by the great Architect to keep the air and water in ceaseless motion and every motion charged with a blessing to mankind.

CORAL BANKS.

Before closing these chapters on the currents of the sea it is fitting to notice the work of the coral insect which has a duty appointed for it among the currents of the sea.

By the evaporation of the pure fresh water from the sea in the tropical regions, the waters of those seas are rendered salter than before, and when the vapors have been carried into the far north and distributed in rain and snow over the land, the brooks and rivers wash down in their progress to the sea a portion of the salts and earthy substances with which they come in contact, which they dissolve and carry to add to the saltness of the ocean. Thus it was necessary, when the sea was planned, to devise a remedy for this constant loading up of the sea with lime and various mineral and earthy salts.

A human mind in this emergency would have had to invent some vast, costly ponderous reducing works to regulate the consistency of the ocean and keep it in its present condition of wholesomeness for its living inhabitants. But the Creator simply called into existence the shell-fish and the diminutive coral insect to perform these most important offices and in the most quiet, silent, humble and unobstrusive manner conceivable, to be the board of health which regulates and keeps in order the proper conditions of the saltness of the ocean.

The shell-fish. lobsters, crabs, oysters, clams &c perform their duties in all seas, abstracting from the sea the calcareous or limy substances necessary to form their shells, and it is probable there are just enough of these to accomplish the portion of the task allotted to them.

But in the tropical seas the coral insect is an agent of the very greatest importance. They are employed in armies of infinite myriads in abstracting from the denser waters of their localities the materials which they solidify and build into their dwellings. They attach themselves to rocks and shores and are constantly adding to their structures and raising the bottom of many thousands of square miles of the sea.

The beautiful branching forms of coral, white and colored, which you have often seen are specimens from the gardens at the bottom of the sea, over extensive tracts of the Pacific, Indian, and Atlantic oceans: there are coral beds of vast extent in the China sea, in Polynesia, on the coast of Africa and in the West Indies. There is no doubt that continents or islands of vast extent will one day exist where there are now from 7 to 20 fathoms of water. There are already immense tracts of the China sea and the northern and eastern coasts of Australia which are either impassable or exceedingly dangerous for vessels to navigate because of the Coral Banks.

We have a hint thrown out here that these little master masons, while performing the duty of preserving the wholesome condition of the sea, had another mission appointed for them—that of being the builders of new habitations for man to come into use when the older portions of the earth shall become too densely populated. By a little exercise of earthquake power a larger continent than Australia could now be upheaved, by elevating but a little the bottom of the sea east and north of it. and by the deepening of the ocean at some other point, but it is more probable that the coral workers will fill it up many centuries after our time. The work of the coral insects too disturbs the balance or equilibrium of the sea and is a helper in the movements of the currents of the sea. This closes for the present the subject of the "Currents." Should any questions be asked by readers in relation to any of the matters treated in these chapters, they will be cheerfully answered.

ANNUAL.—One of the papers promises us an annual eclipse of the sun on Nov. 21st. Better spell it annular next time. In an annular or ringed eclipse an outer ring or annula or circle of the sun's face can be seen at the central time of the eclipse all round the moon, because the moon is at such a distance from earth and sun that she does not quite cover the whole surface of the latter. When an eclipse of the sun occurs while the earth is at its greatest distance from the sun and the moon near the earth, the eclipse is total. Then the moon entirely covers the sun from our view for a short space of time. Our Juveniles will know better than to say annual eclipse when they edit papers. An Almanac published in the East fell into the same rattrap last year, and perhaps they often do, when they dont read the RESCUE.

A CHILD'S EVENING PRAYER.

HILARY BYGRAVE

The day has once more passed away.
And now I go to rest,
Protected by the love of God,
His peace within my breast.

For all the gladness of the day,
For evening's grateful shade,
I render now my thanks to him
Who all things fair hath made,

And pray that all my life may prove
As pure as morning light,
And that my dying hour may be
Fearless, serene, and bright.

So fold me in thy tireless arms,
O God of love and light,
And let sweet sleep mine eyelids close,
As fall the shades of the night.

THIS CERTIFIES.

The straits of Sunda between the islands of Java and Sumatra are the highway of a vast number of ships on their way to and from China. There are a great many "dubashes" there, market men who sell fowls, eggs, vegetables, cocoanuts, various fruits &c with occasional monkeys, mouse deers and other animals. They come off in canoes and are very inportunate to sell their material. Their principle is to sell at the highest possible price but to take a very small one rather than not sell at all.

To paddle their canoe with any energy, it is absolutely necessary for them to make a vocal rumpus as you would suppose indicated an intense excitement, but it is only their music and mode of keeping time with their voices and paddles. The dubash salutes the captain when he comes on board with a humble deference which labors to convey the dubashes idea of his own deep abasement, as much as of the amazing dignity and exaltation of the captain and seems only to mourn his inability to compress himself into still smaller dimensions.

First thing is then to produce his credentials; about two pounds of them tied up in one packet and a couple of single pounds of older date as a reserve in case a perusal of the first 300 or so of complimentary letters given by former navigators to the dubash, are not entirely convincing.

Many or most of these letters are highly humorous, the dubash dont understand a word of them and when their perusal by the new arrival excites a burst of laughter, the malays join in heartily, deeming it certain that the laughter is elicited by the praises of their honesty and good looks.

Ship ———, of ———, May —, 18—.

This certifies that the bearer Mahomet is a lineal descendant of the great prophet his namesake: He has supplied me with chickens, fruit and vegetables and I have no hesitation in saying he is the biggest thief and liar and cheat I ever had any dealings with. JOHN SMITH.

Or this—

The bearer Mahmoud Alba supplied me with fruit and vegetables: dont give the rascal half what he asks and look out for him, he'll cheat you someway. JOHN BULL.

Of course when one laughs at these expressions the Malay is delighted and has a half dozen more letters opened and displayed, and grinningly insists on having the whole lot carefully perused. He will finally accept a pretty hard bargain, provided you will throw in a "good strong recommendation" an article of which none of these Asiatics seems to have ever doubted the absolute virtue to procure them patronage.

ANECDOTES OF ILLUSTRIOUS ABSTAINERS.

Livingston.—David Livingston, the celebrated missionary and explorer, in a letter from Kurman, South Africa, dated November 12th, 1852, says:—

"I have acted on the principle of total abstinence from all alcoholic liquors during more than twenty years, My individual opinion is that the more sevvere labors or privations may be undergone without alcoholic stimulus; because those of us who have endured the most had nothing else than water, and not always enough of that. The introduction of English drinking customs and English drinks among the natives of this country inevitably proves the destruction of both their bodies and souls."

John Locke.—In Lord King's "Life of Locke" (the well-known author of a work on the "Human Understanding") we read:

"His was the same as other people's except that he usually drank nothing but water; and he thought that his abstinence in this respect had preserved his life so long, althongh his constitution was so weak."

Sir Henry Havelock.—From a memorandum supplied to me by one of the survivors of Havelock's Brigade, the following extract is made:

"During the long life and painful march thru India to the frontiers of Persia. Afganistan, and Cabul, Captain Havelock made himself beloved by every man in his regiment. He had ever a kindly look and a cheery word for his men. He often told them he was an abstainer from everything that intoxicates, and exhorted his men to follow the same course. When a soldier was brought before him charged with drunkenness, his common exclamation was: oh, my good man, liquor, liquor is the curse of the army. You can not be a good soldier and drink intoxicating liquor. I never touch it."—Boyce's Saturday Anvil.

TEACH THE CHILDREN.

There is, probably, no hallucination so obstinate as that which attributes to alcoholic drink a certain virtue which it never possessed. After all the influences of the pulpit and the press, after all the warning examples of drunkenness and consequent destruction, after all the testimony of science and experience, there lingers in the average mind an impression that there is something good in alcohol, even for the healthy man. Boys and young men do not shun the wine-cup as a poisoner of blood and thought, and the most dangerous drug that they can handle; but they have an idea that the temperance man is a fogy, or foe to a free, social life, whose practices are ascetic, and whose warnings are to be laughed at and disregarded. Now in alcohol, in its various forms, we have a foe to the human race so subtle and so powerful that it destroys human beings by the million, vitiates all the processes of those who indulge in it, degrades morals, induces pauperism and crime in the superlative degree when compared with other causes and corrupts the homes of millions.

It is a cruel thing to send a boy out into the world untaught that alcohol in any form is fire, and will certainly burn him if he puts it into his stomach. It is a cruel thing to educate a boy in such a way that he has no adequate idea of the dangers that beset his path. It is a mean thing to send a boy out to take his place in society without understanding the relations of temperance to his own safety and prosperity, and to the safety and prosperity of society.

What we want in our schools is to do away with the force of a pernicious example, and a long-cherished error, by making the children thoroughly intelligent on this subject of alcohol. They should be taught the natural effects of alcohol upon the processes of animal life.

(1). They should be taught that it can add nothing whatever to the vital forces or to the vital tissues, that it never enters into the elements of structure, and that in the healthy organism, it is alway a burden or disturbing force. (2). They should be taught that it invariably disturbs the operation of the brain, and that the mind can get nothing from alcohol of help that is to be relied upon. (3). They should be taught that alcohol inflames the baser passions, blunts the sensibilities, and debases the feelings.

(4) They should be taught that an appetite for drink is certainly developed by those who use it, which is dangerous to life, destructive of health of body and peace of mind, and in millions of instances ruinous to fortune and to all the high interests of the soul. (5). They should be taught that the crime and pauperism of society flow as naturally from alcohol as any effect whatever naturally flows from its competent cause. (6). They should be taught that drink is the responsible cause of most of the poverty and want of the world. So long as six hundred million dollars are annually spent for drink in this country, every ounce of which was made by the destruction of bread, and not one ounce of which has ever entered into the sum of national wealth, having nothing to show for its cost but diseased stomachs, degraded homes, destroyed industry, increased pauperism, and aggravated crime, these boys should understand the facts and be able to act upon them in their first responsible conduct.

The national wealth goes into the ground. If we could only manage to bury it without having it pass thither-ward in the form of a poisonous fluid through the inflamed bodies of our neighbors and friends, happy should we be. But this great, abominable curse dominates the world. The tramp reminds us of it as he begs for a night's lodging.

The widow and fatherless tell us of it as they ask for bread. It scowls upon us from the hovels and haunts of the poor everywhere. Even the clean, hard-working man of prosperity can not enjoy his earnings because the world is full of misery from drink. The more thoroughly we can instruct the young concerning this dominating evil of our time the better will it be for them and for the world.

"IT WON'T HURT YOU IF YOU LET IT ALONE."

BY MRS. J. E. M'CONAUGHY.

"Liquor won't hurt you if you'll let it alone," said, one, with a sneer, to another who was making a strong fight to have it kept out of the town by law. "You needn't meddle with it. If others take it that is their look-out."

"But liquors does hurt thousands who let it alone who hate it utterly and never set foot in a saloon."

"I should like your evidence," said the other a little puzzled.

Just step around the corner into Mrs. Watson's house—a pretty little house, but it will not be hers much longer. The rumseller has it in his grip; I hear she must move out next week. Watson is working on his new veranda, which is to run around three sides of the tavern, to pay up another liquor bill, while his wife and children are starving. They never touch liquor, but it has hurt them, I can pick out twenty families in this little place where it has done its mischief, more or less, and it is so the world over. Every man that drinks involves others with him. Those that let it alone, have to suffer, Probably five sufferers to each drunkard would be stating it very low. Now, I mean to work hard and fight hard, if need be, for those who have no helper; and if the law can be made to help them, well and good."

Our boys are to be our future law-makers. Let them be well established in temperance legislation. Let them look on liquor license just as they would on a stealing license or a license to commit murder. All these and far more are included in every permit to sell rum.—Bauner.

HIS MOTHER.

How touching is this tribute of Hon. Thos. H. Benton to his mother's influence: "My mother asked me never to use tobacco; I have never touched it from that time to the present day. She asked me never to gamble; and I never gambled; I cannot tell who is losing in games that are being played.

She admonished me, too, against drinking; and whatever capacity for endurance I have at present, and whatever usefulness I have, I attribute to having complied with her pious and correct wishes. When I was seven years of age, she asked me not to drink, and then I made a resolution of total abstinence; and that I have adhered to it thru all times, I owe to my mother."—Ripon Free Press.

There are many middle aged and older and very old men living, who look back with a joyful and thankful memory upon every habit and practice of their lives which has faithfully obeyed the loving injunctions of a good mother. And there are a very great number of miserable and unfortunate men who bitterly regret a lifelong disregard of those loving counsels: whose life has been all a mistake from first to last. It is a happy lot to be the son of a good mother, but a much happier one to be the obedient, good, loving and grateful son of a good mother.

A TERRIBLE MANSLAYER.

Children, just think of a distillery that pays $1,000 per day tax. That means over 1,000 gallons of whisky every day. Would you like to think any of that whisky was coming into your home to rob you of your clothes, your food, of everything pretty and tasteful about your home, to rob your mother of her cheerful, happy face and make her look tired, wan and heart-broken, to rob you of your father, and give you instead—we will not write it—it is to pitiful to think of. And yet children, there is a man in Ohio who makes that much whisky every day and a lot of the leading men in the State are always glad to get him on their side when an important election is to be held, and this whisky maker always helps the party that pledges itself to help his business. This is what is meant by "politics."—Ex.

How many murdered souls of men and women and children are put down to that man's account every day, do you suppose?

WHAT ARE YOU DOING FOR TEMPERANCE.

Good Templar.

"You may reply, "I am setting a good example." We are glad to hear it, and admit that you are doing the first and best thing for the good cause. But we cannot help asking again: What are you doing? What more? Is your influence active or passive? As a citizen are you making any effort to secure the maintainance of laws restricting the liquor traffic?

Do you belong to any temperance organization in your own neighborhood?

Do you give any money yearly to the temperance cause?

Do you ever circulate temperance literature?

Do you take any pains to acquaint yourself with the awful facts and statistics which lie within your reach?

Have you ever made a hearty effort to rescue one soul from the ruin of strong drink?

Are you quite sure that one day it will be said of you that you have done what you could?

NOTES FROM THE GEN'L SUP'T OF J. W.

May 23d, I spoke in the church at Antioch to the Band of Hope. Meeting opened by singing, and prayer by Rev. Mr. Powell of Nortonville. About one hundred present, young and old. After the speaking a collection was taken, amounting to $3.25.

May 24, met again in the church at 8 P.M.; about fifty persons present. After my remarks called the attention of the L. D. and the Superintendent of the Band of Hope to an article in the Rescue, of May 26, headed, "Band of Hope Rituals," page 475. I am thankful for kindness shown me by Brother Tobe, and I am sure if he will give to the Band of Hope in Antioch the benefits of his talents it will be a great success.

May 25, went to Judsonville and was kindly received by the L. D., William Bennett, and after church and resting a little while we went to the home of Mrs. Griffiths, Superintendent of the Band of Hope, and spent an hour pleasantly and profitably, and found Judsonville Band of Hope in good hands and very prosperous. It turned out that the hall which we should have held our meetings in, had been engaged every evening of the week for rehearsals for a school picnic, and we were obliged to use an old unoccupied building, where the surroundings were not inviting, and our meetings were small, but our visit otherwise was pleasant, and the members of the Lodge and the L. D. made me feel entirely at home, for which I feel very thankful.

May 27, went to Somerville, and put up at the Pittsburg House. Saw Brother W. J. Laird, L. D., and found that my posters had only reached him late on Thursday evening, and as the Dramatic Club were going to give an entertainment the next evening for the benefit of a widow and her children who had lost their protector in the mine, we thought it useless to call a meeting, so I crossed to Nortonville, and took up my quarters at the house of Mr. Rees.

May 29, found I was to speak on Sunday evening in the church, as Rev. Mr. Williams had kindly consented to give way for the occasion; and I was also expected to meet with the Band of Hope on Sunday afternoon and lecture in the Good Templar Hall on Monday night.

May 29. In the afternoon went to the Sabbath school, and by invitation taught a Bible class of young men. The report of the Secretary stated the number of children present was one hundred and fifty, and there was also a large number of adults. Immediately after the close of the Sabbath school I found sixty children convened as a Band of Hope in the Good Templars' hall, and some young people who would not like me to call them children. This was their second meeting, as the Band was organized only two weeks by Rev. Brother Tubbs. I was surprised to see with what order and regularity their work was done, but when Brother Clifford told me that many of them had been members of a juvenile Temple. That explained the matter. I spoke to the Band—in which I took a deep interest—and I and I am sure that great good will be done by this Band of Hope. In the evening the people gathered at the church in large numbers. Rev. A. Williams conducted the exercises, and after my address he made a very effective speech, and all seem to be well pleased.

May 30. Lectured in the Good Templars' hall, and had a very fair audience who listened with great attention, and I closed my labors for the present very pleasantly. A collection was taken up at this meeting amounting to $3.65. Expenses of the trip, $13.75. Collections, $6.90.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

LODGE IMPROVEMENT.

Advocates and professors of temperance, including the Rescue, are prompt in observing and criticising the indifference and inaction of churches, christians, statesman, reformers, men of business &c &c with regard to the most important interest that can affect their religious, social or financial welfare, as individuals or communities. We complain that so many who might be leaders in a good cause and be successful instruments in turning many and preventing many from evil courses, refuse to unite with us against the manifestly debauching agencies which are devastating the State and as far and as fast as they can making it a prison, poorhouse and madhouse.

We lament very liberally and generously that religious teachers and societies, who might with a little vigorous exertion help pull up the tares which are so industriously cultivated, and make a garden place here for the gospel to come and flourish and stay, refuse to see as we do and what we do so plainly: it grieves us when they say it is no worse here than in New York or Chicago or New Jersey, whereas it need not be bad at all if the grogshop was extinguished.

It is of course an excellent plan to police other people pretty strictly; but will it not be a good idea to peep into our own windows just at this very important stage of the general contest, and call ourselves to strict account?. Is it not well to ask how many of our lodges have a program of exercises that can be called improving? How many lodges have made or are elevating the moral status of their communities? How many tolerate in their members the burlesquing of the order and its duties and obligations by patronizing grogshops and similar infamous resorts (there are none worse)?

The lodges that cannot give an honest dignified and proper answer to these questions may have a name of living but they are dead, like the ancient church of Sardis, and none "of their works are fulfilled before God."

It is time now (and it was always time) to purify our lodges of every barnacle and parasite influence and attachment and deadweight. Nothing will or can make the meetings of a lodge so completely and invariably attractive and popular to every class of its honest membership as to make its exercises, first, beyond all question as to their perfect propriety and dignity; second, instruction and mental and moral improvement to be the governing features of the entertainments private and public; third, the excision and total abandonment of all modes of amusement that are offensive to a portion of our membership and degrade the good name of our Order before the world.

It was a surprise to some, that a District Lodge should recently have found it necessary to reprehend "the practice of our members visiting saloons, buying temperance drinks and playing games there." One would suppose that wherever such a scandal is perpetrated by a professed Good Templar, he would,if it were done ignorantly, get one warning, and if the offence were repeated, be as ignominiously expelled as if he had been caught robbing henroosts at midnight.

One of our lecturers was told lately by a church member that the Good Templar lodge killed the religious sentiment and religious work in a community. In the train of the lodge, said he, come the dance and then the saloon. Of course the first impulse is to shake the man who said that, because there are dances by church associations ten times for once by Good Templars, and dancing is altogether repelled and prohibited from any connection with our order. But if there are lodges which have dances they make the complaint of that party true, so far as they can, and if all our lodges did the same, it might be debated whether the Order was a benefit to society or not.

We have some lodges that 12 and 15 years and more, have gone along gaining ground in their community and doing good all the time: they were and are lodges of instruction all the time: they were not shaker Good Templars: their exercises have been what they profess and are a worship in the interest of ourselves and our brother man. Those lodges will last and be present at the victory jubilee.

Again we have lodges that have been "stood on end" half a dozen times, and regularly fallen over every time, because they never took a paper, a book or a tract; never learned the first thing themselves about the order or cause, and never taught anybody anything and of course never did any good. Some few have endured some years as dancers in times past: but they only converted people to kick their temperance principles and never had a particle of beneficial influence in their community worth mentioning. And the same is no doubt true of every lodge that permits its members or one of them to visit saloons as a patron or a spectator. It is time now to shake ourselves clear of all dragweights.

THE PRESENT R. W. G. T.

The R. W. G. Lodge has been for a long time in need of some inspiriting element to arouse it to activity in the cause it represents. The Good Templars in the Eastern States under the Grand Lodges that sat directly in the light of the supreme body and of which it was part and parcel, have many of them very much degenerated from their first condition of power and usefulness. Under a sleepy state governing body and a much sleepier supreme Lodge, the Order East has been almost unheard of in all the great temperance movements of the past 8 or 10 years. At this distance one might have supposed the Order had died out there entirely, from any sign we could hear of its making. It has had great and good men at its head during this time, and always; estimable, progressive, hard working, pure and earnest men as could be found any where, but they have been alone and unsupported like President Hayes in his civil service reform, and more so than he was: thus any success for them, except in their sphere as private advocates of temperance and private workers, was impossible.

Bros. Hickman, Kanouse, Hastings &c, with pro per support and help and sympathy, could and would doubtless have done all that any one could do, but after election and the separation of the R. W. G. L. they were considered put away on a high shelf till next year and nothing in the way of progress or push or enterprise was either expected or permitted them. They had no helpers nor any resources to work with.

Bro. Katzenstein comes in under better auspices, for he lives in and is accustomed to an atmosphere of progress, and in whatever matter his present position may enable him to initiate or promote any advance movement, he will have no drones or pullbacks around him to rock him to sleep or tie his hands. He has without the least doubt the congratulations of the whole Order here on the honors he has acquired, and probably the Rescue now represents the sentiment of the entire membership of this jurisdiction in saying, that in his administration we expect a new spirit to be infused into the whole Order east, north and south and that in whatever he and his associates of the Executive committee of the R. W. G. L. may propose and undertake to that end, they will have the warmest support and most active sympathy and assistance from the Good Templars of California. In complimenting him npon his accession to that high Office, we all wish to remind him of its great responsibilities and opportunities of great usefulness.

The following from a writer in that very able journal the Lever (Detroit,) describes exactly the present relation of the politicians to the temperance reform. How long are we going to submit to be fooled as in the past?

"We must organize. The only lever by which you can move a politician—is fear. Just as soon as they fear they will respect you, and no sooner. This has been beautifully illustrated in the legislature this winter. When a radical temperance man or well-known temperance worker appeared on the floor of the house, even the temperance representatives did not care to be seen in close communication with him. Except in the case of an honorable few, their very presence was tacitly if not openly resented. On the other hand, the most prominent whisky men in the State have been welcomed with open hands (?) at all times, even to the obstruction of public business. The temperance men came to ask simple justice for the women and children of the State. The liquor men came to buy of corrupt legislators the right to murder innocence, kill affection, desolate homes, rob women, starve children and damn souls. Yet the latter were received with open arms and without a blush of shame, while the former were snubbed; Now, why is this? I will tell you. The amiable and sweet-souled W. S. George said once this winter, "Except a few fanatics, the church and temperance people will vote the Republican ticket in any event, but the liquor men cannot be held if you legislate against their interest." That is the whole secret. The politicans will cringe and eat dirt and lick spittle in the presence of power. If the new alliance acquires that power which comes of organization during the next year, and prepares for a vigorous warfare on every man who has betrayed us in the past and who cannot be trusted for the future in public office, there will come a wonderful change."

Subscribers this Week.—From Chaparral Bro. Sinclair sends three short term subscriptions. W. R. Culver of Colfax, 4. Bro. Loring from Callahans Ranch in Siskiyou county made a very welcome call and ordered a little club of six, five of which were at his own cost. Mrs. Stevens sends seven from Santa Barbara. Cordua Lodge subscribes for three copies for non members one year, Mrs B. F. Moore sends a club of ten from Tulare. Mrs. Doane two from Geyserville. That is up to Tuesday night, and Bro. Leland brings up the rear with a club of 8 for one year, 2 for 6 and 2 for 3 months.

May and June are lucky months, as it appears, for the Crowhurst dynasty. Their star is in the ascendant.

THE REVISED NEW TESTAMENT.

The Rev'd W. M. Thayer some months ago in the N. T. Advocate expressed his regret that Dr Crosby and mayhap some other interested enemies of temperance, should have been among those charged with the revision of the scriptures. It would be interesting to those who value those writings to know whether there were any total abstainers engaged in the recent translation of the testament.

It would seem not, from the fact that there is one very gross straining of the text in the new translation in 1 Cor 11: 21. "When therefore ye assemble yourseles together, it is not possible to eat the Lord's supper: for in your eating, each one taketh before other his own supper: and one is hungry and another is drunken" In the 33rd and 34th verses the apostle repeats "when ye come together to eat, wait one for another: if any man is hungry, let him eat at home.

It does not require the scholarship of an L. L. D. to know that the word "drunken" above is a mistranslation, and now a wilful one, for its falsity, (unintentional in the old version,) has been thoroly pointed out by the most eminent scholarship. The proper meaning of the word is satiated or surfeited. Had it been a question of drinking, and had the expression been "one is thirsty and another is "methuei," it would have been correct to translate it "satiated" and quite as allowable to call it "drunken": but it was eating that was in question and the word drunken is a misconstruction that it is probable no total abstainer would have been guilty of, and no habitual wine drinker would fail to take unfair advantage of, as a fortification and justification of his habits, and consistently with the depraving influence which wine has upon all who use it.

The French translation of that word which the old translators innocently, and the revisers wilfully, have misrendered drunken is "rassasie," which means filled or satiated and is never used in French to denote drunkenness. The Septuagint or Greek translation of the Hebrew scriptures uses that verb which is here called drunken to express "satisfied with the fatness of thy house;" "Let her breasts satisfy thee;" "I will satiate the soul of my priests with fatness" and in other similar instances.

In another place Eph 5; 18 "Be not drunk with wine wherein is "azotia;" the last word rendered "excess" in the old version, is "riot" in the new. Now it dont take a D. D. to know that both those words are incorrect translations, more especially the last. Other people here and there know that the word expresses the condition of an outcast or one beyond salvation. And that was the way Jerome rendered it in the 4th century when he wrote that Paul in the passage declared the use of intoxicating wine at all by a christian to be a bar to his salvation.

And it looks as if Paul did mean that and was about right; for two judges, two statesmen, two ministers, two editors, two sailors, two politicians, —one of them a total abstainer, the other a wine drinker will in all cases where wine or drink, or the sale or use of it enters into the question, render exactly opposite opinions, decisions and judgments, and have always done so; and whenever witnesses who drink have been called to testify in a court of justice as to their having purchased liquor from one who sold it unlawfully, in 99 times out of 100 they never hesitated to swear openly to the most utter falsehood. And now the truth of the Bible is more than ever confirmed, when we find that "wine is a mocker" and "deceives" and "perverts the judgment" even of the translators of the Holy scriptures. It is but fair to presume that otherwise, where the mocker, was not interested and represented, the translation is faithful, for no one can doubt the ability, qualification and opportuities of the translators aside from that one blind spot; a little local prejudice seems however to have had its bias, as the English and American committees differed pretty obstinately on some matters of no great importance; the English being the conservative party.

WILD.

The Los Angeles editor of the Pacific Methodist quotes an item from the RESCUE of May 26, which claims that it and the other two temperance papers of the coast are the only periodicals which resist the empire of Satan, the worship of the golden calves, the destruction of the Sabbath and the moral and financial ruin and total damnation of the country, and says:

"It is a pity Bro. Wood is driven to this sad necessity—must "blow his own horn." (That is the way it used to be put down in Dixie)—Jesus said "sound the trumpet." Bro Wood should certainly have extended the comprehension of that parenthetical "except." The Methodist is certainly making resistance to the empire of Satan, to the worship of the golden calves, to the destruction of the Sabbath and the moral and financial ruin and total damnation of the country." There are others also in the same good work. The C, C. Advocate, Occident, Pacific, etc., we shall let them speak for themselves. The RESCUE is a good paper—we like to read it—Bro. Wood is a good editor—a little wild once in a while, as the above extract bears witness; but that it and the two exceptions it names are the only papers on this coast engaged in the work above designated is an assertion more extravagant than we ever expected to find in so good a paper. Zeal is a grand thing; but a little more knowledge along with it would save many a good cause the disaster of many a blunder. As a matter of course, everybody ought to take the RESCUE, and everybody ought to take the Methodist, and if they did, what a tremendous reformation there wonld be!"

The item in quesiton was written in anything but a boastful spirit, and a close examination of it now fails to find any indication of horn or trumpet blowing. But the necessity of a "little more knowledge" urged by Bro. F. is most heartily concurred in. That was the burden of the RESCUE'S song in the paragraph objected to, and is so all the time.

The RESCUE has a thoro knowledge of the fact that the empire and host of Satan are entrenched in tremendous power and numbers all over this coast, and particularly in this city. There are here all around us in this city about 4000 of the vilest temples and pitfalls of hell, and a larger number elsewhere in the state—openly and publicly and day and night and Sunday, making a business of blaspheming and deriding our God, our Sabbath, our gospel, the ministry, the Christian religion and every moral and virtuous principle or practice of our country; blasting by wholesale, by thousands every day, the lives and properties and souls of the people; keeping the gates of hell wide open to entrap everybody's children as soon as they are able to hold a beer glass or puff a cigaret. "Bro. Wood" does "get wild about this once in a while," and prays to get seven times wilder about it all the time; and wonders that the whole press of the state except the three papers named seem to be perfectly satisfied with the condition of things, and have never a square open word to say about it.

The wine interest is overshadowing this state, too, with the deadliest curse that ever blasted any civilization, threatening with its twin leprosy of filth, the accursed brewery, to overwhelm the choicest gardens of this beautiful clime with a reeking Gomorrah of vice and debauchery. But the papers named are the only ones that raise a finger to resist, repel or deprecate this rising tide of iniquity. And, Bro. F., no journal, secular or religious, will ever help or bring any reformation until it makes war upon the seat of the beast and casts down the temples of Satan; no revival, can be genuine or lasting, that is at peace with Satan's throne, the grogshop, and tries to go around it silently. In fine, the RESCUE aims to make no statement or assert no doctrine that the most eminent and excellent Christian men and women of the day, experienced and alive in the temperance warfare, will not heartily endorse and and assent to. For telling the truth boldly it is sometimes called to a reckoning, but Bro. F. will be just as "wild" himself in a year or so to come, as the R. is now.

YOLO COUNTY DISTRICT LODGE.

The above named lodge convened at Knights Landing May 27, and 28, and held its fourth quarterly meeting of the seventh year. There was a large attendance of Good Templars from all parts of the country, and delegates from all lodges were in attendance.

The lodges were represented as being in good condition, having ihitiated a larger number in the last quarter than any previous one, our membership being larger than ever before.

There was much work of importance done, and all present seemed more earnest than ever to help along the great work before them. Work among the young and extending the circulation of the RESCUE, had especial prominence. Bro. Stuart of Woodland was elected County Superintendent of juvenile work, and a committee of one from each lodge was appointed to aid tne W. V. T. to procure subscribers for the RESCUE; and a purse of ten dollars was made up as a prize to the one getting the largest number of subscribers.

Two new lodges have just been organized in the county, and everything points to this quarter being the most prosperous ever known in the temperance cause.

M. C. WINCHESTER, D. S.

A GOOD SIGN.—H. A. Smith of the San Francisco cash grocery, 519 Post St., has during the past week enlarged his store room to nearly four times its former capacity. He will now be prepared to fill orders more promptly, and will always be found at the bottom of the market. He extends thanks to the good people of this state who have favored him liberally with orders and helped to demonstrate that a grocery can be successful without the sale of intoxicating liquors.

BIRTHS

BORN—In San Francisco June 3rd, to the wife of Prof. Wm. Crowhurst, a son.

REPORT OF THE BRANDY COMMISSIONERS.

It is interesting to notice the generous amount of imbecility and stupidity with which the wine and brandy apostles credit their listeners and readers. They represent wine making countries as fabulously rich, whereas in Spain, Portugal, Italy, Hungary and Greece, the most exclusively wine and spirit manufacturing countries, the most galling, miserable, degraded, begging poverty is almost universal among the masses. These countries ought to be the bankers, not the beggars and paupers of the world, if wine and brandy manufacture was enriching.

FRANCE

Is a pretty wealthy country, because its people are immensely industrious, economical and patriotic. Wine and brandy are exported in ordinary years to the amount of 45 million dollars; other products, almost entirely manufactures, are exported of eighteen times that value, so that it does not look as if the prosperity of France was either due to its export of its materials of drunkenness, or to the drunkenness of its people at home. Between one-eighth and one-ninth of the cultivated lands of France are in vineyards; they produce about 1000 millions of gallons of wine, about one-seventh of which is made into brandy. Of the whole product, one gallon of every 25 is exported, and the other 24 are utterly wasted at home, not producing one ounce of flesh or bone of man or beast, not contributing one particle of nourishment or force or heat or fuel; but occasioning idleness, vice, pauperism, crime, debauchery, disease and death unspeakable.

France makes and exports almost everything, and imports next to nothing, except the raw material for her manufactures. Almost every Frenchman spends or keeps every penny of his money and property at home in France. He buys nothing except what is French if he can help it. And the French have an excellent land system and a protective and fostering government; the only drawback to universal prosperity and material comfort is their infernal wine business.

As to its wine and brandy, it produces 1000 million gallons, and wastes by drinking it about 950 million gallons of it. Thus it will be readily understood by reasoning people that it is as ridiculously absurd to suppose that France owes a dollar of her wealth to wine manufacture as it would be to attribute that wealth to the industry employed in catching the large crop of fleas which inhabit the houses of that country.

THE REPORT FOR 1881

Of the President of the Board of brandy commissioners says: "I have only to cite the following item from Mr. Wetmore's report to note the necessity of using urgent measures against the phyloxera

Imports in 1879 into France. 7 million gallons.

Import 9 mos, of 1880 into France, 14½ mil. gal, and the total importations of wine into France this year will probably exceed 100 million gallons, far in excess of total exportations." There is where the people of California are so generously treated as fools. To excite people here to plant vineyards for wine and brandy, they are told France has become rich in the wine business; but now having raised nearly 1000 million gallons, France must buy for her own consumption a large further quantity, for which she must pay out a hundred million dollars.

So much for the enriching process; here it is: If we employ one-twentieth of the area of this state in raising saccharine matter to rot into wine and brandy, and devote one tenth of the industry of the state in Chinese labor to that purose, we shall in any year of short crop have to spend 20 million, perhaps a hundred million dollars to import wine and brandy enough to keep our drunkards full till our grapes are putrified next year.

And again the monstrous yarn of France importing 100 million gallons of wine—where was that to be had? If that quanity was demanded of real wine from abroad to be used in France the price would go up to $5 a gallon all over the world. But the wine which was imported was British gin, potato whisky and whisky and other rot made from rice, grain, apples and all sorts of rotten offal in Germany. Belgium, England and Holland to be rendered by French art into the fancy brands of Chateau Iquem and such like things, that are manufactnred by industrious Frenchmen for 25 cents a gallon or less and sold to soft head Americans for $2 to $4 a bottle.

What will regulate the price of wine and wine grapes to the farmer in California will be the price of potatoes here and elsewhere. From the potato and the sugar cane and rotten grain or vegetable, all the choicest old brands of every kind of wine and brandy, including the purest sacramental alcoholic wine can be made at 25 cents a gallon and yield a large profit to the maker. And the liquor carefully made from potato whisky at 15 cents a gallon is just the same, just as good, and as wholesome, and as valuable as any that sells for $10 a bottle.

SOUTH AMERICAN EXPERIENCES.

FOUR.

There are some extensive mining districts in Colombia, which show very rich prospects as compared with the gravel mines of California. Hydraulic mining as practiced here would yield fabulous fortunes in that country, but for one seriously unlucky drawback. None of the gravel banks known have a depth sufficient to make work for a monitor, more than two or three or a very few days, or that will pay the expenses of setting a monitor in operation.

The natives make little pond reservoirs and toy ditches, and wash the gravel thru a sluce cut in the bed rock. With no tools but crowbars, an occasional pick and their "batea" or wooden pan, they make a living of 10 to 25 cents a day. Sometimes a fellow strikes a bonanza and realizes a fortune of 80 cents or even a dollar in one single day. Several well authenticated cases of this kind have occurred in the last half century.

Miners will readily understand that in ground which is rich enough to pay 15 or 20 cents a day to the hand; working down gravel with a crowbar into a sluce of about six or eight miner's inches of water with no head at all, a fortune could be soon washed out with a good stream from a powerful monitor and all proper appliances. But such a stream would wash away everything within its reach in a very short time, and can never be used there to produce any result until somebody invents a portable reservoir, portable ditches, portable monitors, portable pipes and sluces, so that the whole mining works can be shouldered every morning, carried away and set to work in new diggings.

WOMEN MINERS.

The gentle sex of African descent in that country work very industriously in every department of gravel mining. They excavate ditches thru rock or clay with pick, shovel and hands; assist in building dams; they pick up and throw all the stones out of the sluces and do all the panning. They are quite the equal of their other halves in industry and get away with about an equal amount of tobacco and native rum. They are not at all airy about the nature of their employment, but they are somewhat airy in the matter of dress. In that warm climate they like all the fresh air they can get, and when at work outside or in their own homes they dont often dress much above the waist, with the exception of wearing a wide brimmed hat, made of the broad leaves of the country, quilted together, and a gold necklace with a pendant cross and possibly a bracelet and a finger ring of gold.

In the present stage of the arts and sciences in Colombia, the wheelbarrow is considered a too dangerously explosive engine, too erratic, too uncontrolable, too apt to run away with its master, too intricate, too fearfully and supernaturally contrived, to be used or entrusted except in the experienced hands of a foreign engineer. Sometimes a native male with long continued training and an uncommonly enterprising, ambitious, intelligent and courageous disposition to build on, learns to run a foreign wheelbarrow on a dead level with a smooth 18 inch plank to run it on, for a short distance, but that fellow is a Watt, a Fulton, a Stevenson or rather a Blondin of his race and day, and can only be encountered or found on rare occasions.

But here comes in an instance of the real indispensible usefulness of woman. She makes one of the best and safest and most useful substitutes for the wheelbarrow ever known. The men hew out of a block of wood about three feet long a resemblance to the oldfashioned tray or trough once used for mixing bread. This is called a "pondo" and carried full of stones or clay or mud on the head of a woman is the wheelbarrow of the country. It is convenient, easily replaced when broken, it is non-explosive, dont run away, and can be managed and controled by almost any one who has never been educated in a college or a steamboat. When employed by piece work or under a vigilant overseer this engine will move a load of fifty pounds, but when under pay for day's work it dont care about overloading itself with more than six or eight pounds weight because more than that might too soon wear out the pondo.

Where men and women work together for wages, they will contrive if allowed, to work turn about. For instance a man is excavating soft rock with a bar or pick; the etiquette is for the woman or two women perhaps to squat down and look at him till he gets two or three pondo loads dug out; then he takes a rest and looks on till with the most intensely elaborated deliberation of movement the debris is all scratched up and deposited in its destination, even to the finest pebble. Having had a comfortable smoke in the meantime Don Antonio or Don Pedro now satisfies himself that the aforesaid little task has been accomplished, and then he deliberately prepares to dig out another load. Working by task or for themselves they are not so punctilious on the etiquette of labor and capital. These people were slaves up to 1851.

There are many places where drift mining is carried on, but this work is almost exclusively performed by Indians, who, if possible, entirely separate themselves from the Africans. The Telembi is a very rapid river and runs thru a mining country the most of its course. It is supposed that large deposits of gold dust must have been washed into it. There are at various points of the Telembi extensive bars of sand and gravel in which many people are pretty constantly employed when the water is low. The lower the water the richer the find. They wade out at these times and fill their bateas with their toes, and it is said they make large money as wages go there. The river sometimes rises twenty feet in one night with the heavy rains of that region.

Mr. Gil Segura, a very faithful peon of the writer's, on being asked about the gold in the river, stated that there was no doubt about it, but it could never be got. "Why not?" "Well there was a stranger once here who made a sort of caisson to reach the bottom of the river, and then with the help of a lot of peons, he bailed the water out so low that he succeeded (the stranger) in dipping up a bucket full of wonderfully rich dirt, mostly gold; he immediately dived for another, but all of a sudden while he was under water a terrific thundering commotion took place below; the water boiled up in foam with a great noise, the caisson was smashed to atoms; they saw the man's heart floating away among the fragments of the caisson and the water was bloody all round." Oh, an aligator got him, eh?" "No; it was not an aligator nor shark. It was the big black fish that is guardian of the river. He stays down under the bottom in the ground, and only comes out when some danger is about. "Ever see him, Gil?" "No; I never saw him. It is a well known fact that the first time a steamboat tried to come up the Telembi, that fish put his nose against her stem and backed her stern foremost clear out of the river into the Patia, and the steamer rowing all the time all she could; and the big black fish kept her out every time till she gave it up and left. That is a well known fact."

"Any diamonds ever found here, Gil?" "Not many: there was one found however some years ago about five miles below Barbacoas." "Yes; how?" "A Moreno (African) was coming down the river in his canoe and saw the diamond rolling down in the current on the bottom. It was throwing out gleams like stars in all directions. He went for it with his paddle; it of course made as they always do the most active jumps and slides to escape; but he got his paddle firmly on it and got it into his canoe." "What did he do with it?" "Sold it in Barbacoas." "How much?" "Oh, he did not know its value and got cheated; sold it to one of the merchants for about $7000" "Yes, how big was it, Gil?" "It was about this size;" opening his hands about 9 or 10 inches to indicate the diameter of the diamond. "Did you see it?" "No; it was before my time." "Well, Gil, if it was that size he sold it too cheap." And Gil believed what he said was the bottom truth.

THE RESCUE,

THE ORGAN OF THE

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

$5 Outfit sent free to those who wish to engage in the most pleasant and profitable business known. Everything new. Capital not required. We will furnish you everything. $10 a day and upwards is easily made without staying away from home over night. No risk whatever. Many new workers wanted at once. Many are making fortunes at the business. Ladies make as much as men, and young boys and girls make great pay. No one who is willing to work fails to make more money every day than can be made in a week at any ordinary employment. Those who engage at once will find a short road to fortune. Address H. THE NEW HOUSE AND ITS BATTLEMENT.

THE ANNUAL SERMON AT THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE.

From 5,000 to 6,000 people assembled on Sabbath, May 1, at 3 p. m., to listen to the annual sermon in connection with the National Temperance League. It was preached in the Metropolitan Tabernacle by the Rev. Joseph Cook, of Boston, United States. The vast building was filled in every part.

The preacher chose for his leading text Deut. xxii. 8, "When thou buildest a new house, then thou shalt make a battlement for thy roof that thou bring not blood upon thine house if any man fall from thence." He also read the following parallel texts: "It is good neither to eat flesh nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak;" "And I have led you forty years in the wilderness, your clothes are not waxen old upon you, and thy shoe is not waxen old upon thy foot. You have not eaten bread, neither have you drunk wine or strong drink, that you might know that I am the Lord your God;" "And the Lord spake unto Aaron, saying, do not drink wine nor strong drink, thou nor thy sons with thee when you go into the tabernacle of the congregation lest you die; it shall be a statute for ever thuout your generations, and that you may put difference between holy and unholy, and between unclean and clean.

Under a thoroly free government the extension of the suffrage to ignorant and intemperate populations inevitably places the scoundrel class at the head of affairs. A drunken people cannot be a free people. Are we theretore to infer that free governments are so dangerous that we must consider them condemned of God's Providence even in these late ages of the world? Britons and Americans are not likely to be of that opinion, for if there is any one thing for which we have suffered more than any other outside of our religion, it is civil liberty, representative government, freedom of political opinion. I am not now touching at all upon the differences between American and British civilization-but I am asking you to notice that on both sides of the Atlantic we are free, all of us, Britons and Americans are under the government of representative institutions. Evil opinion expressing itself by means of the ballot has opportunity to do harm in Britain and America, such as it cannot do in any other countries of the world less free. By as much as political freedom is extended, by so much drunkenness amongst voters becomes a national mischief, sometimes threatening the very life of institutions themselves.

This, then, is the new house we are building in modern days—civil liberty under representative institutions. What is the proper battlement to be placed around the roof? How are we to preserve this mansion from bloodguiltiness? How are Americans and Britons to solve the problem they have been discussing for centuries—the question how a government of opinion under representative institutions may become safe and worthy of the blessing of Almighty God?

The future of government of people by the people, and for the people is inseparably bound up with the cause of the sobriety of the people. I am not about to deliver a secular address; but, as I speak here to-day as an American, and could not deliver a British address if I were to try, I must be allowed to say that Americans have made up their minds that the safety of freedom such as theirs is closely connected with the spread of temperance among the voting populations. You are sometimes told that the cause which I am to defend to-day has advanced further in the United States than in these crowded islands. Possibly that is the case. But if it has grown to a more commanding height there than it has yet reached here, I do not think the result is to be accounted for by saying that the churches are more in earnest there than here, or that American society is more saturated with conscientiousness or has greater sobrtety of mind than yours. I make no such arrogant or futile claim. But it is to be claimed that Americans would suffer more under intemperance, among voters and especially in great cities, than you would suffer, because we have extended the franchise further than you have done. It is not unlimited with us, but it is very extensive, and we have built this house of civil liberty so far up that we perceive with distinctness the peril of falling over the edge of it, and so we feel convinced that we must build a battlement to preserve us from bloodguiltiness. That battlement we find in the temperance cause. National safety under universal suffrage depends on the two great provisions referred to in these parallel texts, a nation of abstainers—a priesthood of abstainers.

The pillar of fire was a temperance leader. Is there any other leader that can take us safely thru perils of popular government? To what did the pillar of fire lead? To a nation of total abstainers; to a priesthood of total abstainers. God's chosen people, when under his special care, were trained to the practice of total abstinence. During forty years they drank no strong drink nor wine. They were settled in Canaan as a nation of abstainers, numbering not less than three millions (Deut. xxix; 6). Their priesthood was to be made up exclusively of abstainers. We are convinced in America that God's model for his ancient commonwealth is the only safe model for a modern commonwealth under representative institutions. To follow God, said Seneca, is the height of political wisdom. If we are to be followers of the most significant voices of Providence in our hazardous time we must take upon ourselves the duty of building a battlement around the roof of the new house civilization is constructing. otherwise it is impossible to avoid blood guiltiness.

All this you say, is good sense concerning America with her advanced use of free suffrage. You admit that it is beyond dispute that, under the institutions which prevail on the other side of the Atlantic, an intemperate voting class cannot be endured. You say you can understand very well why it is that popular sentiment is so emphatic in this matter beyond the sea. American church members in the Northern States do not easily excuse a young man in the pulpit who drinks wine. When a young man is passing thru a course of theological study, and is about to enter the ministry, and is known to carry the Bible in one hand, with a wineglass habitually in the other, we are apt to refuse him support. We do not say this concerning an old man in the pulpit; but there are so many young men coming forward with correct habits that we feel that it would be flying in the face of Providence to take a man with incorrect habits and place him before the people as a leader. Public sentiment is stern on the other side of the Atlantic as to moderate drinking among ministers. I think I have never heard of a minister falling thru intemperance. I never heard of an American theological professor being deposed from his chair for intemperance. I never heard of any prominent church member falling into open habits of intemperance. In the Northern States of the American Union we do not count the preachers who are total abstainers. but those who are not.

We have been told over and over again that the lady who was the wife of the late president in America turned the wineglasses upside down in the White House, and she had in that act the support of the best portion of the public sentiment in the United States. You have heard of a general who led the armies of the North in the civil war who had been intemperate, but who became a total abstainer, and who to-day in all companies turns the wineglass upside down. These are characteristic examples of American public sentiment. You have heard of license laws carried up into laws of local option; you have heard of prohibitory laws on the other side of the Atlantic; you have heard of constitutional prohibitions there. Why do I mention these things? Simply to show what a deep under current of fear and anxiety there is in the new house beyond the sea as to the battlement at the edge of the roof. We are convinced that immense political dangers must come from an intemperate voting population. Give the ballot to Whitechapel and Seven Dials, and ask how you will feel about the cause of temperance. Let the slums of London vote as those of New York do—let the government of London come under the control of the supporters of the liquor traffic as often as that of New York has done—let this city suffer as much in her municipal institutions from the effects of intemperance as New York has done, and I believe you will have temperance sentiment here even stronger than ours. It is because you have not extended the suffrage as far as we have done that you do not feel the terror we feel on the other side of the Atlantic from the intemperance of the masses.

Although it is clear that Ameriea cannot maintain her institutions unless she is very stern concerning intemperance, you do not perceive that you are in a similar case. I am anxious to make an appeal here this afternoon that shall go to the hearts of men in business. I am anxious to make this topic seem of practical urgency to Britons. * * * * Your lower houses of legislation are many of them representative institutions, and the question is whether you can bear to have an intemperate voting class in London, in Paris, in Berlin or in any other large cities. * *

Who are they that elect the Lower Chamber in France? The citizens of the age of twenty-one. Who are the electors of the Lower House in Australia? Citizens of twenty-one with a small property qualification. Who in Persia? Citizens of twenty-five classed according to taxation. In Germany in the individual states, what determines the composition of the lower chambers? Universal suffrage. In Great Britain? In towns the householders who pay poor rates, or in counties tenants who pay a rental of £12. In Italy? The citizens of twenty-five who pay £1 12s. in direct taxes. In Greece? Manhood suffrage. In Portugal? Citizens having an income of £22, In Netherlands? Citizens who pay £1 12s. in direct taxes. In Switzerland? Males of twenty. In Sweden? Citizens of twenty-one with a property qualification of £66. Do you need the battlement around your new house?

You say I have no right to introduce these topics here? I am preaching from my text, and I tell you as Britons as I would tell Norwegians or Swedes, or Greeks or Frenchmen or Swiss or Germans, that the day is coming in the progress of civilization when you cannot afford to have an intemperate voting class electing your lower houses of legislation. Civilization is building a new house and you will come ultimately I venture to predict to the American sensitiveness in this matter of intemperance among people who possess political power. You will do this as a matter of social and civil prudence. You will be forced into it as a matter touching your purses and throats. The time has arrived when it ought to be proclaimed that the minister who is a moderate drinker, the professor of theology or any conscientious person who sets a wrong example in this matter, is hindering the formation of sound public sentiment such as is required to secure the building of the battlement which is absolutely necessary to preserve the new house of civilization from bloodguiltiness.

There is nothing that prevents the formation of a righteous public sentiment on the matter of intemperance so much as the example of the educated and the conscientious class. My appeal is to this class, and I proclaim in the name of bloodguiltiness we are likely to incur without this battlement to our new home, the necessity of building the battlement. It may appear strange to you that on God's holy day I preach these truths, and bring a subject of this kind before the people, But I think it high time this topic should be taken into the closets of Europe as I know it has been taken again and again into the places of secret prayer in America. Britons will respect my appeal on this point because if there is anything the British race loves it is representative institutions. It is in your blood to love them. You are likely by-and by to be thrown into the position of Americans and find that the friends of representive institutions must either throttle their love of strong drink, or throttle their love of freedom. That is exactly the case on the other side of the Atlantic.

You send up a balloon from Hyde Park on a clear day, and with a glass you may see the homes of four or five millions of men. Send up a balloon from the Central Park in New York city when the atmosphere is clear, and by the aid of a glass you can look upon the homes of two or three millions of men, Modern populations are massing themselves in cities. The misgovernment of a great town under representative institutions is a proverb. The faster cities grow the more rapidly do we come into the need of this battlement around the edge of the roof of our new house. But it is a fact that on both sides of the sea the cities are growing faster than the rest of the population. London increases faster than England, Berlin than Germany, and Paris than France, as well as New York City than the State of Massachusetts, and Chicago than the State of Illinois. In the United States we had only one twenty-fifth of our population in cities in 1800. Now we have more than one-fifth. Some of your statesmen look across the Atlantic, and say that there is not one American city of over 200,000 population that is well governed. I repel that accusation. Nevertheless, there is too much ground for it. We are troubled by an ignorant and intemperate class, derived largely from immigration from all lands, We have learned that we must educate them, and make them sober, and that otherwise in great cities our form of government will be a farce. You will find ultimately in Great Britian trouble in managing your cities, unless you reform the perishing and dangerous population. Let socialism raise a conflagration on the Continent; let Communism and Nihilism acquire any large degrees of political power beyond this little thread of water you call the Straits of Dover; and although I believe that the British working man is one of the most sensible of human beings, and one on the most loyal, I fear that some spark from the Continental conflagration might start an unpleasant flame on this side of the channel in your intemperate population. If a preacher is to be effective in reforming the slums, he must go down into them, as Guthrie went into the Cowgate in Edinburgh, a total abstainer. If you do not awaken to the cause of temperance in its depth and height you will have political trouble here, and America will be only one step in advance of you in walking into the perils of the extension of the suffrage to an intemperate population. I am endeavoring to touch a topic not often discussed. This relation of the battlement to the roof of the new house has never been enough emphasized in the discussion of my theme. Cities are growing in size, and with all their growth increase the difficulties and importance also of managing the dangerous classes. Such management is impossible while moderate drinking is maintained among the leaders of the best portion of public thought and action, and while the church is inactive on this matter, and while social sentiment rests in a luxurious calm amongst the more dignified and educated circles. My appeal is to the conscientious and intelligent in the name of their duty to society to build this battlement around the edge of the new house lest we have bloodguiltiness brought upon the mansion.

Is there anything in the Bible to overturn the two great principles recognized by the ideal commonwealth of old, that the people are to be total abstainers, and that they should be led by a priesthood of total abstainers? The ministry is substantially sound on this theme. I need not appeal to them, for they know both sides of the subject. They know that there are two sets of interpreters of certain passages about the miracle at Cana, and as to the use of wine by our Lord. I am not to enter into debateable matter to-day. This I claim, that our Lord was consistent with Himself; that His morality was at least as high as that of the Book of Proverbs; and that whether you say this or the other thing concerning minute matters of textual criticism, you are uttering blasphemy if you suppose that He, reading the command, "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his color in the cup when it moveth itself aright," created wine of that sort and gave it to the guests who had been already several days drinking intoxicating wine. You are uttering nothing less than blasphemy if you suppose that He who was in all things obedient to His Father, He who therefore must be supposed to have yielded glad, affectionate obedience to these commands concerning wine, and to have been loyal to the Old Testament, which was His Bible—you are guilty of blasphemy, I say, if you suppose that He put the bottle to His neighbour's lips. Is there any consistency, in your interpretation of the Bible? I proclaim, without fear of contradiction, that there is nothing in the example of our Lord to justify our modern social drinking customs.

Consider that distilled liquors were not known in the world till the year 1150. The process of distillation came into Europe at that date from the Moors. Suppose that you were to sweep out of existenance all distilled liquors, then you would bring the world into something of the condition in which it stood during the time of our Saviour. The absence of distilled liquors would make the more terrible form of drunkenness and alcoholic disease impossible. It was against the lighter drunkenness of a world which had in it no distilled liquors that the fearful Biblical denunciations of drunkenness were launched. The Bible denounces wine as a mocker, and proclaims that the weak strong drink of ancient times at the last biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. What would it say of the fierce and poisoned potations of our days? Our race has been tempted more by intemperance than were the races to which our Saviour directly spoke in Palestine. I suppose no portion of the human family has suffered as much as the German and English speaking races from intemperance. Mr. Gladstone has said that these races have suffered more from this cause than from war, pestilence and famine. Frenchmen have not suffered as much; Italians have not suffered as much. Mahomet made a whole nation total abstainers. The weakened Oriental has suffered less from intemperance than we have. It is true our homes have been measurably free from polygamy; when barbarians we were exceptionally pure in our social life; but from old we have been given to carousal, from of old our weak point has been the love of strong drink. To be concluded next week.

TEMPERANCE INCONSISTENCY.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. SIX.

Temperance people must awake to the fact that the dram-shop is a political institution. We have said that the dram-shop was the tap-root of drunkenness, so we now say that the tap-root of the dram-shop system, is the Ballot-box. This must be a battle of politics. Prohibition is strictly a political measure, and necessitates the use of political agencies, hence political action is a necessity. Hon. E. C. Delavan, that noble temperance apostle, long ago said "It was folly to pray, preach, lecture, buy and distribute books, and tracts, if we were not willing to carry out our profession and practice by the use of the ballot."

A senseless fear of taking this question into politics, has paralized our efforts in the past. The Rum Power, shrewd, rich, and determined is thoroly organized to-day to uphold the dram-shop system. Liquor Leagues and Brewers Associations exist all over the country as a political power, to defeat temperance legislation, and alarm and control our public men.

We are confronted by a well-drilled foe who is intrenched behind political power, and laughs to scorn our modern temperance aggessiveness.

What cares the rum power for the pledge system, and Good Templarism; or any other ism that storms his fortress with snow balls? As long as the grog-vender can sell, and tempt the fallen, he feels sure that his craft is in no danger even tho under the shadow of the church or Good Templar's Lodge. He defies our puny efforts at moral suasion.

But let it become a battle of politics let the ballot become the stone in the sling of public sentiment, and this giant begins to tremble, because with this we may smite him to the earth. We ought to have begun this fight at the ballot-box, 50 years ago. It is true that but very few votes could have been enlisted in favor of prohibition, at that time, but the same is true now, and it is doubtful if our long delay has aided us. Israel might as well have entered the Promised Land at first as after 40 years wandering in the wilderness.

Had we seized the ballot, and struck for decisive, aggressive warfare we would stand to-day the victors in this contest. But with our boys and girls play, our jolly good time sort of warfare we are a laughing stock to our enemies; and demoralization, indecision and a time serving conservatism paralizes this reform in this state.

We have little respect for those builders who appear to build in ignorance or contempt of the fact, that this reform belongs both to the church and state and to neither exclusively. It is a joint labor and it must be burned into the conscience, that only by combining a political movement, with whatever moral and religious influence we can muster can we succeed. This reform must be brought to the polls, and settled there.

If the dram-shop were simply tolerated like other branches of trade, if we had free rum we should have but half the work to do for there would be no bad law to unmake before we could make a good one.

Now we have to kill license in every form, this legal sanction to the traffic, whether it is by the state as general license or by the people, as Local Option, or license or no license, for it amounts to nothing else. You may call it permission to prohibit by the people, yet no logic can evade the fact that permission to prohibit carries with it permission to sell, if the people want it, so that Local option is, in plain English, license or no license, let us not try to conceal the true weakness of this plausible, and pretentious scheme for destroying the rum traffic. When we have repealed all license laws our work is just begun, we have only removed the rubbish out of the way and are prepared to build rightly. Hence we say give us free rum in preference to any law involving License. Our starting point then is to secure right law instead of unmaking bad law before we strike.

All our moral efforts, our preaching, lecturing organizing &c will avail nothing so long as the dram-shop has the sanction of government. Let this be withdrawn, and it would soon become intolerable to the public generally, and total prohibition would soon come through the ballot box.

"I can't trust you," said a rumseller to an impoverished customer. "You should let liquor alone; if you handn't drunk so much of it, you might now be riding in your own carriage." "And if you hadn't sold it," retorted the victim, you'd have been my driver."

CAMP MEETING.

Good Templars and others who are readers of this, should think over themselves and talk to their neighbors about the Temperance Camp Meeting to be held at the Redwoods of Guerneville commencing June 30th and including the glorious fourth. They cannot honor the day in any manner so appropriately as they can by celebrating it and consecrating it to an effort to secure the independence of our country from the wickedest and cruelest tyrant that ever afflicted a people. And there is no place in the State where they can find a pleasanter or more salubrious retreat from the summer heat for a few days: to say nothing of the opportunity of seeing the redwood monarchs of the Guerneville grove.

Our Good Templar friends from all quarters that can make it possible, should visit our Guerneville brethren on that occasion and see their Enterprise Lodge, and their hall and their banner Juvenile Temple and how they run the temperance cause generally there.

If there is anything which we should exert an extra effort to keep up and push to a success and endeavor to work into a permanent 4th of July institution, it is that Redwoods Camp Meeting. Enterprise Lodge will make no failure in the arrangements: dont let the attendance be a failure.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

RED BLUFF, June 4th 1881.

Tehama was reached by cars by 7.55 P. M. Here we found an audience of 29 awaiting a lecture some social party having been gotten up—Sunday night, too—and Good Templars having been wilily led away from the meetings. But on our return on Thursday night, a much larger gathering was held and considerable enthusiasm aroused.

Riceville was visited on Monday night and a large meeting held An unpleasant difficulty having occurred only about four weeks before, and nine having withdrawn from the Order, etc., the audience seemed like an iceberg—cold and immovable. On Wednesday night, some "saloonitic" worshipers had tried to break up the meeting but all to no purpose; the audience was larger than before, and several good names were obtained for the Lodge. Although less in numbers, the Lodge is stronger than before.

Elmore on Tuesday night, turned out an excellent audience. Cheerful and enthusiastic feeling prevailed, and resulted in the institution of Paradise Lodge with 26 charter members—George Malcom, L. D. Thanks to Bro. Sapper of Riceville for kindness during this trip and work, Dr. B. B. Bonham deserves credit and thanks for valuable aid in both of the above places.

Red Bluff was reached by the kindness of Mr. Charles Harvey of Tehama—trustee of the Tehama Presbyterian Church, in which we lectured—and the Tehama Co. District Lodge had just commenced its session. Much was done for the Good of the Order and cause. This will be reported to the RESCUE by the District Secretary, Bro Dr. Jeffress. The face of our G. W. V. T. was cheerful as ever. Her husband, Rev. Bro. Mayhew, has just been appointed superior judge of Tehama county. Bro. A. Ryan, the District Deputy, is earnestly planning for successful work of which we shall speak hereafter, (Marysville Lodge has forwarded a very handsome vote of thanks and appreciation to Bro. Crowhurst for his excellent services in that city and district, Ed.)

DR. MERRICK.

The picnic of the Good Templars of Alameda county at San Lorenzo grove on May 30th was a pleasant and enjoyable one, the attendance was not as large as had been anticipated owing to the fact that it was a "national holiday" and very many members of the order were engaged elsewhere. Speeches by the G. W. C. T. and myself together with games, &c constituted the order of the day. The gathering was an eminently quiet, respectable one. The session of the Alameda District Lodge at San Leandro in the evening was short the lodge merely opening, doing a little formal business and closing to make room for an open meeting. The hall was well filled almost as soon as it was opened. The order of the evenings entertainment consisted of music, songs, readings, recitations, after which the G. W. C. T. was introduced and made a "few remarks" which were listened to by the audience with the most marked? attention; after the speech of Judge Thompson and during a recitation by Sister Ida Wilkins of Brooklyn a serious disturbance was made by some roughs, a general stampede of the ladies took place and the meeting was really broken up, although I endeavored to utilize the outrage by appealing to the law abiding citizens to join us in our efforts to suppress a traffic that would resort to such means to perpetuate itself. The dastardly outrage will undoubtedly result in good to the order and the cause.

The first of a series of open monthly meetings of Garden City Lodge in San Jose was a grand success. The music was fine, the readings and recitations unusually good, and the lecture—well it was listened to attentively, and that too when the audience knew that ice cream and refreshments were waiting for them in the refreshment room.

F. J. CULVER.

We started up the coast on Tuesday, stopped at Occidental, found the new lodge there in excellent condition; it has already accomplished much good. Wednesday reached Fisks Mills found there was no place in which we could have a meeting, and but two or three families living here. Drove to Fisherman Bay where we found Bro. Simmons, and here took up our abode. Thursday morning found us very sick with cold, fever and chils combined; but we thought we must fill our appointment at Lancaster Ridge, so Bro. Simmons drove us up. After supper repaired to the wee'st school house we have seen for some time; some twenty gathered in, it was a pleasant meeting. No hope of resuscitating lodge; it was born and buried on the same night. We were so unwell that we gave up second meeting and returned next day to the bay. Here we find a great change has taken place; with the opening of spring a good many of the inhabitants moved away, the hotel, store etc. changing from a temperance man's hands to a saloon keeper's, so that whereas in the past eighteen months the town was free from a den of vice, to-day one is in full blast, breathing forth its poisonous odor. Last Sunday, the proprietor after selling one man liquor enough to make him lose his senses, who in a boxing frolic chanced to get the better of said proprietor, and knocked his hat quietly from his head where upon there spectable saloonist, got angry, knocked the reeliug man down and beat him shamefully; that's nothing, he is licensed to steal the man's brains, then there's nothing but the brute left, and there is no law against cruelty to animals.

We lectured on Saturday and Sunday evening but few people living there; were small audiences. Bro Simmons is hard at work, fearless in speaking against the sin of intemperance.

THE NATIONAL LIBERATOR.—This new publication has come to hand, a four page weekly, the page nearly twice the size of this. It is a handsome and able paper, has a fine portrait of Governor St. John and is devoted to the most important interest that affects the nation or the individual—the prohibition of the liquor crime. The price is only 50 cents a year or 11 copies for $5. There is no doubt that it will contain the best prohibition documents and articles, and the importance of sustaining this enterprise and disseminating temperance literature in this manner cannot be over-estimated. No one is too poor to take a sound temperance paper at 50 cents a year.

Bro. J. O. March reports Dayton Lodge at a little over a year old as making good progress since the visit of the G. L. Lecturer.

GEN. GRANT seems to think the people still desire him and Conkling to superintend the administration of the national government.

THE NATIONAL Live Stock Journal has an article headed "Why raise Sheep?" No one here insists that he must raise them; he need not if he dont want to.

CATALINE CONKLING and his man Friday Platt are pictured by Nast as two unruly boys that want something, and Mother America is supplying her idea of what they want with the broom.

SUBSCRIBERS this week. Mrs. Stewart sends club of 10 for one year from San Diego and is going for more. Bro. Walter King, Stony Point, club of 10 for 3 months. Bro. Leland had bad luck this week and only gets in 2, but Mrs. Stevens brings up with a club of 14 for a year from Lompoc.

NIHILISTS.—The Detroit Evening News a strenuous anti-prohibition journal declares it has authentic iuformation of the existence of a saloon keepers Nihilist Confederation, a secret society whose purpose is to burn the property or attack the persons of active temperance workers and sympathizers.

PATRIOTISM is defined by the adherents of Conkling, both here and elsewhere, as working and voting for the election of parties and individuals who will repay your vote and work in spoils. That was exactly the pattern of the patriotism which inspired Benedict Arnold. The patriotic machine is a noble institution.

THE Dixon Tribune very properly condemns the prostitution of the State Agricultural Society into "a jockey club" and a pool selling nuisance. There were last year nearly $15.000 paid at the fair for premiums on public gambling and less than half as much for the encouragement of agriculture. That Society under its present name is a burlesque.

J. R. WHITLOCK of Paskenta writes: Bro. Wm. Crowhurst is doing a valuable work hereabout and handles the rum traffic without gloves, we expect a pleasant time and great benefit to the Order, we have initiations every meeting, with an occasional rare expulsion.

I acknowledge thru the RESCUE the receipt of three sample copies of the National Liberator, published in Chicago Ill, by R. W. Nelson and extend thanks.

THE City of Pekin brought to San Francisco on Sunday 9 Japanese seamen taken from a Japanese wreck at sea on May 27th about 300 miles east and a little north of Yokohama. They had been blown off in a typhoon on the 14th of December and having lost masts and rudder had been drifting helplessly nearly six months. Fortunately they had some beans and fish and caught some rain water, but their provisions were nearly gone. They had probably been blown away in the typhoon to the south and east of the Philipine Islands and when rescued were in the strength of the Pacific stream carrying them northeastward; probably the passing steamer afforded the last chance of their ever being seen alive.

VERY CROOKED.—A report comes from Forestville that seems exaggerated. The very mildest part of it says a minister preached there last Sunday against all temperance societies, made sport of the pledge and total abstinence and quoted "be not unequally yoked with unbelievers" to prove that the church should have nothing to do with these things; said the "womens crusade was a farce, a shame, and disgrace:" these are the mild parts of the report. Well, that is a good argument for temperance and for the truthfulness of scripture. It goes to prove that when a minister unequally yokes himself to the bottle "wine is a mocker:" it mocks and abuses and perverts and uses him as a tool of satan just as it does any body. But it was evidently not a minister at all.

OREGON.

Since 31st March a copy of the RESCUE has been mailed to every Lodge of the I. O. G. T. of Oregon on every Thursday, and also to a number of other subscribers—to 67 Post-offices in all. A notice was received from Albany some time ago that the Lodge paper was not received, but it was afterward reported all right. Bro. E. W. Ryan, of Portland, now writes that he (L. D. of Nonpareil Lodge, No. 86) has received but three copies and for several weeks past none. If other people in Oregon have failed to get their paper they would oblige us by reporting it to this office so that the reason may be hunted up. There is no guess work about them being mailed here. They are properly and carefully and securely wrapped and properly and correctly addressed here every week every time without any chance of mistake whatever. These two weeks past the Post-office officials have been asked to forward them by steamer, and if they cannot go safely overland they will be sent that way. If the RESCUE cannot get to Oregon the same as other papers, the reason will be sought for. Please report any failure by postal or otherwise. No one wants to subscribe for a paper which don't come every time regularly, nor does any one try to run such a paper.

COLUSA CO. DIST. LODGE.

Met at Willows on the 2, and 4th June. Col. Goulding was present with us, 6 lodges represented and nine reported in good standing, fighting Alcohol. Thirty delegates were entitled to seats; some lodges failed to be represented owing to the distance away and harvest being so near that the delegates could not come. However we are still on hand for duty, and when Col. Goulding gets thru lecturing in this county our enemy will be very sick. with no hopes of recovery. The Lodge Com. selected the route for Bro. Goulding to lecture,

Bro. Goulding delivered a good telling lecture at the Willows, had a very fair audience. The Order is still growing in the county. Lodges reported doing well with but few exceptions. The next meeting of District Lodge will be held at Colusa on the first Friday and Saturday in September. You will please take note of this so that all will see and know when it meets. We hope Bro. Thompson will then be with us. We all had a good time every one pleased with the meeting. Fraternally yours,

JOHN B. HEUITT, D. S.

REV. F. FENN.

On the 17th, to-morrow evening, the anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, a literary and musical testimonial will be tendered to Rev. F. Fenn, at Irish American Hall, Howard street, between Fourth and Fifth. Addresses will be made by Judge Ferral, Hon. Geo. E. Turner, and Mr. Fenn. It is expected to be a highly interesting affair, and as Bro. Fenn is a worthy and active member of our Order it is to be hoped every body will be on hand. Tickets, 25 cents, at 805 Market, 116 Post and 6 New Montgomery Sts.

HEALDSBURG, June 8.

Dr. Merrick's efforts here are highly appreciated. His argument on "Prohibition by the will of the people" was clear, full and convincing, the dropping of seed thought which must yield a good harvest. On Monday evening it rained, but our turnout to the open Lodge meeting was fair; I hope to report some of the results ere long. Dr. Merrick is a Grand Lecturer, and it is a cause for rejoicing that our executive has recognized that fact. We shall be glad to have him visit us again. This visit and that of Bro. Culver have given us a boom.

W. T. MAYNE.

INALIENABLE RIGHTS.

"Question not my right to poison,
To corrupt and to abase
Souls and bodies of my kindred,
Heart and reason of my race;
For by act of legislature—
Constitution—law of land,
Mine full license to make broader
Gate of hell, and to torment,
Burn, to craze in quenchless fire
Them that love my snares and baits:
Little fishes are for greater
Bread and butter." Noodles prater.

Even thus, oh Noodles, mighty
For to mix strong drink for weak,
None disputeth right of vermin,
Beast or serpent, life to seek,
Such their nature. But remember:
As thou metest, so thy mete;
Yea, a burden is for asses,
And for back of fool, indeed,
Is the rod of swift coercion,
Most convincing slow in faith:
That society needs must fetter
Beasts of prey insatiate;
Must protect itself gainst evils
Fostering brazen sin and vice,
If it would not fall forever
Unto such a sacrifice.

TEMPERANCE INCONSISTENCY.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. SEVEN.

It cannot be denied that the temperance reform has been embarrassed by a system of operations, founded upon mistaken notions. As we have said, the greatest need of the hour among temperance people and church members is common sense and consistency.

The present appathy and feeble efforts in reference to the suppression of the rum traffic is largely due to misapprehension and wrong education in reference to temperance principles. Blinded by greed, the victims of debased appetite, the slaves of unprincipled politicians, we have shut our eyes to the true nature of this terrible struggle with the rum power. Our state and nation must realize that the liquor traffic as embraced in the dram shop is the tap-root and the main support of intemperance, and that the dram shop is an intolerable nuisance. Every church member and temperance worker must have it burned into their conscience that to suppress this traffic, we must appeal to the ballot, the last argument of republican freemen.

These truths are to prohibition what the fundamental rules of arithmetic are to the subsequent parts of that science. We have yet to learn these first principles. Our ignorance is wilful and criminal, for the grog vender is plying his trade of death everywhere, and with open eyes we witness the invasion of all the just rights of humanity.

This is no secret foe in the minds of the commonwealth of ignoramuses, but a brazen well-armed, boasting Goliah, who bids defiance to the most cultured, most intelligent and most enterprising people in existence.

We know enough of the sad doings of rum, for the social evils of intemperance are everywhere, but we seem shamefully ignorant of the proper method of aggressive warfare. Let the pulpit, the platform and the press continue to agitate and circulate our temperance literature, and thus manufacture public opinion; but do not allow all this to be neutralized by the chronic lack of common sense and consistency.

Prohibition rests upon facts that are, or ought to be familiar to everybody. The greatest obstacle today in the way of total prohibition is the inconsistency of professed prohibitionists.

Let church members and temperance workers dissolve partnership with rum and license parties, and we could soon strike a telling blow to this accursed business of drunkard making. Let us cease to uphold the traffic, and it will soon be annihilated. We have denounced the rum sellers, and yet have authorized them to sell by voting for rum party candidates. We have not acted the part of sovereigns. Party has been placed above principle, until the consciousness of individual responsibility, which must form the basis of intelligent citizenship, has been almost destroyed. What is a political party? Simply an aggregation of persons of similar views and objects, seeking greater strength by concert of action. When it fails of this, when it misrepresents one's convictions—when it becomes effete, representing nobody but office holders, and regards success as its chief necessity; when it lives only in the past, and is so intent on its own preservation as to ignore living issues and refuses to keep step with the progress of the age, then it is time to abandon that party and consign it to the grave as no longer worthy to be the herald of a great reform and the fearless advocate of principle.

If any political party goes down in proportion as temperance goes up, let it die, and let its honored epitaph be, died of enmity to the dramshop, blessed are the dead, etc. But the party that ignores principle for success ought to be consigned to oblivion. Now look at existing parties. The whisky ring controls both. The dramshop is the life of both, hence neither dare dissolve its connection with it. Both believe in licensing the liquor traffic, and neither of them dare make an issue against the dram shop; at this election they are competing for the rum vote and at the next for the temperance vote, and a party not openly opposed to the liquor traffic will always engage in this competition. And thus the moral intelligent temperance voters of this nation for the sake of party and nationality have submitted to the dictation of the Rum power and seen our principles ignored time and again. Shall we thus continue to hold our temperance principles in abeyance merely to preserve a party organization and to secure a party triumph?

May our eyes be opened to our criminal inconsistency!

THE MARK OF THE BEAST.

We require no more telling and conclusive evidence of this mark in forehead and in hand—thought and act—than advocacy by its bearer of vice and its sources. Let its motive be draped or disguised as may be; be its exponent great or small, the substance of this mark is indelibly written upon the product or normal issue of the tree and its fruits. If a professed minister of the gospel of Christ Jesus advocates gambling under any plea whatsoever, this mark simply protrudes seven furlongs.

If a lay christian endorses traffic of any vice promoting comedy, to gain any end whatsoever, let him quickly renounce allegiance to, or membership of a cause thus dragged to eternal reproach by hypocrites and moral hottentots from the beginning. Let him serve evil in his own name, and not in the name of Him who was crucified for us. Thus his sin will not cry to heaven forever, and his mark of the beast will not expand with unpardonable blasphemy.

Goodly ends or fruits are simply impossible with evil means. As the seed and tillage, so the harvest invariably. The devil promises any and everything desirable, and means in abundance, and of endless variety, to serve God and mammon—Christ and the flesh—the Holy spirit and the interests of the beast of carnal self. Borrow of his wares and his mortgage on your soul is never canceled until paid for with chastenings suggestive of possible torments infernal. Until canceled, the image of this mortgage, is, in spite of marks and protests, as plainly visible in word and works as tho written with the finger of destiny. Of course where wit is lacking to distinguish between Christ and Belial, or where idiotic endeavor to subject Heaven's cause unto aid and comfort of unmitigated selfishness or beastliness, it is the obvious issue of spiritual and intellectual inertness, or chronic dissimulation of gospel hardened lunatics. Charity should cover these marks. Omnipotence alone can eradicate them.

Again, let the infidel, the heathen, the professed enemies of salvation, be the apostles of vice and corruption. Rather a hundred open foes than a single sneak or traitor in the army of the Lord. We fear not the former. But the mental and moral insignia of the latter is the body of the abomination of desolation, standing where it ought not.

LETTER FROM C. H. PETERSON, S. D.

Concluded.

About the first of March I stopped at Visalia, Tulare county; visited the lodge in the evening, I met one of the old workers, Bro Zumwalt L. D., made a short speech and had a good time. Bro. Haines formerly of Amador county is W. C. T. and telegraph operator. Visited the lodge at Lemore, same county the latter part of March, Sis. Travis, W. C. T. in the chair; I had the honor and pleasure to preside, and initiate two candidates, had a general powwow and enjoyed myself exceedingly. Members very sociable, membership rather small but earnest. Success will eventually crown their efforts. Temperance work is needed very much at Lemore, and the whole Musseli Slough country. When Bro. Crowhurst was at Lemore it was raining and storming very much; as a consequence he was unable to accomplish much. One evening at a place for the purpose of working up a cause and lecturing on temperance don't amount to much, except when the dose is repeated soon afterwards.

I visited Amador April 14th; was truly astonished to see how much the lodge has increased in membership since my visit last year. They are busy as bees gathering in the temperance workers, and leaving King Alcohol's subjects in the minority. Bro. Johns and others are working like beavers. Elderly men who have drunk liquor all their lives as well as the young join the lodge. I conversed with several parties from Amador county, who informed me that most of the lodges thruout the county are building up and disseminating the principles of temperance and morality, as a consequence the rumsellers losing cast and losing their customers as well as the dimes. Stores which were selling liquor are closing out. I heard that a saloon keeper who has been selling liquors for years is going to quit the business. I am proud of Amador county, my old home; the climate is fine, excellent good water, the mineral deposits are numerous and it has numerous good quartz mines. Agricultural lands are not abundant but it contains considerable valley as well as mountain land, and has plenty of pine and oak timber, and what is more it contains some of the dearest and oldest friends I have in the state; and may they all live long in temperance and plenty, and may we see the day when the rum traffic will be banished not only from Amador county but from the Golden state we love so much.

INDIANA MINISTERS AND THE TEMPERANCE CAMPAIGN.

Rev. E. T. Curnick says in the Monitor Journal: * * * "The contest is a square struggle between right and wrong. It presents tremendous issues of life and death, and as such, certainly demands the study, sympathy and support of every minister of the gospel.

The pulpit is one of the greatest agencies ever established to awaken thought and action upon moral and religious resolutions. This was demonstrated during the agitation of the slavery question. The slavery caused by strong drink is as much more destructive than bodily servitude as the eternal loss of the soul is greater than the temporary bondage of the body.

The time has come when the ambassadors of Christ must speak again with vehement, irresistible and divine power. We believe if the ministers of the gospel will be faithful and fearless in advocating the temperance cause during the next two years, prohibition will thereafter be an assured fact in the State of Indiana.

The advocates of anti-temperance in the State are already organizing their forces for a systematic and desperate struggle. It is expected of the minister of the gospel that he be in the front rank of those who oppose this enemy, whose heart is full of evil, and whose hands are red with murder and blistered with avarice.

The God of temperance demands of the minister that he lift up his voice like a trumpet, and present the matter of temperance reformation in its true light, before his people. * * *

He should preach pointedly and repeatedly upon the subject of Temperance. He should hold no man guiltless before God who patronizes the men or the means perpetuating the curse of intemperance. * * * The temperance men of Indiana must be invited to regard every man and every party as subversive of good government that antagonizes the divine precept of temperance. To the pulpits of the State is largely committed this task of raising the question of temperance far above party devotion in the minds of good upright citizens.

It is not out of the purview of the minister of Christ to circulate pledges for the reformation of the individual drunkard; nor obtain signatures to petitions to legislative bodies, requesting wise and safe temperance legislation. * * * The minister should make strenuous effort to attend such conferences. He should take with him the gospel characteristic, "wise as a serpent, harmless as a dove," and yet he should be outspoken in suggesting and devising advanced modes of temperance work."

GOLETA.—Sister Stevens has been with us and gathered a rich harvest. We initiated 25 last meeting, and there are 13 propositions on the books to be initiated next meeting. Lodge now numbers 88. If we could have Sister Stevens here for one week, we would have this entire neighborhood initiated, and working in the temperance cause.

THE MRS HAYES PORTRAIT.

The ladies who have this matter in charge have promised that "the engraving is to be a beautiful and finished production of a skilled artist." It is natural for people who have never made any engravings themselves and who have subscribed $5 for this one, to begin to expect their picture after a month or two. There is no doubt they could have found an artist who would have made one of his first class engravings with a jack knife and a chisel in two or three days, but the pictures from it would only have been worth ten cents a cartload. But as it has been determined to make this an artistic production worthy of its great purpose to commemorate a noble and heroic act of one of America's noblest women, the utmost care has been taken to ensure its excellence, and no doubt every one of the recipients of the picture will approve the result.

Onr friends must therefore have patience and wait a while longer: for their information the following extracts from the announcement of the Testimonial Committee are given.

Daniel Huntington of New York, was selected as the artist. Mr. H. gave his work at large discount. Pleased with the commission, delighted with the winsome woman who so courteously time and time again made the journey from Washington to give him sittings, the work grew rapidly, and in the last days of the sojourn of President Hayes at Washington the completed portrait was sent to that city. It passed triumphantly the ordeal of loving jealous friends in New York and in Washington; it received the highest encomiums from the one who would of necessity be the most severe critic, President Hayes himself. It was formally received at the Executive Mansion by President Garfield, and hangs on a panel in the east room, the complement to the lovely portrait of Martha Washington. But the exquisite jewel is to have appropriate setting.

To the School of Design in Cincinnati, under the care of Benn Pittman, was confided the carving of an oak frame. Mr. Pittman entered upon the designing of the work with great enthusiasm, freely contributing his own labor, and it has grown in beauty under the deft, trained fingers of the young ladies of this world-renowned school. It has been advertised that to each contributor of five dollars an engraving of the portrait will be sent. The preparation of this engraving after much consultation has been entrusted to Mr. Barrie of Philadelphia, and his name alone is guarantee of the finest results. The plate (steel) will measure 16½x10 in., printed on India paper, laid on the best plate paper, giving a picture measuring about 30 x 20.

There will be given a very limited number of artist's proofs at ten dollars each for those desiring them. There will also be a number of impressions taken with an engraving of the frame, thus giving an exact representation of the whole picture in its appointed place. Each subscriber of five dollars can elect for engraving with or without the frame. These engravings will be in readiness November 1, 1881, and will be immediately and carefully sent to the subscribers without cost to them.

While it may seem a long time to wait we can assure each one that every part of the work is being and has been pressed just as rapidly as could be done to insure first class execution. It is really being accomplished in marvelously short time, and we are sure the result will be most satisfactory. Many hundreds of engravings have already been ordered for parlors, for lodge rooms, for halls of W. C. T. Unions, school rooms, etc., etc., and it is hoped and expected that during the intervening months subscriptions will be received for many more. It is the opportunity of a lifetime to receive a beautiful picture and to commemorate a noble Christian principle.

Send names and money to the Treasurer, Miss Esther Pugh, 54 Bible House, New York.

Any sums received, acknowledged and applied to defraying the expenses.

TWIN EVILS, INTEMPERANBE AND TOBACCO.

Dear Rescue:—The occasion of the award of prizes by the Woman's Christian Temperauce Union to the public schools of Oakland, is one long to be remembered. Monday evening, some time before half past seven o'clock, scores of bright eyed children with their parents and friends were seated in the First Presbyterian Church, and others kept coming until it was well filled, They were too eager to be restless, too intent on the important question: Who, who are to have the prizes? We all noticed the taste of the decorations which were lavished on every hand by those who love to work in the noble cause.

Precisely as the hour the organ pealed forth its most ringing notes, and the audience was called upon by the chairman of the evening, Judge Nye, to sing "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," which was done with enthusiasm. Remarks by the chairman followed explaining the occasion for which the audience was convened, and closing by reading the names of those to whom the committee awarded prizes. Applause followed and continued until the announcement of the reading of some of the best essays, which was done in a very acceptable manner by the following young ladies: Miss Addie Eliot, Miss Lizzie Boyer, Miss Kate VanArdale, Miss Maude Howard and Miss Mary Havens. The essays were selected from the High School and grammar grades with a view of variety, and showed research and thought, sprightliness and sentiment, and were creditable alike to the teachers and scholars. Dr. R. H. McDonald of San Francisco was then introduced by Judge Nye, and his remarks were listened to with a great deal of interest, especially by those who know that he has offered $800 to the Cal. W. C. T. U. to be used in prizes in the public schools of San Francisco for essays upon the twin evils, Intemperance and Tobacco."

After singing "America," the young ladies and gentlemen who had won prizes came forward to receive them which were awarded by Mrs. P. D. Browne. Pres. of the Cal. W. C. T. U.

This lady to whose earnest efforts the whole matter is due, made a few well timed and forcible remarks, impressing the facts that this is a war to the bitter end with the temptations that surround our youth, and the hope of the "union" is to carry this matter of essay writing into every school in the state and on the coast. She directed attention to the motto above us, "Our schools our hope," and said that the able manner in which these children had written these essays showed the faithful work done them, and added that the committee had been very much embarrassed to choose among so many well written papers. The prizes were three of them $7 each to the three classes of the High School, one of $5 to the High school, eight $5 prizes were given to the A and B divisions of the first, second, third, and fourth grades of the grammar schools. Many beautiful boquets were presented to those of whom honorable mention was made by the committee. The chairman closed with congratulations to the young people and good advice drawn from personal experiences and best wishes for their future. This report is taken largely from the Oakland Tribune.

We do urge the lodges of the I. O. G. T. to take hold of this matter in every town. Where enough money cannot be raised for individual prizes, a certain sum can be given to the school having the best quality of essays, and have three or four schools of the same grade compete together. Our society will soon send out its circular letter on this matter, and after a number of towns have followed out the plan we are promised by a wealthy gontleman a very large prize to be offered as a state prize.

Let us all give a long pull, a strong pull and a pull all together in this direction.

Yours in F., H. and C.,
M, E. Congdon, Sec.

ALCOHOL EVERYWHERE.

M. Gaston Tissandier states that "M. A. Muntz, of the French National Agronomical Institute, announces that he has discovered traces of alcohol as a natural product in cultivated soil, rainwater, sea and river-water, and the atmosphere. He has detected the product, it is true, only in the most infinitesimal quantities,, but he has established the fact of its existence by analyses which are at once simple, clear and convincing." This discovery would seem to strike the temperance people between wind and water. For if alcohol is in the soil, the water, the air we breathe, it must have some positive and presumably useful function to perform, and it must also be certainly useless to try to avoid partaking of it. The water-drinker at once ceases to be a teetotaler under the light of this discovery, and the person who thinks to save himself by drinking toast and water is at any time liable to a frightful debauch. The temperance societies must certainly inquire into this matter, for, if it be true, they have sustained a heavy blow and a great discouragement.—Record-Union.

In compounding that sparkling nosegay of crooked imaginings, a useless extravagance of too willing tears and over affectionate sympathy were evidently wasted. The societies will still live on under that "great discouragement." They have made other discoveries that comfort them in this crushing affliction. They have been getting scientific light on the prenatal and inherited tendencies of alcohol, not in the sea and air, but in the human system. It appears conclusive that to these only is due the indisputable fact, that so many men, who are fairly intelligent in other respects, are so helplessly idiotic and reason-bereft whenever they try to grapple a subject with which any moral question is directly or indirectly associated. An alchemistic unknown thinks there is an inifinitesimal millionth trace of alcohol in the sea and soil and much more largely in cesspools. Nothing but the theory of prenatal and accumulated hereditary obliquities could account for the quint-infinite fanaticism of announcing that alcohol must consequently have a positive and useful function to perform as a beverage.

It is a pity to see so much notice taken of Dr. Howard Crosby's assault upon temperance. He presented not an argument of the least force by which any body but a rumseller or a rumseller's poor deluded victim could be misled. His present attitude is most valuble to the cause of temperance and christianity, for he is a living and very conspicuous example of the power of wine to delude and mock and transform a polished scholar and a magnate in a christian church into a bullying, abusive and lying enemy of everything that is honest and and decent and virtuous. He is the Judas Iscariot of his day, and has taken active service as the renegade apostle and bully of the infidel horde of manslayers and debauchers who are packed together to run out God and morality from among American institutions. That is the truth and nothing more. He is in the hands of the debaucher wine and cant get out. Let him alone.

"The Transcript of Sackville, N. B. says the liquor bill of the United States is 14 million a year, which is only about 7,000 to 10,000 millions out of the way." An exchange copied that item from the Rescue: but made it a great deal worse than the Transcript; the figures were 700 to 1,000 millions. According to the customs returns and if there was no smuggling nor adulteration the retail liquor bill of the U. S. would be 600 to 700 millions: but it is fair to believe frauds and cheats bring it up to a thousand million. Every day in many places too a single glass or a very few glasses of beer or whisky costs a man all the money he has about him, whether it be 50 cents or $500. Thousands of working men go into a saloon with 1, 2 or 3 months wages in their pocket and next day have not a cent.

LOS ANGELES.—Returning from the R. W. G. L. by way of the New Atchinson, Topeka, Santa Fe, and Southern Pacific routes, a stop over was decided upon, and made at Los Angeles, where we became the guest of P. G. W. C. T., Bro W. D. Gould and his estimable wife, P. R. W. G. V. T., Sister M. L. Gould, whose hospitalities and courtesies we enjoyed to the utmost. Many of the prominent workers in our cause were met, and were found to be the leading men of the community in the trades, professions and business circles of the place. To write up what was seen and experienced during the brief period of 48 hours would require a volume. The temperance work is in safe hands in the southern portion of the state, and is making itself felt in every circle and avenue. A very pleasant and entirely impromptu reunion of the members of Merrill Lodge, No. 299 was held for our benefit taking the form of an informal reception. In view of the fact that the meeting was convened on about four hours notice and only by personal notification of members, which called out an attendance of over sixty members of the lodge, the occasion was considered as complimentary as it was pleasing and satisfactory. The drives enjoyed thru the orange groves with the trees, laden with their crop of "golden apples," the beautiful gardens and lawns, the drives thru the Pasadena settlement with its air of calmness, order and thrift, thence to Sierra Madre villa at the base of the mountains, from which the villa takes its name, and overlooking the valley on to the old church at the Mission San Gabriel are pictures carefully stored, the brilliancy of which will never fade from memory.

Ol D Siloam.—Siloam Lodge No. 2 was in high feathers last Saturday evening and indulged in a celebration after the old style, the occasion being the return to its fold of one who went out an humble member and returned with the highest honors the Order can bestow. Everybody seemed joyous and happy and the Lodge kept "open house" to all of its friends, and dispensed refreshments of ice cream, fruits and cakes, with a lavish hand. Complimentary resolutions were also voted, and everything done that could be to make the Supreme Officer of the Order supremely happy in meeting with so cordial and happy a welcome in the family circle of his own Lodge.

Personals.—During the past week calls were received from numerous members of the Order all of whom had nought but kind words and cheering news to communicate. Among them were G. W. C. T., Bro. Robt. Thompson of San Francisco; P. G. W. C. T., Rev. Dr. C. S. Haswell of Lodi; D. D., Bro. J. C. Hawver of Forest Hill; P. D. D., Bro. J. R. Johns of Amador; Col. C. N. Goulding, Grand Lecturer; Bro. T. J. Pierce of Pleasant Grove; Bro. H. G. Murray of Sutter Creek; D. D., H. S. Graves of West Butte, and Bro. W. H. Henderson, W. C. T., of Samaritan Lodge, Chico.

Anniversary Day.—A desire being generally expressed for a day of observance within the I. O. G. T., at a previous session of the R. W. G. L., the historian of the Order, Bro. Rev. T. F. Parker, of New York, was appointed to ascertain the date of the origin of the Order, that it might be fixed as the proper anniversary to be observed from year to year. At the last session Bro. Parker reported the Seventeenth Day of July as the date sought for and this day was agreed upon and becomes the anniversary day ef the I. O. G. T.

Smiling May.—The month of May was an exceedingly active one in our work, with seven Grand Lecturers in the field disseminating temperance truths. Sixteen new Lodges were organized during the month, viz: 7 by Bro. Merrick, 5 by Sister Stevens, 3 by Bro. Crowhurst, and 1 by Special Deputy Bro. E. W. Turner, of Madera. The month of May closing with a record of eighty new Lodges instituted since the last session of Grand Lodge.

What Are You Doing to increase the circulation of the Rescue? You can advance the best interests of the Order in no other way so readily as by helping the Rescue. Are you doing it?

G. W. C. T. Department.

R. THOMPSON, G. W. C. T.

We required our Grand Lecturers to report thru the Rescue from time to time, and consistency indicates that Grand Officers should set them an example. It is well for the whole Order to know what its officers are doing. We are encouraged by example and stirred to action by the efforts and success of others. Generally what one has done another can do, and where success has resulted from some special plan of work, others, when they know of it will go and do likewise. Our Rescue carries the news to all the lodges and takes it into all our pulpits, and by this means all moral reformers are strengthened and encouraged in good works. But to my wanderings: I visited Tuolumne county in May. Met the Lodge of Sonora on the evening of the 6th While this lodge holds its own it lacks that aggressive spirit requisite to growth. It has the county-seat for a field; always the hardest in the county, and this requires an extra effort over that required in other towns. The D. L. meets here on the 18th June, and this will enthuse the Order and stir up the place. Our faithful worker, Grand Lecturer Hughes has the work in hand, and nothing short of success will satisfy him.

On the 7th the lodge at Soulsbyville dedicated their fine hall in the forenoon, and for that special object I was with them. The thoughtful brothers provided a conveyance from Sonora, and by ten we safely landed at Bro. Barron's. Good Templars from other lodges came to aid, and a good houseful assembled to witness the dedicatory ceremonies. The band gave good music, and all was harmonious and pleasant. Picnic dinner in the grove followed. Children's meeting in the afternoon, and then enjoyment and tea in the grove, after marching with the children thru the streets. The meeting for the real temperance work was at evening. House crowded, attention perfect: results, nine propositions and $75 for new hall. This left only $100 due on a hall costing about $800, built by a lodge started only ten months since. Good management and energy mark the history of this lodge. On Sunday morning I initiated the nine obtained the evening previous, and was kindly sent on my way to Jamestown for a three o'clock meeting. A pleasant meeting with two propositions for the lodge, which already has quite nearly swept the place. I found a pleasant home with Bro. C. D. Drescher, L. D. of Quartz Mountain Lodge, and his wife who is L. D. of Table Mountain at Jamestown. At evening Bro. D, as usual went to Quartz Mountain to attend lodge, and all was ready for an open meeting. Here too the lodge owns their hall, and has a debt of only $40 over it. All the younger element in the place seemed to be interested in the Order, and even a vender of intoxicating drinks and his wife were there, and encouraged their children to join and work for temperance. He said to me, "go on, you will get no opposition from me; I only keep it because my business demands it; I shall be glad when the demand shall cease. I will help you with money, but of course I cannot join you; yet I wish my children with you." This is the most sensible view I ever heard a dealer express.

Monday I was sent to Columbia by Bro Drescher. Public meeting with good attendance in the evening but owing to some little want of harmony, the members were not enthusiastic for additions just then. I found a cheerful home with Bro. Geo. McNeil, L. D., until 3 A.M., when the stage took me on return to the valley. The night over at Stockton with a visit to Stockton Lodge where I met Bro. B. F. Bagley, a S. D. and others, and a ride by rail landed me safely home on Wednesday, the 11th of May.

I was greatly encouraged by that trip. I found the G. T. generally thoroly aroused to the importance of their work. Wonderful gains are shown in Tuolumne county. She now has ten live lodges full of that earnest purpose that is certain to result in progress.

F. J. CULVER.

Manchester, June 9, 1881

On the 3rd lectured in school house Fish Rock to a good audience, secured several names for Gualala Lodge.

The 4th set out for Point Arena, a yellow flag floating from Main street warned us of the presence of smallpox as well as the deathly appearance of the town. We passed through to Bro. A. Fowlers and he advised us to go on to Manchester as there was no hopes of having meeting. Schools, churches &c closed. Reached Manchester Saturday evening, visited lodge, Monday evening rained, large attendance on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. The lodge is doing well, are now raising money to build a hall which is much needed, this once built will make the lodge a fixture. * * * We here enjoyed some of the most pleasant days on our trip and we hope the time may come when we may have the pleasure of meeting with these people again. Bro. W. W. Fairbanks gave us his company to all points of interest, you may look for a list of subscribers to the "Rescue" from time to time as well as a word now and then.

Manchester, Cal. June, 10, 1881.

Editor Rescue:—We started six months ago with a charter membership of 13 but have since increased to between 40 and 50; our principal drawback thus far, has been the lack of a suitable lodge room, but should we continue to prosper in the future as we have in the past, we shall doubtless soon build a suitable hall.

Being, nearly all of us, green hands, we have of course committed some errors and have doubtless had our share of petty difficulties to contend with, bnt the genuine interest that is shown by many, gives promise of future success.

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings last, Bro. F. J. Culver, lectured in this neighborhood to large, and appreciative audiences and from the eloquent earnest manner in which the speaker treated the subject, many have been brought to look upon the evil of intemperance, not as one of ordinary magnitude, but as one of the greatest evils in the land, and one against which every man, woman and child should wage a bitter and unceasing warfare.

What we most need is a number of just such earnest, practical workers as Bro. Culver; men who will at all times strike boldly and fearlessly at the very foundation of this liquor business, and who will iustill into the minds of the people, the necesity of action in this matter, instead of standing calmly by while friends and relatives are daily falling victims to the habit of intemperance. W. W. F.

San Diego, June 9, 1881.

Dear Rescue:—A case of glaring monopoly has occurred in the affairs of Golden Rule Lodge, No. 263. The Worthy Chief Templar T. J. Daily secretly and clandestinely induced the clerk of our courts to give him a license to have, hold and take, all for his own, Sister Sarah M. Arnold, better known as our "Dollie" W. R. H. S. of said lodge. "Dollie" is a universal favorite and when we the outsiders discovered in the "Union" this morning that the W. C. had gone and consolidated the offices aforesaid and that without a vote of the lodge we were all green with jealousy—there being no appeal, we submit and wish the parties all conceivable happiness.

Sister Stewart of Golden Rule Lodge has raised a club of ten for the Rescue. Sister S. is one of the very best workers we have in the temperance cause, the party who wrote the squib to the Rescue from this place about our Templars having all run so much to dancing that they had forgotten to read the Rescue, may now go to the foot of the class. A Band of Hope has been organized in good shape, Mrs. H. B. Rice is President. To morrow night the officers of Golden Rule Lodge go to National City to organize a new lodge—the order is in splendid shape here, thanks to Sister Stevens. H.

Pauperism.—The liquor trade in England having filled the workhouses with paupers, elects guardians and doctors to take care of them, who prescribe and provide an annual liquor bill for the workhouses of $575,000. But the tax payers have to support the paupers and the grogshops, the doctors and guardians and the liquor bill too. In 1881 over ten million pints of ale, wine and scorchthroat were used in the poor houses. And what is a little comical, in some of them there was from 4 to 10 times as much consumed per capita as in others. Of course there are wet and dry doctors and wet and dry officials.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the G. W. C. T., Robert Thompson, 1,531 Golden Gate Avenue, or the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, George Bramall, Haywards, or Geo. B. Katzenstein, 328 J street, Sacramento.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

CORAL ISLANDS.

Last week something was said of the coral insect tribe and what it is doing. When it has built up to the surface of the water it can go no further, but in course of time its works are upheaved by volcanic action, and as soon as a little sand and soil are produced by the wearing away and decomposition of the surface material, vegetation commences, and in tropical climates the cocoanut seems te be very soon a natural product of the soil without any seed or planting. It is formed on many islands where no possible method of its having been planted can be surmised.

Very many of the islands in the Pacific Ocean; in fact all of them in the tropical regions are encircled with a reef of coral. But in islands of any size there is sure to be a channel left thru this reef to form a harbor. The manner in which these channels are formed is very singular. The surface of all such islands of sufficient extent to be habitable is always more or less irregular, and therefore there must be one part of the island where the fresh water of the rains is collected into a brook or stream, and runs into the sea. The little builders prefer to have their habitation and interests and workshops in the saltest water they can find, therefore they avoid the fresh water resort, and when they have completed their chain of fortification around all the rest of the island a deep water channel remains for vessels to enter a safe and often commodious harbor.

At Honolulu a little river, a very tiny one indeed, drains off the rains from the hills, and as the little insects have for centuries kept clear of its fresher waters a channel deep enough and wide enough for large ships has been left there, and leads into a commodious basin inside. Ships can enter or leave under sail with a fair wind, and it has always been a favorite resort of whaleships. Before steamers were in use oxen were employed to assist in towing the vessels in, the cattle walking on the reef at low water. This channel has as evidently been provided with the end in view of making a harbor on the leeward side of the island as the bulkhead on the city front of San Francisco has been provided for the accommodation of ships. What human mind would have ever conceived the idea of working out a harbor and entering channel for ships by such a simple machinery as the leading of a little brook of fresh water in the direction desired.

CORAL BANKS.

There is a very extensive coral bottom in the Indian Ocean called the Saya de Mahla Bank in about ten degrees south latitude and 60 east longitude. It is about 190 miles long by about 150 wide and has a depth of 40 feet only in some parts tho it is several hundred miles from any land. Coming on this bank in the night, and seeing at daybreak the bottom all white and apparently only five or six feet deep, is at least exciting. The coral seems to be all in hummocks and every one you see right ahead looks so close to the top of the water that you feel a sense of relief when the ship passes over it without striking it: between the hummocks of 40 or 45 feet depth we used to find often 150 feet. That is no doubt going to be an inhabited land some day, but as the depth has not been measurably decreased in our time, it is probable that ships will sail safely over it for centuries to come.

Those little workers under the sea have undertaken a pretty saucy contract, to fill up nearly 30,000 square miles of ocean; but they are getting along nicely and only have now from 40 to 150 feet in depth to complete. We are accustomed to think a railroad does a giant feat when it fills up a roadway of a mile long, a few feet wide and 15 or 20 feet deep. But the little coral masons would laugh at such a puny undertaking.

QUACK SCIENCE.

LATEST FROM THE MOON.

Professor Proctor's last lecture before sailing for Europe was upon the moon, and it was very interesting. The moon does not revolve around the earth, he said, but the two circle about each other; and the real center of the revolution of each is the sun. If there were a railway to reach the moon, 238, 818 miles distant from us, we should be 13 months making the journey at ordinary railroad speed. Upon arriving we should observe several interesting phenomena. First, it is a very respectable luminary of a diameter of 2,081 miles, with a surface of 14,000,000 square miles, a volume of one-forty-ninth of that of the earth, and a mass one-eighty-first of it.

Then, the force of gravity being one-sixth of that of the earth, we could be thirty-six feet high and still quite as active as we are here. But our longer bodies would have a longer day in which to disport themselves, for there is a lapse of twenty-nine and one half of our days between the lunar sunrise and sunset. Our extremities however would certainly suffer after sunset, for the surface of the moon is 250 degrees below zero at midnight, and the reaction toward noon would try even our prolonged proportions; for at noon the surface would be thirty eight degrees above the boiling point. We should be very lonely, probably, for there is no living creature there now.

Still, as Professor Proctor had said that all planets pass thru five stages, the last of which is death—a stage which the moon has reached—the apprehensive mind naturally inquires how soon the earth will probably reach it. The professor answers reassuringly that the earth is now about 500,000,000 years old, and that it took the moon 80,000,000 to reach its present state. He therefore concludes that it will take the earth 500,000,000 years more to reach the same condition. There is thus no immediate cause for apprehension.—Harpers Weekly.

Dr Chalmers of Scotland once wrote a beautiful sermon on "The modesty of true science." He admired with good reason the absolute impartiality and honesty of the real enquiring science of his day, which asserted no positive conclusion that had not been established by cumulative and unquestionable evidence.

That is and must be a characteristic of the true science of all times and ages. Genuine science can neither assert anything of which it cannot demonstrate the absolute proof, nor can it deny anything in the domain of nature or ethics, which it cannot as absolutely disprove.

The modernly accepted science would astonish Dr. Chalmers if he could now return to listen to it. Its most marked feature to-day is its lack of modesty, its thoroly insolent quackery. Not so much in its assaults upon religious faith and authority, which it has a right to examine and criticize and assail if need be, but in pretending to have successfully established a system of creation and natural law, which is a thousand times more beset at every step with miracles and anomalies and impossibilities than the religious systems they have sought to supplant, not excepting the self evidently false traditions of the heathens. The modern usurpers of the chairs of true science have undertaken a contract beyond their capacity to carry out: to create this world and sustain it without a God!

The diameter of the moon, its distance from the earth and sun, its density and volume, etc. have been of course correctly ascertained, Its hours of day and night are known: but as to its temperature at the lunar noon and midnight, as to its atmosphere and absence of water and its being habitable or inhabited, there is nothing at all known, unless we set out with the theory that the Creator only knew one way to make and people a world. It is known that the moon has on one side no atmosphere, that is just like ours, no cloud belts nor oceans like ours. But it has on the side next to us tremendous mountains and wide valleys like ours. We have never seen the other side of it at all, which is of itself a miraculous provision of the Creator.

There is nothing whatever to prove that the moon has no transparent atmosphere or that God could not plan one; nothing to prove there is no water that is unlike ours in some respects; nothing to prove that it is not peopled by millions of some class of inhabitants.

Whenever Professor Proctor learns how to make a few planets and run them 500 million years, he will know a dozen ways of creating and sustaining animal life from the highest to the lowest, without such an atmosphere and such water as we have. He will be able to select from a thousand samples of breathing and nourishing mediums an air and a water, and a temperature regulating machinery to suit exactly the varifying conditions of his different worlds.

The doctrine of the moon's age is founded on nothing but bootless speculation, and it is by no means presumptuous to assail as an absurdity, the idea that the satellite and inferior body, the moon, died at 80 million years of age, and the earth the the superior (principal) partner will have to drag the corpse of its junior attendant for 920 million years. Apropos of this, it is not much more than a dozen years since the patent creation quacks asserted with as much arrogance, that the moon was as yet in its infancy, and so far unprepared for the maintenance of life. Its transition to mummyism has been rapid.

To suppose that the moon has a range of 500 degrees of our thermometer between its noon and midnight, is very absurd; that it is much hotter than boiling water at noon, is nonsense. But it is readily conceded that neither Proctor, Denton nor the RESCUE could contrive the proper conditions of the temperature there. Bogus science has often told us of comets being, when near the sun, so many times hotter than melted iron, and the distant planets so many thousand times colder than ice; all these ideas presuppose that the Creator can only work with our measuring rods and use our chemistry, which, as true science has revealed thru the telescope, is not the case.

The Charlatan scientist who asserts that the atmosphere of the moon is used up or worn out, and that its body has become rent and split and dead, and its seas have leaked down into the centre of that globe, talks the simplest nonsense. The density of the whole body of the moon is nearly three times that of our water and it would be impossible for a light fluid to gravitate to the centre (or bottom) of gravity and drive the heavy rocks and metals up to the circumference or surface.

The right to suggest theories is undoubted, but to assert as positive fact, any description of the natural history or present condition of the moon or planets founded only upon a system of natural laws precisely similar to ours, is not science but quackery.

KANSAS.

A gentleman writes from Carbondale, Kansas to the Kansas Methodist, since the grogshops have closed.

"Fighting, quarreling and brawling have ceased. Citizens living in the business part of town can rest at night undisturbed. The public nuisance and disgrace is removed. Our young men and boys will not be enticed away to places where soul, body and property are lost. "The lock up" stands empty. And we have hope that the generation, now coming, will be more sober than their fathers. Another thing, fathers and husbands who were wont to return home drunk, from whom wives, mothers and children shrank, now, return to their families, bringing food to eat, and clothing to wear. There are joy, peace and plenty, where once there were want and woe. Mother's tears will be wiped away, children will be better fed, better clothed and better schooled than heretofore. Our churches will be better attended, christianity will spread more rapidly, and the cause of education receive better support. Tongue can never tell, nor figures estimate the blessings which are flowing from prohibition. God hasten the day, when in all our states and territories, there shall not be found a place where intoxicating liquor can be procured."

What a blessing and comfort to the people of Kansas, that prohibitory law is. No more drunken families with shoeless and half naked starving children suffering and shivering thru the cold dreary winter. No more jailbirds and hoodlums to be raised there, The great murderous cause of all the evils and miseries and agonies of helpless women and children, the saloon keeper, obliged to stop his horribly wicked and cruel career. We are very soon going to have the same law in California and all over the country.

THE GRAND Lodge of Oregon meets at Hillsboro on the 21st June. Bro. T. J. Alley will be there, he says. The California fraternity will assuredly pray that the session may be a happy one and fruitful of benificent results.

"WE REAP AS WE SOW."

If there's anything settled beyond a dispute,
It is that the branches partake of the root,
That grapes grow on grape vines, and not on the thorn,
That figs on their own native branches are born.
There are some things we guess at, and some things we know,
And of this we are certain, We reap as we sow.

If we hand the cold water to lips that are dry,
If we speak a kind word unto each passer-by
If we welcome the stranger who waits at our door,
And clothe with warm garments the limbs of the poor,
Be they grateful or not for the good we bestow,
We must "Labor and wait," We shall reap as we sow.

If we govern our spirits while yet we are young,
If we master the temper, and bridle the tongue,
If we nurse in our bosoms the promptings of love,
And rise all our selfish ambitions above,
If we scatter heart sunbeams wherever we go,
The joy will return, "We shall reap as we sow."

I knew an old lady whose life was a groan,
And nobody loved her, so far as I've known.
When a child she was selfish and fretful and cross,
And seemed to take pleasure in other folks' loss.
Poor soul, she is gone. and perhaps she may know
In the new life she enters, "We reap as we sow."

I remember another with spirit so bright,
That wherever she moved there was gladness and light,
And the old, and the young gathered close to her side,
With that tender affection the heart cannot hide.
She is gone, blessed spirit, how well did she know,
As she often declared, "We will reap as we sow."

Believe me dear children each act that we do,
Is planting some seed that is likely to grow,
If base, or if noble, we surely will find
The season will ripen it, true to its kind.
The thorns we have planted will pierce us and show
The truth of this adage, "We reap as we sow."

The whole truth is this, boys, we get what we give,
We deserve just about all the joy we receive.
We are in the Lord's vineyard, and he will repay
In justice, the service we give in our day.
This world is a garden of good that will show
Our part in the planting. "We reap as we sow."

DANGERS IN BRINGING UP CHILDREN.

(Samuel Smiles "Duty")

The cruelty done to children by some parents as well as by teachers, is indescribable. Children are held to be of the same temperament, of the same adaptability to learn as their parents and teachers; yet the boy who cannot learn his lessons as quickly as another is thrashed, or he is degraded in some way. Grown people forget the intense misery to which children are thus exposed. The child's horizon is so limited that he sees no remedy to his woes, and his sorrow absorbs his whole little being.

"Fathers, provoke not your children to wrath, lest they be discouraged." If the life of a child be embittered, the result is shyness and secret aversion. Even a child feels itself wronged, and a sense of bitterness is implanted in its heart. We can never think without pity of a parent who lost a promising son by death, and was haunted through life by his parental severity. "My boy," he said to a friend, "used to think me cruel, and he had too much reason to do so; but he did not know how I loved him at the bottom of my heart, and now it is too late.

We often think when we hear of parents beating their children, that they should rather be inflicting the punishment on themselves. They have been the means of bringing into being the inheritors of their own moral nature. The child does not make his own temper, nor has any control while a child over its direction. If parents have conferred an iritable temper on the child, it is a duty on their part to exercise self-control, forbearance and patience so that the influence of daily life may in the course of time correct and modify the defects of his birth.

But the "child's will must be broken!" There is no greater fallacy than this. Will forms the foundation of character. Without strength of will there will be no strength of purpose. What is necessary is not to break the child's will, but to educate it in proper directions, and this is not to be done thru the agency of force or fear. A thousand instances might be cited in proof of this statement.

When the parent or teacher relies chiefly upon pain for controling the child's will, the child insensibly associates duty and obedience with fear and terror. And when you have thus associated command over the will of others with pain, you have done all that you could to lay the foundation of a bad character—a bad son, a bad husband, a bad father, a bad neighbor and a bad citizen.

When Eufordius of Cologne heard a great cry issuing from a school house he opened the door, entered and rushed up like a lion, and raising his staff against the teacher and his assailant, delivered the boy from their hands. "What are you doing, tyrant?" he said. "You are placed here to teach, not to kill scholars!"

NINETEEN DISTILLERIES CRUSHED OUT.

Missionary Emory, of the American Sunday-School Union, and an earnest temperance worker in East Tennessee, has been greatly cheered by a letter from a Union Sunday-School having sixty members, which runs thus: "All the 'still houses' that used to annoy and vex us have disappeared, and now the outlook is good. With the help of God, the prayers of the church, and the aid of the American Sunday-School Union, I think we shall succeed. But it will be hard for us to raise money for Sunday-school supplies. We are among 'hard-shell,' whisky-drinking people, who never have money for anything but whisky, which costs more now when they have to go into F——County for it." (Nineteen distilleries were broken up in the county in which the writer lives.) "One preacher who ran a distillery is here yet and not converted, but he is crushed out. He was in jail eighteen months, but that did not convert him. But three of the worst whisky men we had are now active in our Sunday-school."

FOR THE S. S. TEACHERS.

"A teacher being asked how many pupils he had, answered by saying, 'multiply the number of Jacob's sons by the times the Israelites went around Jericho, add the number of measure of barley Boaz gave to Ruth, divide by the number of Hannah's sons, subtract the number of kind of clean beasts that were in the ark, multiply the number of persons that went in search for Elijah's body after he had ascended, subtract Jacob's age when he stood before Pharaoh; add the number of smooth stones David selected when he went to contend with Goliah, subtract the number of furlongs Bethlehem is from Jerusalem, divide by the number of anchors cast out when Paul was ship-wrecked, subtract the number of persons saved in the Ark."

Give the chapter and verse where the several steps to the answer are found, and the answer, with the date of your finding, the true answer and your name.—Exchange.

MY LOVING MOTHER'S FACE HOW FAIR.

By Rev. W. A. Des Brisay, Temperance Sermonizer of the Episcopal Church.

My loving mother's face—how fair,
Still there Love's early roses,
In beauty bloom though lines of care
Times silent touch discloses.

There joy and peace have kindly met,
On every feature sleeping;
The Holy Light His seal has set,
Whose angel, watch is keeping.

The holy eyes that long ago
Watched o'er my childhood slumbers,
The gentle voice that soft and low
Sang love in sweetest numbers.

My weary heart on life's rough sea
Looks back o'er many a billow,
To one bright scene—still dear to me,
Her sweet face near my pillow.

My mother's loving face through years,
Our joys and sorrows blending,
Together oft in smiles and tears,—
May peace be thine unending.

No angel's face, in worlds above,
With purer light is beaming,
Than that dear mother's face of love,
Of which I'm ever dreaming.

My next unmurmuring bears the ocean storm;

My whole is a number you all can indite;
Now answer this riddle, answer it right.

BUTTE CO. DISTRICT LODGE.

Oroville, June 6th. 1881.

Butte County District Lodge met at the Congregational Church, Oroville, on the 4th inst. Ten Lodges were represented by 26 delegates, viz: Welcome 104, Victory 123, Samaritan 177, Fidelity 194, Webster 316, Northern Star 207, Dayton 285, Nord 289, Nelson 402, Rising Star 404. The delegate from Messilla Valley 413, was in town. but unable to attend, owing to other business. Other Lodges were not represented on account of the neglect of the District Sect'y to notify the Lodges of the time and place of meeting. D. D., J. B. Mullen, presided; the Sect'y being absent, W. S. Read was appointed Sect'y pro. tem. The D. V. T. being absent, Sister M. E. Geiger was appointed, and subsequently elected D. V. T., and W. S. Read, District Sect'y. The only business of interest to the Order at large was the appointment of a committee of 5 to secure the enforcement in Butte Co. of the Sunday laws. Bro. F. F. Carnduff of Victory 123, recommended that the committee act on the plan adopted by the people of Yolo Co. The distribution of temperance literature was recommended, and samples of temperance tracts distributed, but no definite action taken thereon.

Lodge adjourned to met at Dayton, 3d Saturday in September.

The Los Angeles Mirror speaking of the six lecturers in the field and of the work done by the Order, says:

The money to carry on this great work is contributed by those who have no hope of reward other than the satisfaction of doing good for humanity by promoting sobriety.

Those who contribute, however have the satisfaction of knowing that the financial matters of the Order are honestly managed, and every dollar accounted for and made to do the greatest possible amount of good.

The department of the work in this state that is not properly sustained is the circulation of temperance literature, There is probably not a better temperance paper in America than the Rescue, and still it is permitted to run, year after year, with a beggarly subscription list, that precludes the possibility of it doing a tithe of the good it could and ought to do if it had the circulation the circumstances demand and which its merits ought to command. We hope the time will come when the importance of the circulation of temperance literature will be more fully appreciated, and then the Rescue will take its place as the most efficient instrumentality in educating the masses in the truths of temperance.

San Rafael. The L. D. of San Rafael Lodge writes to the G. W. S. to "instruct the Resque people to send a copy of that paper" to him and adds "I believe that the two come here but of us the minister only gets one."

The Resque people inform the said L. D. that seven copies of "that paper" one of which has been directed to his Lodge, have gone to San Rafael every week for six months past and probably for years—and that if he had asked for it any one Thursday evening or Friday he would have got his paper every time, but he evidently never did. If, as he admits, the paper goes there, he will have to try the experiment of consulting the Postmaster or the delivery clerk about it, and then he will have to repeat the interview once a week. It is a wonder this idea did not occur to him during the last six months.

A banquet was given in May by the Christian Methodist Lord Mayor of London in honor of an eminent christian missionary the Rev. Robert Moffat. A great many toasts were drank in ratsbane wine, compounded potatoe whsky &c in honor of the Queen, the archbishop of Canterbury, the clergy and ministers, the missionary societies, the Rev. guest &c &c. And what is strange, even the great Canon Farrar who was present, acknowledged the honor. And yet those very same christians would make a fuss and turn up their noses at sober polygamy in Utah.

In England Mr. Gladstone's infamous proposition to license railway trains as groggeries, has drawn forth a host of indignant protests.

New lodge to be organized at Chino near Riverside; forty names said to be on hand.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

THE SCHOOL PRIZES.

It is hoped that every one will read the letter of Mrs. Congdon on page 515 of this number. It has reference to one of the most important agencies that have ever been set in motion for the advancement of the temperance reform in this State. The idea of offering prizes to stimulate the pupils of the public schools to acquaint themselves thoroly with the properties of alcohol and tobacco, and their effects when introduced into the system, is one that entitles its "inventor" to an enduring monument in the hearts and affections of the people of the state and nation. It does not appear to be a very remarkable thing of course; almost anybody could have discovered America, but nobody did till Columbus happened to think of it, and then it was a very simple thing to do. Just so, Miss Anna R. Congdon was the first that made this suggestion through the RESCUE.

It was one of those remarkably apposite and practical ideas that some rare intelligences can evolve at will, but which would have cost the congresses of Europe and America about fifty years of patient study and wearying application to pick and drill and drag out of their amply-stored crania.

And no sooner was the proposition mooted than the ladies of the W. C. T. U. have put it into wholesome, vigorous practice, and they, with those whose generous aid has enabled them to make it a success, deserve the highest appreciation of all who love their country and their race.

The interest excited in the young folks, and their industry in seeking every available mode and source of instruction upon this now most interesting topic are remarkable; it may well be doubted if any other means could have been attempted that would have had a success at all comparable with what we have seen.

Without having acquired the experience which has been thus presented, the plan is so eminently and self evidently judicious, that the Good Templars and other temperance organizations should without delay make the development of this school prize system an important part of their work, and it is to be hoped the example will be followed all over the Union, and as one thinks of it, the tumbling of the beer signs in the near future can be distinctly heard.

PATRIOTIC DUTY.

Every patriot is now in duty bound to work for the Democratic ticket, because Jefferson was a very talented man and Andrew Jackson gallantly defended New Orleans in 1815; and because that party has always been true to the whisky interests.

Every patriot has an equal duty to support the Republican ticket, whoever it may be composed of, because the Republican party (or the American people, or the army, or somebody round there) preserved the Union in 1861-5. And because that party has always been, and is, an inalienable friend and ally of the distillers and brewers and beer gardens and beer dives and Sunday smashers and brothelers and of every thing that pauperizes the country: (except in Kansas where it had to eat its own platform or get whipped.

Every patriot has a right to ask himself too if it would not be a good plan to fight and defeat the prohibition party; because it aims to have a sober and honest government, a righteous system of finance, to restore the Sabbath and the Christian morality under which the nation became great, to destroy the devil worship and the human slaughter of the daily Auto da Fe whose foreign priests in this free Christian Country offer up every day their 200 to 250 human sacrifices to the devil of drunkenness: who rob and butcher that many citizens of this country every day; who daily invade the homes and blast the happiness of millions of our people; and whose daily and hourly work is the perdition of the country and people. "For God and home and native land," is a motto that dont promise spoils of office just yet; beware of it, patriot.

ADULTERATION OF LIQUORS.

If it would be right to inflict severe bodily torture as a punishment for the meanest and most cruel crimes, it would seem that the wretched sneak thieves who adulterate flour and bread with bone dust and clay and other deleterious frauds, who make poisoned candy to sell to children, who render the people's food and butter and milk unwholesome &c, ought to be made intimate and permanent accquaintances of the whipping post and the tread mill. It is hard to name a crime more nastily despicable then that of cheating and stealing combined with the wholesale poisoning of our neighbors.

But a great hue and cry has been raised and a vast storehouse of hard names expended upon the perpetrators of a comparatively innocent mode of turning a penny, not quite an honest penny. The traders in drunkenness all, from the leper who makes and sells swinish lager, up thru the various kinds of wines, brandies and whiskies, to those of extravagent cost, cannot help knowing that from the lowest, to the highest, the only quality of the liquor which has a real value is the drunk it possesses, That quality is common to every kind that has a value, and no drink ever has a vestige of value for the bibber, that has no drunk, no craze, no swear, no fight in it. Any or all the other qualities and properties it may lack, and lose none of its value to speak of, but with the loss of the drunk all its value vanishes.

Now if bread made out of old boots and tin cans and cabbage leaves and oyster shells, was just as nourishing, wholesome, pleasant and contained precisely the same elements as flour, the fraud of selling it for the genuine would only be a lie, without the added theft that is practiced in the adulteration of food. And that applies to the sale of fraudulent beer, wine, brandy, whisky &c. The man who buys either five cents worth or ten dollars worth of it to drink commits the last extreme of folly; he buys drunk, something to make him a very little, or a little more, or a good deal drunk. The drunk property is perfectly the same in all kinds of alcoholic drinks, lager beer or the choicest champagne or costliest wine. And it is precisely the same value and same material, whether made from rotten potatoes, old boots, rotten grapes, thistles or rotted sugar of any kind.

Therefore when Bridget O'Donegal wants a keg of german beer of a cheap drunk and D. O. Mills or Gov. Stanford or the Editor of the Argonaut wants a fancy kind of drink at 3 or 4 or 5 dollars a bottle, how much is the consciencious grocer(?) to blame if he supplies both parties with precisely the same material, manufactured from the same lot of potatoes, brought down in a schooner from a farm in Sonoma county, and whichcost precisely the same per gallon of proof drunk contained therein.

Tomales potatoes make as good Piper Heidsick Champagne as can be had imported from France, and it is precisely the same material, the same flavor, the same drunk and the same fiz and the same qualities in every respect, The only difference in the world is that one is from Tomales potatoes, and the other from potatoes that grew in Belgium or Germany and the cost to the producer just the same, about five or six cents a bottle exclusi ve of the glass and cork. Of course it is understood that Piper Heidsic is not potatoes, but it and all others of the chociest imported wines that sell for the fanciest prices, are made from whisky or alcohol or brandy evoked from rotten potatoes, rotten barley, rotten vegetables of any kind that contain sugar to be rotted: everything that makes the difference between high priced wine and common watered whisky of the same strength is produced by the addition of a few inexpensive drugs and poisons, whose cost is a mere nothing.

There is something funny in the idea of Paddy Maloney and Hans Haugschwiller getting a gallon of beer for perhaps 75 cents containing a good fighting drunk in it and in every respect equal to the five bottles of Champagne that cost a railroad magnate five dollars each.

The liquor sellers are not so much to be blamed for gauging so correctly the folly and stupidity and ignorance of their customers. Let us be careful never to do them an injustice. They have a load to pack that dont admit of anything being unjustly piled on to it. They are right enough in their discriminating rates. It is quite proper that the mysterious spirit of bacchanalian extacy, which the cunning enchantors can unlock from the decaying corpse of the departed potatoe, should appear to the royal monopolist in the guise of a Piper Heidsick and Widow Cliquot costume, and tax their purses roundly whenever it is invoked.

THE VETERAN'S HOME ASSOCIATION.

The committee are making an urgent appeal to the charitable for assistance in providing a shelter and support to the needy veterans of the Mexican and of the more recent conflict, who are on the Pacific coast. It is a wrong more attributable to thoughtlessness than to cruelty or ingratitude, that these poor fellows, whose services have been of such eminent benefit to the country, should suffer and even perish thru want and neglect, as some of them have done. The State should provide for this matter, but if it has not done so, it becomes the imperative duty of all who can assist in making the necessary provision, to do so at once and with an open hand.

Address a note with some figures and hieroglyphics like this in it $ to Col. J. J. Lyon Secretary, Box 1386 P. O. San Francisco. The Lord will accept both large and small loans in this investment, and has never been known to wrong any body out of a cent of interest yet.

Lecturers' Reports.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

H. R. HUGHES.

On the 29th met with Quartz Mt. in "Open Lodge." This lodge not a year old has a neat hall, and in connection with the community own a good organ, has a membership of over 40, and tho it will never be a very large lodge, it is one of our solid ones.

On the 30 went to Sonora, but owing to several causes the audience composed about a dozen, not feeling well we adjourned. Next evening I met with the lodge, a good turn out, talked up District Lodge on the 28th, and the RESCUE, got 3 subscri. bers, the W. C. will canvas; Bald Mt. ought to have a large list.

June 1st met with Blanket Creek; was haying season and there were but few out. A few are holding on, this community could sustain a good lodge; but as there are no rumshops in the immediate vicinity, they dont think they need a lodge. But California boys need a temperance education, and all the safe guards we can give them. I hope the good people there will take hold for the childrens sake.

The 2nd lectured at Summerville to a full house. If there should be a revival of the quartz mining interest, there will probably be a lodge here at some future time.

The 3rd met with Soulsbyville "Open Lodge," had a pleasant meeting, after my address the meeting was addressed by Rev. Mr. Grey, and the L. D. Bro. Cope.

The 4th met with the lodge at its regular meeting. They now number 130 members, I think it is the largest membership in proportion to the population of any lodge in the State. They sustain a very fine Band of Hope of about 75 members, their hall would be a credit to any of our larger towns, their indebtedness is very small, will soon be paid, so they can turn their attention to the circulation of temperance literature, and the thorough education of their community on the vital issues that are the basis of our reform.

June 5th at 2 P. M. met with the Soulsbyville Band of Hope, a large attendance. The little folks had a creditable program and the old folks show a deep interest in the Band, and foster it as the nursery of their lodge. Several attempts have been made to have the Band of 75 members entered on the list in the RESCUE, without success; where is the fault? At 8 o'clock met with Confidence in "Open Lodge," the hall crowded, a good program and a splendid meeting. Collection of $12.50 the best I have taken considering size of place. Next night met with lodge. They intend to celebrate the fourth of July, and have stands etc. so as to commence a hall fund. In the near future every lodge in Tuolumne will have a hall. The example of Soulsbyville is contagious, and all seem determined to set up housekeeping under their own vine and fig tree.

The 7th returned to Jeffersonville 16 miles thru "June showers." The 8th went to Green Springs, all harvesting so no effort was made to hold a meeting. The 10th lectured at Jeffersonville to a good house, am indebted to Miss Eva Brooks a lassie of 12, who rendered the "Troubles of a wife" in such a manner as to elicit hearty applause and encore. Made arrangements to lecture in Tuttletown, one mile distant, next Friday. Quite a boom in quartz there at present, and if it continues, will build up old Table Mt. Lodge.

The 11th crossed the river to attend the quarterly entertainment of Murphy's Lodge at Armory hall. Their "Open Lodge" meetings are events, and the seating capacity of the large hall is taxed to accommodate those who come. Brother Cooke will probably report the meeting, and the condition of his lodge, the most prosperous in Calaveras.

I have made my last tour of Tuolumne for the current year but will return to be present at the District Lodge held in Sonoma on the 18th of June, when the interests of the lodges and the cause will be reported and discussed.

MRS. STEVENS.

LOMPOC June 6th 1881.

Dear Bro. Wood.—I am here in this temperance colony where I find strong Prohibitionists. They mean business or the saloon would not have been destroyed. Their motto is, no compromise with the traffic and I am so glad to breathe the atmosphere of this colony; these people have paid a high price for their land, they have bought their houses with special clause and assurance that the destroyer should not enter here, and it has been one continual fight for them; the last saloon was kept by a man who defied them; he was waited upon at different times by committees of ladies who pleaded with him, but to no purpose, he refused to stop. A woman who had sought this colony with a husband addicted to drink, and thought here he was safe, found that he was becoming demonized, by the saloon. She, poor woman was without support, was out in the field picking beans, while her husband was getting drunk in the saloon, she warned the saloon keeper that she would blow up the saloon if he did not stop selling to her husband; he did not stop and the saloon was blown up. Ihave a piece of the old saloon and the bomb that did the deed, for my cabinet as a curiosity, for I know that it will be one of the curious things for the coming generations that ever such a thing existed, and the people had to take desperate measures to rid themselves of such a curse. Why any people may complain of a slaughter house if the odor offend and the law forces it out of their sight and smell, but human slaughter houses may stand to destroy the life and blood of the people and when forsooth they rebel, behold the holy horror of the public; we must submit to the majesty of the law, the majesty of the law! indeed! which licenses these saloons, and destroys homes? These people are strong for a temperance Governor, and I find a growing sentiment all over Southern California. We must elect a total abstinence Governor next time. We can do it. The Good Templars hold the balance of power, let us work to that end. E. P. STEVENS.

Mrs Stevens on the 8th organized Artesia Lodge in the valley of Lompoc with 35 members to start with. Lectured several times in Lompoc, reorganized the Band of Hope, encouraged and built up the lodges, advocated the use of temperance literature and awakened an interest in the Mutual Aid feature. The Lompoc Record says:

"Santa Rita greatly enjoyed a lecture on Thursday night—a delegation from town going out on the occasion. This place has no saloon, a good lodge, I. O. G. T., preaching, Sunday-School, prayer meeting, and a first-rate community.

"The people thronged the church again on Friday night, to hear the farewell lecture; and very successful it was. In the afternoon the Maple school-house was filled by scholars and parents, who listened with deep interest to a very appropriate address.

"Mrs Stevens expresses herself as well pleased with our valley, its people, institutions and prospects. She visited the collapsed saloon and took specimens of the wreck. One of these will no doubt furnish her with many a text, as she lectures through the state; and Lompoc will be more widely advertised as a Temperance Colony than ever before."

Mrs. Stevens is expected to be at the Guerneville camp-meeting before she takes her vacation. She is very much pleased with her experiences in the Lompoc colony, pays a well merited tribute to the excellent qualities of these people who left other homes and came there at large expense and serious sacrifice to escape themselves, and free their families from the infernal demoralizing influences of the grogshop and the beer kettle. Their determination to maintain their principles, recently asserted with so much emphasis deserves the fullest sympathy of all good people.

M. D. MERRICK.

[Last week the Dr.'s report was cut short off, because time was up and room all filled.]

A rainstorm prevented my last meeting in Healdsburg being so fully attended as the two previous ones; yet the meeting was an interesting one, and I leave the place feeling that much good has been done. The pastors of the four churches signifying their intention of making united and energetic effort to build up the lodge and revive the temperance work.

At Santa Rosaa on the seventh and eighth my meetings were largely attended, especially on the last evening, and a lively interest manifested. Our meetings were held in the court house, as the churches for some reason not explained to me could not be procured. The Order is fully aroused here to the importance of more thoro work, and regular open monthly meetings will be held in the future, and a Band of Hope will soon be organized. At Benicia my meetings were thinly attended, and the lodge seems to be in a very quiet condition. At Vallejo no notices of my arrival were posted until after my arrival in town. Say 4 P. M., and even after seven o'clock, Good Templars were enquiring if there was to be a lecture. I spoke however to a small audience in the M. E. Church, and was invited to address a union meeting (of the churches) at the Baptist church on Sunday at 3 P. M., which I did to a fine audience. And was again invited to address the congregation of the Presbyterian church in the evening.

My visit at Vallejo was made very pleasant and I trust very profitable thru the hearty cooperation and friendship of the Revs. Nelson of the M. E. church, Dr. Gray of the Baptist, and Klink of the Presbyterian churches, These gentlemen most heartily endorsed my work and urged the necessity of another visit in the near future. Temperance work is sadly needed here, and if a proper effort is made much good may be done.

WM. CROWHURST.

PASKENTA, Tehama Co. Cal. June 10, 1881.

Red Bluff campaign lasting three days, opened with District Lodge—previously described. The meetings increased in number and interest, filling the large audience room of the M. E. Church. On the second night a minstrel troupe performed in town, the fire company gave an exhibition of their engine's power, and our good friends in the Advent tent also gave a temperance lecture at the same hour. but the lodges turned out in regalia, and a large and successful meeting was the result. The churches united, ministers sat on the same platform, and thus with Rev. Bro. Woodward as chairman and Rev. Bro. A. H. Mayhew as Chaplain, a large union Sunday night gathering closed the campaign with excellent results. God bless these brothers.

Band of Hope meeting on Sunday afternoon, presided over by our Grand Worthy Vice Templar, Sister H. A. Mayhew and Bro. Black, Supt., was very largely attended. The readings, declamations, catechetical and other exercises were interesting, suggestive, entertaining and instructive. Red Bluff is on the right road.

Reed's Creek was interfered with by a cloudy, rainy unpleasant evening; yet as the result Hercules Lodge was organized with 20 charter members. Mrs. Martha Simpson, lodge deputy.

Elder Creek, the home of Rock of Safety Lodge, held a meeting of about one-third of the expected audience; and all because somebody had not read the RESCUE and other papers which all advertised June 7th, The people had been notified of June 9th while the RESCUE distinctly advertised the 7th. This on account of not reading the RESCUE. However the lodge was reorganized.

Henleyville greeted us with a large enthusiastic gathering, good singing, etc. This lodge organized April 16th with 24 charter members, has now 44 in membership, and all without asking any to join. People are asking to be admitted. One man who backed out on the night of organizing asked a little girl member to give him a regalia to wear, and offered her a half dollar. He then offered $5 to one of the older sisters, but it was useless, he had to take his place among the goats. A grand supper in open moonlight air concluded the exercises.

C. N. GOULDING

ARBUCKLE, June 13, 1881.

Since I wrote you last have lectured in Willows, 2, 3, 4 and 5. Received 14 applications for membership: 6 and 7 in Williams. Lodge will be organized there this evening; Maxwell, 8th and 9th; Arbuckle, 10th and 12th; College City, 12th. Good audiences and a very noticeable interest in the cause. Colusa County is without doubt one of the most whisky counties in the State, population considered.

J. ARNOUP.

Friend Arnoup is up in Mendocino county talking solid common sense and propounding hard facts to the people there, but as he has only got fairly started; no report for this week has reached us yet.

SOUTH AMERICAN EXPERIENCES.—No. 5.

CULTIVATION.

So far Columbia has not been a remunerative or healthy market for American farming utensils. The mania for improved farming machinery and gang plows has never been able to take possession of a single soul there. The cocoanut, plantain, bread fruit and indian corn do not require very complicated treatment in that country. The cocoanut requires no care or rather gets none, the plaintain requires considerable but gets little or none except cutting off the bunch of fruit when it is wanted. Corn however develops the full measure of the farmer's intelligence and ingenuity. To plant a large corn ranch is an enterprise that requires the assistance of several of the neighbors and is generally the occasion of a little picnic or a "bee". Some of these corn tracts are 60 or 80 feet square, if anything could be square in that country, and some of them might possibly be 150 feet by 30; not such large farms as Dr Glenn's but good sized tracts. The first thing after procuring a couple of corncobs is to shell them out. Then all the underbrnsh on the intended farm is pulled out by the roots or cut down close to the ground. The corn is then scattered over the plantation, as seems fit to the proprietor, and the ceremony ends by felling all the trees over the spot that is planted, and the whole party adjourns to the house, have a meat feast and spend the night dancing out the contents of a dimijohn of anisado, or native rum flavored with aniseed after the manner of French absinthe.

What the birds and the rats and some other wild animals dont want or dont find of the planted corn, gets buried up tn the soil by the fallen trees and branches or by the heavy showers which prevail almost daily and thus the cultivator finds some ears of corn have grown there after the proper interval of time has past. They say if they planted corn our way in the open fields, the heat of the sun would dry and wither it up, and the wild animals and birds would come in hordes if it did grow and consume it. So they are perfectly happy in their way of running their agricultural interests.

The sugar cane grows along the rivers and it is said to last 15 to 20 years without planting afresh. It is supposed that the grass and weeds which grow so abundantly among the canes, shall be cleared out sometimes and it is probably done about once a year: but it is very seldom that a field of cane or anything else is met with that is not overgrown with rubbish. The cane is a useful product: combined with the plantain it supplies all the wants of man: the plantain serves all the purposes of bread, meat, milk, fish, fowl, oyster soup, sausages and pancakes, and the cane furnishes sugar, rum and beer which comprise all the other needs of humanity except tobacco.

The cane is run thru between two heavy wooden rollers of the coarsest constructiou; it is put thru twice to extract all the juice, and there is quite a difference between the sweetness of the first and the second runs. The juice is boiled in an iron or copper boiler which is generally borrowed or hired from a neighbor. Sometimes it is boiled down and run into moulds scooped out of wood, of the size and shape of a large saucer, where it cools into a cake of a about two pounds of dark but very pleasantly tasted sugar, which they call rapadura. These are sold many of them to meet the uses of sugar, the price being ten cents a cake: but the larger part of it is sold at a less price at the distilleries which are plentiful there, and by a verv primitive method converted into a pretty fiery rum, which when treated with some extract of aniseed is considered a very healthy and necessary drink for African and white natives.

Another very important industry is making guarapo (pronounced warapo) which is made by boiling the cane juice a little, and then letting it ferment in demijohns. Before the fermentation has begun or when it is just beginning, it is of course a wholesome and pleasant beverage to those who dont want the drunk effect; but those who want it strong, abhor the weak and are particular never to touch it till it is several days old, when it becomes strong enough to make an Indian talk thick and reel in a few minutes. They drink it by pints and quarts just as the lager beer drinkers do, and after a few drinks they act so, that seeing a lot of them enjoying themselves, only for the language they speak, you might suppose yourself on the Vallejo Boat when it has a lot of Napa Valley wine makers on board returning home. Guarapo is the board, washing, lodging, food and raiment of the Indians, and they never buy any unless they are allowed to taste it first to see if it has enough "bite" in it.

The plantain is generally allowed to cultivate itself in the smallest imaginable patch. With a very few days labor every man, who has a hut, could have an abundance of plantains to supply his family year after year; but very few of them do so, tho the plantain is 8 or 9 tenths of their food. The tree bears a large bunch of fruit inside of a year after planting. The top when the tree has matured, bends over with a very graceful curve towa.d the ground ending in a beautifully shaped pendant blossom: and on the part of the stock now above the blossom the little plantains come out in rows all round it and grow with their points upward, which you would hardly suppose. First time I ever saw plantains grow, that struck me as very singular, and what was more singular, when I remarked it to Americans down there, they all disputed the fact and referring it to the colored natives, they denied it too, and stuck to it till they went to the growing plantains and saw them. Some of the natives must have known better.

The plantain bears fruit but once and then is cut down, the tree being so porous and so charged with water as to be entirely useless: at the butt it grows to about 4 or 5 inches in diameter, and its leaves are perhaps six feet long by three wide: before the fruit is formed, various young shoots are well advanced to take the place of the parent when it is removed. A bunch of plantains of 40 or 50 pounds weight is sold for 10 cents or less up to 30 or 40 according to the supply. The common kind are about 9 or 10 inches long and very large and there are other varieties, some of them very choice and of various sizes down to what is called the "apple" about 2 inches long and very sweet. The plantain is used mostly hard and green and boiled as we boil potatoes.

The cocoanut yields about 150 nuts a year worth 2 to 4 cents on the spot. Rice can be grown to any extent but as it requires work and some care, there is not much produced and it sells for about 15 cents a pound.

One of the most necessary and favorite articles of food among all Spanish speaking people is garlic and onions. It surprised me to see the onions, where so many of them are used, nothing but a stalk and a bulb beginning to swell. On being told that onions were as large as potatoes elsewhere, the Africans admitted that they used to be quite as large there too, but about eight years previously a priest up country, who had a remarkably well developed affinity for onions, had called at the house of an agriculturist to get dinner. While they were preparing his food he remarked that he hoped they would not forget to put in some of a large basket of onions which he saw in a corner. When the dinner was brought on there were no onions, and on inquiry the priest was told very gruffiy, that they had no onions to give away to strangers. "He ate his dinner and afterward he made the sign of the cross, took up an onion and excommunicated the onion, and cursed it; and threw it back into the basket. Ever since that time onions wont grow in this country only in stalks like these you see." These onion stalks are worth 25 cents a pound in Barbacoas, but in the interior there are onions as large as hens eggs; perhaps the curse and excommunication are fading out.

BY REV R. E. JONES OF PETALUMA.

That Alcohol is poison to the human body has been so fully and clearly proved, and that the use of it creates an appetite for more, is a fact so well attested that I would not stop for a moment to discuss it with anyone. I would urge you to be a total abstainer for your own safety. Also, be one for the benefit of others, and because the Bible commands it.

For your own safety. I can speak here of my own experience. When I began to preach, my old Pastor said, are you a total abstainer? I said yes; I dont like any kind of intoxicants. But I have not signed the pledge. He replied, you must sign the pledge or you will never do much good in the world. I replied, I am ready, and did sign it. During my College life I seldom had any temptation to break, as most if not all the students were of the same mind.

But in my first pastorate, all kinds of intoxicants were very plenty. Different kinds of liquors were in every house, and freely offered. One or two of my predecessors had fallen thru drink. My pledge kept me from the first glass, and thus I passed safely thru six years of severe trials; yea, at a time that I saw ministers of other denominations fall by my side. More than this, my pledge helped me to take a bold stand and condemn the practice. I showed by my conduct, that I disapproved of it in funerals by invariably refusing to drink in honor of the dead, or to please the living. I also preached against it from the pulpit, and took every opportunity to oppose the practice.

I will now quote portions of a sermon which I then composed, on the expediency of total abstinence.

The text was 1 Cor. x: 29. The claims of other peoples' consciences.

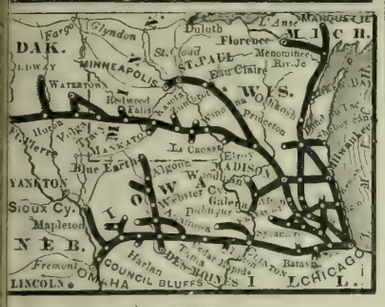
Circumstances alter cases. Things harmless in one connection, may be hurtful in another, and things in themselves hurtful become more so.

A man may eat meat sacrificed to idols, like any other meat, provided he is ignorant of the fact. An idol being nothing produces no effect. Or even one may eat it knowing the fact, if his belief concerning idols does not affect his conscience. But tho he may be ignorant or easy in his own mind on the subject, yet if some other religious brother tells him that the act hurts his conscience in any way so as to offend him, or make him think more highly of idols, Paul says it is the duty of this strong brother to leave the meat there and then for the sake of another. Under the circumstances another man's conscience is to be his rule of action.

Apply this to intoxicants. Allow that there is no harm in a glass. Even allow that it is good and beneficial, yet since so many are injured by it, and so many hurt by seeing you take it, then it becomes the duty of every man not to touch it for the sake of others.

The danger is two fold. We should abstain lest we hurt the feelings of a weak brother. Some in the church are very weak. Too weak to pray, sing or teach, yea, so weak as to think that drinking a glass of wine is a sin. But still they are members of God's family. In human families men avoid hurting the weak in anyway. The healthy children are taught to walk quietly, to talk in whispers, to shut all the doors, and by all means avoid hurting the nerves of the weak sickly baby. What if your father in heaven is in full sympathy with the weak brother whose conscience you hurt by drinking your glass while he regarded it a sin? For as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him. He may withhold many blessings from you because you hurt your brother's feelings tho he be but a weak one.

On the other hand, others following your example may fall into temptation. A young man taking his first glass, his hand trembles, he is afraid that some one will see him, but soon he sees church members, deacons, ministers drinking; he is becoming bold, and perhaps reckless. Fathers command and prayer or mothers pleading and tears avail nothing—he is ruined forever. Who is responsible? the moderate drinker whose example he followed, or who perhaps persuaded him to take his first glass. A small boy is often drowned by venturing to where he saw his father and big brothers swim. It may be the means of causing one who has fallen once to relapse. A man having left idolatry and afraid to go nigh anything pertaining to idols, sees a good christian in idol temples eating meat. He goes also, and is soon an idolater. You can take your glass maybe, and leave after drinking one. But there is your neighbor or your brother in the church, he has been for years an abstainer, but seeing you drinking all the time uninjured, he may be tempted to taste again. Then comes his fall and ruin. His blood will be on your head; you have destroyed your brother for whom Christ died.



I think that Paul's argument is equally applicable to the use of tobacco, dancing and card playing. Whatever offends the consciences of weak brethren, or tends to lead men to over indulgence and ruin, should be strictly avoided by Christians. The above was my line of argument, and I have looked over it now and again during a quarter of a century, but cannot detect any fallacy; therefore, I leave it standing for your consideration.

WALES has petitioned parliament for a law closing all grogshops on Sunday. Cardiff petitions strenuously to be exempted. And perhaps it ought to be. Thirty years ago and later, every inn, tavern, hotel or other place in Cardiff (except the Bute Hotel) where liquor was retailed, was an open undisguised brothel. But this did not in the least make those places more disreputable or demoralizing than they are elsewhere. Whether Cardiff has adhered to its old custom or not cannot be stated, but from the petition alluded to it probably has.

A SUPPLY of the works of the N. T. Society which are advertized in this paper are for sale at the RESCUE office at New York prices of course; will be sent post paid by return mail if ordered. Same are also to be had at 1041 Market St. See ad.

THE NEW HOUSE AND ITS BATTLEMENT.

THE ANNUAL SERMON AT THE METROPOLITAN TABERNACLE.

The question is whether, if our Lord were living to day with these accursed modern drinking customs, with these brandied wines, with these distilled liquors, with these inherited evil appetites in existence around Him, He would find Himself correctly or incorrectly represented by those who say that His example justifies them in moderate drinking? I hold that He drank no distilled liquors, for in His day there were none in existence. I hold that he drank no brandied wines. I hold that what he drank was, very probably—perhaps we cannot settle the point beyond all dispute—simply that finest kind of wine which the East to this day in many portions of it calls by the name of superlative praise, that finest kind of fruit of the grape that is not intoxicating. You say there is no such wine. Ask Dr. Norman Kerr or a dozen other great authorities which might eaily be named. I beg you to give yourself personal experience in support of the proposition that unfermented wine is a fact. Go to your own shops in London and you can have such wine to-day. You say there cannot be unfermented juice of the grape kept any length of time. That is a popular error. Your own Dr. Norman Kerr tells you that he has kept it in his own house two, three, and four days absolutely unfermented. He tells you that he drinks unfermented wine brought from the East. I know where in London to buy that kind of wine. What is more, I know from some observation in the East and from reading testimonies from there that many Syrian churches to-day use that kind of wine in their religious feasts. Dr Kerr has shown that wine may be preserved unfermented by eight or ten different methods, many of which were known to the ancients,

Please notice that I do not make this topic of unfermented wine a necessary part of the temperance question. Far be it for me to say that the temperance cause must have all these details in it, and that otherwise it does not deserve our support I shall be thankful if you will support temperance aside from abstinence, but when you misinterpret the example of our Lord, you hinder the effect of my appeal to the intelligent and conscientious. When you tell me that He drank the fruit of the vine, and that therefore you may drink our modern wines, I must ask you to notice that your position amounts very nearly to exegetical lunacy. It never has been proved that our Lord's wine, made at Cana, or the wine he drank Himself, was anything nearly as dangerous as the wines you drink. Nay, I will go further and say that, in my opinion, which I do not ask you to take, it never has been proved that the wine our Lord made at Cana and the wine He drank was not like the wine we suppose He used in instituting the Lord's Supper—this best kind, this delicate kind, this unfermented spirit which is used at this hour, and can be bought in your own city at the present day. There are far more arguments on this side of the question than many of you may suppose, who have not read the recent literature on this topic. I do not by any means give my assent wholly to those who proclaim what is called the two-wine theory; but I affirm that you have no proof that our Lord looked with desire, as you do, upon the wine when red, or that He drank wine that was dangerously intoxicating, and it is blasphemy on your part to call Him a winebibber in serious earnest, as the Jews did when they slandered Him. John came neither eating or drinking, and it was said of him, "He hath a devil" Our Lord came eating and drinking, and it was said, "Behold a winebibber and a gluttonous man." Now, I hold you have no more right to call our Lord a gluttonous man than you have to call Him a winebibber, and no more right to call Him a winebibber than you have to call Him a gluttonous man. It is the repetition of slander to call Him either of these things. We have no more right to infer that John had a devil from what was said of him then to make any other audacious departure from common sense. But we have as much right to say that as to say our Lord approached the edge of intoxication because He was called a winebibber. I think it is beyond dispute among the scholars of the first rank that at the Passover the wine used was non-intoxicating, and that our Lord instituted the supper with such wine (Encyc Brit. 8th Edn, art "Wine.") In regard to the miracle at Cana, and the custom of the Lord's Supper, the abstainer has as much to stand on in the personal example of our Lord as the moderate drinker.

Without claiming that the Bible absolutely settles the question as to the point I am discussing, I do claim that you have not proved, if you are a moderate drinker, that it settles the custom on your side. You are far from showing that there is anything ln the example of our Lord giving the remotest justification to your use of distilled liquors and brandied wines. I am grieved with an indignation which I dare not express to the full when I hear preachers and church members quoting the example of our Lord in support of the use of distilled liquors, which were not invented until the twelfth century. If our Lord were in London or New York to-day, face to face with our present drinking customs; if He were here in person as He is in spirit, listeningto the cries of orphans and widows; if He could see how the best portion of our civilization are imperiled by those who fleece the poor and sell to them strong drink, I believe on my soul, that He would again, as He did of old, knot up the whip of small cords, and purge the Church shall I say from thieves? Yes, I will apply that term to the whisky ring. He would purge the Church of moderate drinking, and in doing that He would only be giving efficacy to the text—"It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended, or is made weak," "Lead ns not into temptation," "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness," "Do not drink wine, that ye may put difference between holy and unholy," "If meat maketh my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world standeth." He would knot up His whip of small cords, and use them in the name of those secular principles to which I have appealed—the necessity of temperance as a battlement to keep blood-guiltiness from the roof of the new house civilization is building in giving large and sometimes unlimited political power to the people.

Do you say that I am declaiming now, and leaving the ground of hard, stern facts? Allow me to go back for an instant to something modern. How many of your life assurances societies will permit you as a moderate drinker to be insured on the same basis as a total abstainer? This is a practical question. Since I came to England I have been studying the history of some of your life assurance societies, and I hold in my hand literal extracts from their own documents—not temperance publications at all; and the great outcome of the experience of the societies recorded in these official statements is that the total abstainer is paid from 7 to 10 up to 15 and 17 per cent, bonus over and above the moderate drinker. That is an actual result; that is not the fancy of sentimentalism; that is a broad, indisputable fact which Britons ought to expect as the result of experience. Not long ago one of the assurance societies was addressed on this point, and made, through its secretary, the following report—I have the original letter in my possession—"During the past sixteen years we have issued 9,345 policies on the lives of non-abstainers but are careful to exclude any who are not strictly temperate, and 3,396 on the lives of abstainers; 524 of the former have died, but ninety-one only of the latter, or less than half the proportionate number, which, of course, is 190." Less than half the number of abstainers have died compared with the number that have died among non-abstainers who were strictly temperate; and this is after an experience of sixteen years.

Are life insurance societies to be allowed to go beyond the Church in their regard for the health of men in body and soul? It is to be remembered that many whose lives are assured as those of total abstainers were not always abstinent. The contrasted figures will grow yet more striking when the abstainers are such from birth. These societies are not governed according to Biblical rules; they are not governed by this or that theory in science. Theirs is stern common sense applied to a selfish problem, and the outcome of it, under long experience, is like a peal of thunder from Sinai. It is high time for the pulpit, it is high time for the pew, it is high time for young men to arouse themselves when such are the signs of the times in secular societies. Here is the lowest portion of the sea rising in a tide that kisses the Alps.

The Church of England Temperance Society is organized on a double basis. It says it puts no social distinction between the abstainer and the merely temperate man. But what does it do when it organizes a rescue section? I am informed that the Church of England Temperance Society when it calls men to go into the slums and reach the degraded, acts on the principle that we cannot well smite with vigor that with which we fraternise; only total abstainers are put into the rescue section of the Church of England Temperance Society. The pledge of total abstinence this conservative society requires for the intemperate; the pledge of total abstinence it requires for the young. The Church of England Temperance Society is not a sentimental body. It is not made up of men who are usually led astray by fancy. I presume you have a general respect for the sobriety of mind of the managers of that temperance organization. It is true, I should never personally arrange a temperance society with a double basis; I must say I do not quite believe in that method of conducting temperance societies. But this society, conservative enough to be on a double basis, is yet shrewd enough to put into its rescue section only total abstainers, and to require total abstinence for the intemperate and for the young. What I claim in the name of my text, what I claim in the name of the perils of this new house and its lofty roof, is that all ministers should belong to the rescue section of temperance societies. I claim that every teacher in a Sunday-school, every legislator, every judge, every father, every mother, every man or woman, or child who has named Christ, should belong to the rescue section of society. Here is this sober, conservative body of men proclaiming that, without total abstinence in those who go among the perishing and degraded, they cannot obtain a proper hearing. What do they say except what God of old, said to Aaron:—"Do not drink any strong drink, or even wine, in order that you may effectually teach the commands of Almighty God."

Lord Jeffery was once visited by Thomas Guthrie, and noticed that the latter took no wine. Guthrie explained that he could not get a hearing in the Cowgate of Edinburgh if he went as a moderate drinker to those who were in their cups. Lord Jeffrey instantly recognized the nobleness of this plea. He saw that Guthrie stood on the principle of philanthropic prudence, expediency, and self-sacrifice: "If meat maketh my brother to offend, I will eat no meat while the world standeth." Notice, I am using that principle under certain qualifications. I am not admitting that alcohol is meat: but even if it were, I should still hold that this divine rule applies to it, if it prevented my teaching the poor and the degraded, Lord Jeffrey treated Guthrie with honor because he saw him as a hard working reformer on the only practical and consistent basis of the temperance reform.

Take the wisdom of politics, the wisdom of science, the wisdom of Scripture, and join them in one beam of light, and let it smite thru and thru you while you look into the face of your crucified Lord. Where are we that we can behold His wounds and not be willing to give up our little personal indulgences in order to increase our usefulness with the degraded. Every church has opportunity of reaching many families who have been afflicted by intemperance; every church ought to draw into it the intemperate. What if the intemperate man comes into God's house and finds the pew setting the example of moderate drinking. Is that safe? is that consistency? It is an unpopular doctrine that am teaching, I know well; but I have taught it in fashionable churches in Boston and New York, and I do not know that I was ever criticised on the other side of the Atlantic for proclaiming unflinchingly the impolicy of setting from the pulpit to the reformed drunkard in the pew the example of moderate drinking. I must not flinch here from the principles I have maintained yonder, and I proclaim here as I proclaimed there, that when a reformed drunkard sits down in a pew and finds his neighboring church member a moderate drinker and his pastor holding up the Bible in one hand and the glass of moderate drinking in the other, the struggling, converted inebriate has not come into a place of safety; the church is not a fold that is securing him from the wolves; it is not a place where he can repose. But I believe my Lord's bosom is such a place. Although you may blaspheme him by talking of the wine that he made at Cana, and wine that he drank, I will go to him and I will say I do not believe he ever put the bottle to his neighbor's lips in a way that would intoxicate him. I do not believe he looked on wine when it was red. I will find safety in his bosom, and I will proclaim the necessity of the reformation of the church until safety can be found in it as his representative, Safety for the reformed inebriate and for the young can never be attained while we admit moderate drinking into the pulpit or into the pew.

A distinguished divine from New York came lately to Boston and assailed total abstinence, and he did so in the name of the Bible. He has been most effectually answered. His "calm view of temperance" tnrned out to be the calm before a storm. Since his reactionary sermon was delivered, Massachusetts temperance societies have exhibited an unwonted activity, and the state has passed a prohibitory law. Six hunbred ministers recently assembled in Boston in a convention intended to inaugurate a movement in favor of Constitutional prohibition. "While carrying the war into Africa, this belated reformer," says the chairman of the committee under whose auspices he spoke, "stood among his hearers as a solitary sentinel, pacing around the deserted citadel of his own opinions." A brewer in Cincinnati ordered two hundred and fifty copies of the lecture, and its author's health was toasted in the dramshops. Mr. Philips, our most distinguished anti-slavery reformer, often reminds the people of New England that when slavery was first discussed in the United States the Bible was quoted in support of it. But we have looked into that matter. No doubt slavery is described in the Bible; no doubt one or two forms of it were in various ways hedged about, so that, although allowed to live for a while, they fell at last. But chattel slavery that colossal curse of my native land, I hold the Bible does not justify. Nevertheless we had the Bible thrown in the face of the anti-slavery reform at first. Wait a little and we shall by and by have the Bible used to support the temperance cause, and no longer thrown in the face of progress. The theory that the Bible speaks with approbation of intoxicating drinks makes the Scriptures contradict themselves, and thus violates the first principle of a sound interpretation of the Sacred Word. Mr. Philips tells us that Mr. Wade, of Ohio, who was once an infidel, was asked to be president of a society the object of which was to show that the Bible supports slavery. "I will do so," said he, "I will be president; but suppose that we prove that the Bible supports slavery, people will ask, "What is the good of such a Bible?" and in answering that question I can be of no help at all." Suppose that we prove that the Bible justifies moderate drinking, what is the good of such a bible? Face to face with the facts of our social condition, of our scientific research and of our church life, what is the good of a Bible which increases rather than diminishes our temptation?

The reverend pastor of this church teaches more men on the other side of the Atlantic than on this side. At least fifteen or twenty years ago I used to hang in rapture over his discourses, as published in America when he was a youth in London. Fifty millions of people on the other side of the Atlantic, thirty-five or thirty-eight millions here—his influence yonder I hold to be as great as his influence here. Consider what good is done by the example of abstinence. Consider how many are strengthened in an unpopular cause as he stands here and proclaims his reverence for abstinence as a principle justified by the great law of self-sacrifice. Whether he would agree with me in the interpretation of these texts I do not know, and I do not ask. It is not necessary for me to suppose that he would. I do not know that he would disagree; but this I know, that the principle of self-sacrifice, the necessity of avoiding blood-guiltiness, the great inculcation of the central text, that it is good to do nothing by which our brother stumbleth, he recommends to himself and thru himself to the world. His responsibility he measures by God's great law of self-sacrifice, and so would I have every minister, and every one who teaches God's truth measure his responsibilities in religion, in politics and in social life.

Many abstainers are found among preachers, and are not yet chronicled in temperance statistics. But the Church of England is already known to have 3,000 abstaining clergymen. The Baptists in England and Wales have 510 abstaining ministers and the Congregationalists 824, A great majority of the preachers among the Friends are total abstainers. The Calvanistic Methodists of Wales are, with few exceptions total abstainers. A large majority of the preachers of the United Methodist Free churches abstain wholly. Half the Wesleyan ministers in England and Wales are abstainers. The number of abstaining ministers in the Church of Scotland is 200, in the Free Church of Scotland is 300; in the United Presbyterian Church 220. Lord Bacon said the opinions and practices of young men are the best materials for prophecy. In these islands it is very significant that abstinence is becoming the rule with candidates for the preacher's holy calling. All the students of the Methodist New Connexion are abstainers. In Chestnut, Hackney, Lancashire, New and Spring Hill Congregational Theological Colleges there are 192 students, of whom 136 are abstainers.

There is one perfectly sure remedy for intemperance, and that is total abstinence. There is no sure remedy except that, and what I will not recommend to myself I will not recommend to others. I have been a total abstainer from birth. I rejoice that I was early taught to abhor even moderate drinking, and that what I suppose to be sound principles as to temperance were inculcated upon me from the very outset of my preferences as a child. Let us bring our offspring up by our example rather than by our precept. Let us set in our household such a blazing light before our children that when they come into the temptations of great cities they shall be strong in advance of their period of trial. Let us put the school and the press on the right side. Let us make the church a great pillar of fire thru which God can look in the morning watch, and trouble the hosts of his enemies, and take off their chariot-wheels,

When we see the Cross of Christ vividly we are sure to be melted; when we are melted we are sure so to pity our erring brothers as to be anxious to purge the church of the sins which make even God's house other than a place of refuge for the reformed inebriate. When we thus purge the church, we shall purge the parlor, we shall purge the press, we shall purge our statute books and deliver civilization from a curse which has gnawed our vitals more deeply than war or pestilence or famine.

SACRAMENTAL WINE.

A MINISTER'S OPINION.

The Rescue, of San Fransisco is making an earnest and determined fight against the use of alcoholic wine on Sacramental occasions. We wish it abundant success. It ought not to be necessary to make such a fight. The Christian world ought to see at once not only the impropriety but the sin of placing before communicants an intoxicating beverage which awakens in many persons appetites that are but half destroyed, which are only slumbering and need but the taste of alcohol to awaken to demoniac power. There are many men to whom a single swallow of fermented wine is as a spark of fire to a magazine of powder, for whom there is no safety save in absolute abstinence. There are many young men, and women, too, who inherit such a burning thirst for alcohol that for them to tamper with it in the least is to be destroyed. The mission of Christianity is to build up manhood, not to pull it down; to throw safeguards around human character, not to open the floodgates of temptation to destroy it. At the present day with the general intelligence and enlightenment which exists in regard to the temperance question, we do not understand how any Christian minister can conscientiously put the glass of alcoholic wine to his neighbor's lips. The minister who does it, does so at the peril of awakening appetites that are like the undying worm and the unquenchable fire.—Pacific Censor.

A BOOM.

A temperance boom has struck Blacks Station in Yolo county. Col. Goulding in his trip thru Yolo county spoke one night there, and fourteen expressed a desire to organize a lodge. He appointed a meeting on Sunday night June 5th, and Bro. Black was written to to go up there and organize a lodge. He and 23 others from Success Lodge at Grafton and 16 from Yolo, making 40 Good Templars went to see the work well done.

Bro. Black called the meeting to order and Bro. M. C. Winchester of Grafton was introduced, and after an earnest appeal of half an hour showing the benefit of the Order to society, a canvass was commenced for names to form a lodge. After a busy half hour thus spent it was announced that thirty-nine had signed their names and agreed to join their fortunes with the lodge. They were obligated, the initiatory exercises were gone thru with, officers were elected and installed. Lodge named Faithful Lodge, Dr. John F. Dillon recommended for L. D. P. O. address, Blacks Station, Yolo county.

The charter to be kept open for one week; next Sunday Bro. Black and Bro. Winchester will confer the degrees and complete the organization, when the new lodge will be ready to cruise for the pirates that feed and fatten upon industry of others. Night of meeting Sunday. Hurrah for Faithful Lodge of Yolo Co!!

A. O. U. W.

The very high death rate in Ohio has been commented upon for the past year or two. The National Bulletin says there is no mystery whatever about it. "It is clearly attributed to the large consumption of lager beer which develops diseases of the kidneys, liver, etc.

The above appeared in the Sunday Call of the 5th in the A. O. U. W. column. It is taking an unusual risk in giving publicity to such an item as that. It is very doubtful whether such an act might not be considered disloyal to the brewers and beerdives.

The A. O. U. W. is one of the best societies in the world for a beer or wine guzzler to enter; his life is so apt to be very short that his investments in that institution are pretty sure to be good. It is a good society too for a total abstainer to belong to, if he is anxious to pay double or triple the necessary rates of insurance, for the purpose of subscribing to a bonus for every saloon keeper and beer swiller who commits slow or quick suicide.

FIRST-CLASS AGENTS WANTED.

The great reputation of JOHN B. GOUGH, the magnificent make-up of "Sunlight and Shadow," and the universal demand for it among all classes, makes this the best opportunity ever offered to energetic agents to make money. We want first-class agents in every township, to whom liberal terms will be given. Address, for territory and terms, J. Dewing & Co., 420 Bush St., San Francisco.

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

148 Madison St., Chicago.

Price, 15 cents per single copy, or, $1.75 a year. Discount on 5, 10 or 20 copies, sent to one address, 2, 3 and 4½ cents per copy.

The publishers are life-long temperance and prohibition advocates, and Mr. Russel's name as editor is a sure promise as can be that the magazine will be inferior to none in ability. This is a publication much needed, is not the organ of any special society, but will reason mightily for the overthrow of the most desolating curse that ever infested the world and tormented mankind. Any one who has 15 cents ought to send and get a sample copy, and then subscribe regularly so as to do what is the duty and charge of of every individual, to keep this much-needed enterprise from going to the wall.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

ADMISSION OF CHILDREN.

All letters concerning the admission of children, or their adoption from the Home, should be addressed to the Secretary of the Board of Lady Managers, MRS. M. M. CARPENTER, 150 9th street, San Francisco, who will furnish the necessary blank forms.

THE RESCUE,

THE ORGAN OF THE

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

WORTH NOTICE.

Bro, Bramall sends under the above heading copy of a letter from Louisa Melheran, G. S. J. T. of New Orleans. She has seen the notice of Band of Hope supplies in the RESCUE and asks that some of them may be sent to her, as she has had a juvenile organization of 90 members and has never been able to get any rituals or badges. He does not say whether or not he sent the rituals etc., but it is hoped the ex-committee directed him to do so.

SUBSCRIBERS this week, Brownsville and Strawberry Valley 1 each. Ocean Queen Lodge 3 renewed. Red Bluff Lodge 2 raising its Lodge club to 12. Mrs Stevens sends 3 from Los Alamos, 1 more from Lompoc 7 from La Graciosa and 2 from Santa Maria. And a gentlemen reader of the RESCUE in Connecticut forwarded a list of 286 names, most of whom he thinks will subscribe in that state, if a sample copy is sent them. From Texas and West Virginia come requests for sample copies with a view of getting up clubs.

NOTICE:—The meeting of the Board of Lady Managers is postponed to July 12th.

MRS. C. B. THOMPSON, PRESIDENT.

TEHAMA DIST. LODGE.

Tehama county district lodge of I. O. G. T. met at Red Bluff June 3d, A Ryan D.D. presiding.

Delegates from Red Bluff Lodge, No. 192, Pride of Sierras 317, Paskenta 309 and Tehama 198. The finances of the lodge reported in a healthy condition.

The committee on Band of Hope thru their chairman, Sister H. A. Mayhew, made a verbal report, stating that much good had been done and much interest taken in the work; that there are now one hundred and seventy-three members of the Band.

The officers were duly elected and installed. Sister Kate Guder being D. V. T. and Bro. G. W. Jeffres D. Sec.

The bylaws were amended so as to require the D. D. to visit each lodge in the district at least twice a year. A finance committee to examine and report on all claims and expenses. The traveling expenses of the D. D. to be raised by a per capita tax not to exceed 25 cents half yearly on each member of sub lodge.

And it was agreed to send out lecturers to visit the lodges during the coming year, and resolutions of hearty congratulation to the Good Templars of Cal. on the recent election of Bros Katzenstein to the office of R. W. G. T.

A decided increase reported in numbers and interest. Prof. Crowhurst was present and rendered aid and encouragement. Condensed from an excellent report by Bro. G. W. Jeffress, D. D.

LOCAL OPTION IN ENGLAND.

LONDON, June 15,—The house of Commons last night passed, by a vote of 196 to 154, Lawson's resolution that it is desirable to give legislative effect to the former resolution, which affirmed the justice of local communities being in trusted with power to protect themselves from the operation of the liquor traffic. Gladstone voted with the minority.—Chronicle

The explanation of Gladstone's vote is that he loves beer and is mocked and deceived by strong drink and, being a daily user of it, is incompetent of course to form a rational opinion on any subject in which his captor and tyrant master is concerned.

THE MEANEST TRAP.

The Republican State Convention of Ohio has just passed the following;

"Resolved—That the public interests require that the general Assembly should submit to a vote of the people such amendments to the constitution of the state relative to the manufacture, sale, and use of intoxicating liquors as shall leave the whole matter to the legislature."

A State party that would put up such a villainous trap to preserve the liquor traffic from the people's vote upon it, ought to be put in its little bed till the resurrection morn, no matter what should take its place.

CAMPMEETING.

It is hoped that there will be a large attendance at Guerneville campmeeting. It will be observed that Enterprise Lodge has taken all the chances of the affair, and beside the motive of having a first class time in the redwoods we ought to make our presence and our assistance in inducing others to attend, a help to the success of the lodge in this enterprise.

One-third of the net proceeds of the affair are to be donated to the Home for Orphans and the balance goes to the debt which remains on the Templars Hall building. Try and attend if possible and take your friends with you.

SAN JOAQUIN CO. DIST. LODGE.

Was called to Order by the G. W. C. T. in Linden at 10.30 A. M. on Wednesday 8th June. There was a good attendance of both delegates and visitors. Six out of seven Lodges were represented and both Bands of Hope. The number of delegates entitled to seats was fifty.

We have now 492 members in good standing being an increase of 29 since last session. The two Bands of Hope have a combined membership of over 200. The amount of cash in Lodge treasuries amounted to $271. The smallest being $8, and the largest amount $90.

Resolutions were unanimously adopted as follows.

That this District Lodge appropriate the sum of $10,00 for a subscription to the RESCUE for three months, for free distribution in this county. Also that this Lodge ask the subordinate Lodges in this county to subscribe whatever sum they feel able, for the same purpose; the number of copies which their subscription purchases to be entirely at their disposal for distribution.

That the district Secretary prepare a notice for insertion in the RESCUE during the three months that it is distributed free by this Lodge.

Resolved that a committee consisting of one member from each Lodge in the county be appointed by the District Deputy to take into consideration the juvenile work in t' is district.

The meeting adjourned at 6, P. M. to meet in annual session at Woodbridge on Thursday September 15th 1881, at 1, P, M.

In the evening a public meeting was held in the church, when addresses were delivered by the G. W. C. T., and Bro Ellis of Lodi. There was a large attendance.

The sisters of Linden Lodge took most, if not all of the delegates and visitors, to their house for dinner and supper, rather than allow them to go to the only hotel in the place whose proprietor has always done all he can to injure the Lodge.

WM. JONES Dist. Sec.

PRAYING FOR TEMPERANCE.

Thousand of the best and purest women of our country are earnestly praying and unselfishly working, in their sphere, for the prohibition of the liquor traffic; and we believe the Lord will either answer their prayers or pour out the vials of his wrath on a nation that stands in the way of its accomplishment.

Thousands of men also are praying for temperance and a few of these thousands are voting as they pray, but thousands who pray for temperance vote for men who they know are not the friends of temperance.—It is an outrage against high heaven to pray to the Lord to drive intemperance from the land and then go to the polls and vote to perpetuate the liquor traffic.

If men would work and vote as they pray, intemperance would in a very few years be almost unknown in our land.—The Truth.

ONE DAYS WORK OF THE "BIER" DIVES.

G. C. Gottung murdered his wife on Thursday last, having found her in one of those infamous dens of vice, a Beer hall, which she was in the habit of frequenting during his absence.

A dead man found floating in the bay with a pipe and 85 cents in his pocket.

John V. Fulton was killed by a train while walking on the track: drunk when last seen alive.

Harry Davis a San Francisco drayman jumped overboard drunk from the steamer City of Stockton off Pinola Point and was drowned, whether he got drunk at the bar of the steamer is not stated.

LIFE PICTURES.

Deeper and deeper within the room
Fell the shadow of coming night,
And over a picture half cut in wood
An engraver bent in the waning light.
"It has grown so dark that I cannot see,"
He said as he laid his tools away.
"Line after line, it is wearisome work,
And I have accomplished but little to-day.
I wonder if any who look at this,
The picture the artist carefully drew,
Will think how each little line must be cut
In wood, with a hand that is firm and true.
I thought to-day, as I slowly worked,
How much the picture that I have made
Is like the life that we lead each day:
Side by side fall the light and shade,
And each line is like a single day,
And many and many a one it takes;
And yet it is not one line alone
That the beauty and strength of the picture makes.
Neither one day, nor a noble deed,
That makes a life that is lovely and grand,
But the little things that it patience takes
To bear, and to do, and to understand.
And surely every beautiful picture must Awaken in some of the many who see
A longing or thought that is earnest and true,
And that helps them to braver and stronger be.
And so with life pictures it is, I think;
But 'tis harder, far harder, to make them pure
In life than in wood, for in every life
There is much to bear and much to endure.
But our Father, the Artist above, He sees
Us working below, all our struggles and strife,
And He gave to us Jesus His Son for a plan
To guide us in making our picture of life.
And if we do our best, tho many a line
May be wavering, broken, or perhaps incomplete,
Yet I think He will tenderly smile on us when Life's picture is finished, and laid at His feet."

—Harpers Weekly.

WHY ATTACK THE CHURCH?

Mr. Editor;—I read the Rescue and like it—like its moral as well as its temperance tone. Am a little surprised that it has so high a moral character with an ex-captain of the "high seas" at the helm. May it grow and spread itself "like a green bay tree." We cannot well do without it on this coast.

But why are its colums used for repeated attacks on the church? Charging her with making no resistance to the tide of intemperance, and not co-operating with the I. O. G. T. in opposing the great evil of drunkard making in this country: I am a member of your order, not only in name, but in principle. Have been a worker both by precept and example in this good cause from my youth. But why forbid others from casting out devils, "because they follow not us?" Let us not draw the smut brush across our friend's face, to make ours appear fair. Let us not think to build up ourselves by pulling down others engaged in the same great cause. Who battled with the demon of drunkeness before we had an existence? More than a hundred years before the organization of the Good Templars, the Methodist Church put herself firmly on the temperance record, against drunkenness or drinking spirituous liquors as a beverage, by making the above one of her "General Rules."

Let us not exhibit egotism and a narrow understanding by acting like a class of modern skeptics who have snatched up the term "science" and pompously holding it up to the public gaze and sneeringly ridicule and falsely accuse the church of being an enemy to the progress of science when the church has ever nourished and encouraged true science, and was almost its sole preserver during the dark ages. We are too young to place ourselves at the head of the great temperance army, and kick and abuse all the old battle scared veterans who have fought under its banner before we were born.

Because the whole church including the clergy as a body do not join the I. O. G. T. do not charge them with encouraging the rum cause. I heard a member of our Order say in presence of several ministers at a public temperance meeting, "that the preachers of the town were as hard to get into the lodge as any other class."

But why? The lodge of which he spoke was composed largely of the giddy and gay who thot the lodge room a place to meet and have fun. And the preachers were wise enough to know that they were not wanted. Their sanctimonious faces would have a tendency to mar the joy of the participants in their nocturnal revelries, silly, sickening plays etc. But I am glad that such practices are not the rule in our lodges and that our order has not stained its record by having under its authority dances, champaign suppers and such like as most other secret orders have done to their discredit. Because there is one Dr. Crosby in the ministerial ranks it is not right to accuse the clergy as being friendly to the liquor traffic.

I hope those unwarrantable attacks will not be made on the church in the colums of the Rescue in the future.

J. Wood.

Tulare, June 8th.

The admonitions above have been accorded a place and are received in the kindly spirit in which they were evidently offered. But the criticisms seem to have been made from a questionable stand point. Perhaps our friend has been reading the Argonaut as well as the Rescue and has got them mixed up. The idea that the latter under its present management has ever uttered a word which can be considered an "attack upon the Church" is entirely new to its Editor. He believes to-day that there is not a religious paper in the state or anywhere, that it not as open to such a charge as the Rescue, not one that could more consistently repel such a charge; not one that would or does more readily and cheerfully defend the church and christianity from any hostile attack. If to condemn hypocrisy, inconsistency and heartrending cruelty on the part of those individuals and communities who keep the grogshop open Sunday and week day, is felt by any body to be an attack on the church. they will find that the old and new testaments are full of just such attacks. It cannot be a serious offence to follow such precedents.

The Rescue has never once found fault with a minister or church member for not joining a Lodge; it has never sought to prescribe a line of duty for them; it has commented on the open opposition of individuals to the temperance reform, and has lamented the barbarous inhumanity of church members, good templars and all other classes of men who refuse to do any thing to stop the most awful human slauter right at our doors that has ever cursed the world. A minister of the church, who writes in this number, has set forth his estimate of the conduct of all who vote for a whisky platform ticket. If that is an attack upon any church, it is the fault of that church, not the fault of the truth.

To the question who battled for temperance 100 years before the Good Templars? the truthful reply is, nobody, but a few extremists and fanatics, so called by the world, who have singly "prophesied" strait along from the earliest bible history till a recent date. John Wesley was one. The Rescue has always accorded full credit to his churches and people, but the church nor the churches never did anything in their church capacity for temperance, for the suppression of intemperance, for the overthro of the grogshop until lately; until fanatics and enthusiasts, men and women, inside and outside of the churches had become too numerous, too troublesome, too importunate to be longer ignored. And a large number of churches have done nothing yet.

This paper has no commendation for hoodlum Lodge exercises, but it cannot be aecountable for what a "member of our Order" may say. It counsels such a program in our Lodge rooms as would make them pleasant resorts for ministers and and christians. If the minister's example in a country village is used by his people as an excuse for opposing or keeping aloof from any temperance organization it is probable that, he ought to remove that obstacle; but he is not obliged to frequent a place where the exercises are unprofitable and uncongenial, nor is his failure to join or attend a lodge, ever noted in this paper. The Rescue does not "kick or abuse or forbid any person" that "follows not with us," unless he is found in the devils camp: as to the hint that there is any editorial self laudation or any attempt made to "smut others faces to make ours appear fair," the colums of the Rescue will make their own reply.

An important article of its creed is that whatever act or fact can be shown to count one for temperance, counts two for the church: that there is not any one thing that can be done in or for the church, in this country and in these days, that begins to compare in value, with the work that advances the temperance reform and undermines the rumthrone of Satan; that any attempt at reform which proposes to let the grogshops stand, to let the beerdives obliterate the Sabbath, to make the Savior a partner of Satan in the Sacramental cup, to be silent on the wine and other temperance questions, is not a reform that will at all help the church or humanity: not a work of the real church; nor one that the church of God ever did or ever will approve. The church of which Bro. W. speaks, preserved science and knowledge in the dark ages and deserves whatever thanks are due for a conspiracy to keep the world in utter ignorance: science was kept under lock and key. The godly men and the saintly women of God's best and dearest church, dont lock up the truths of God, of scripture, of every day fact. Their church will suffer from no attack the Rescue ever makes; when it takes opposite ground to theirs, it will feel some ground of alarm. and an earnest desire of amendment.

CLUBS.

Attention is requested to the offer of premiums for clubs, found elsewhere in this paper. The Encyclopedia offered is a reprint of Chambers Encyclopedia complete, in nonpareil type, size 6¼by 5 inches, 15 volumes 830 pages each, bound in cloth. The Library of Universal Knowledge is also 15 Volumes 9½by6¼ inches 900 pages each, in good clear brevier type, and is a handsome well printed book: contains all of the encyclopedia above and American additions,said to be altogether about 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's.

These works should be of inestimable value to every Lodge: give full information upon almost every subject or question that can be raised: they form a nucleus for a complete library, and will give the members a stimulus for the acquisition of useful information. Either of the two supplies the reading material that used to cost quite lately, $50 to $90 but the latter is the fullest and best printed and is recommended as the best choice.

In addition to the premiums offered elsewhere, for a club of 12 subscribers for one year at $2.00, an engraving of Mrs. Hayes portrait will be presented, and the same will be given for 6 subscribers for one year at 2.00 in addition to the clubs of 18 and 30.

For a club of six new subscribers for one year at $2.00, Julia Colmans excellent and useful works,the Juvenile Manual and Alcohol and Hygiene handsomely bound in cloth and six catechisms will be presented. It will be seen that these liberal premiums are offered for the purpose of extending the circulation of the Rescue, not to make money for it. To put 52 copies in the post office prepaid costs a good deal more than $2.00. Renewals of former expiring subscriptions will be counted in new clubs.

THE WHISTLER.

Frogs have their time to croak, and owls to hoot,
The patient flutist hath his time to toot;
The fiddler fiddleth when his work is done,
But thou, oh bore, hast no set time, ah none,
To Whistle.

We know when Bangs will play his horn of brass,
And Dingleby his flageolet, alas;
We know when comes the dulcet fish-horn's tone,
But, hang it, thou hast all times for thine own,
O Whistler!

When old pianos have worn out an air,
And voices crude have worn it very bare,
Thy puckered mouth does still emit the strain,
But all our prayers that thou shouldst cease are vain,
O Whistler!

Long after honest folks have gone to bed,
Wearied with toiling for their daily bread,
Then thou, oh lazy, long-eared, midnight bird,
Mid many imprecations still art heard—
Whistling,

I call thee bird—one of the shrill-voiced sort;
For 'tis quite plain that music's not thy forte;
Thou shouldst be feathered as the vultures are—
You get the feathers, I'll provide the tar,
O Whistler!

A LITTE INCIDENT SHOWING THAT THE PRIZE ESSAYS INFLUENCE THE YOUTHFUL MIND.

A few days after the essays on the twin evils, Tobacco and Intemperance had been sent to the committee for examination, a little girl who had manifested great interest in the production of a wise little essay on the subject, rushed into the schoolroom with flushed face and sparkling eyes and related what she termed "her first experience in speaking for temperance." "Don't you think, Miss ———" she exclaimed to her teacher, "that I saw a poor, ragged, drunken man kicked out of a saloon into the street, where he fell into the gutter. I felt so badly for the poor fellow that I said to the keeper;

"Yes, that's the way you saloon keepers do! You get a man in there to rob him of every cent he has, and then turn him into the street. You're a bad, wicked man, and something terrible will happen to you yet."

In the trembling lip and flashing eye the teacher thought she could possibly discern a future worker in the good cause, whose interest had been awakened by the study and care she had given to her essay. The good seed had evidently taken root there as we hope it may in every little heart thruout the land.

THE National Freeman, Chicago, a handsome magazine of 64 pages, ably conducted under the editorial charge of Rev. John Russell, one of the ripest philosophers of the prohibitory movement, should be in the hands of everybody who wants to be able to hold an intelligent argument on the subject.

THE NATIONAL LIBERATOR offers a tract, being a half sheet, the two first pages of that paper, with a picture of Gov. St John at 30 cts per hundred, $1 for 400 or $2 per 1000. Better send and get it. We want all the temperance literature we can get. Address 216 Washington St. Chicago.

CHRISTIANITY AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

BY REV R. E. JONES OF PETALUMA.

It is conceded by all the Bible has direct teaching. In this matter according to Prof. G. R. Wilcox, Chicago, the Bible is very accommodating. In answer to the question, Does the Bible encourage total abstinence? he says, "No and Yes." No, as to the letter, Yes, most emphatically as to the spirit. (The Advance, April 7, 1881) This seems to reduce the Bible to the level of the Delphos Oracle which always gave an answer capable of two constructions. Does the Bible give an uncertain sound? Does this pure fountain give sweet and bitter water? Does the book which denounces drunkenness so severely urge men to drink that which makes them drunken?

It is true that the Bible is often made to teach according to the wish of the interpreters, but we have the privilege of going again to the law and to the testimony and learn for ourselves according to the extent of our ability what says the Scripture.

In order to narrow the ground as much as possible, I will first call your attention to the passages in which the Bible unmistakably condemns the use of wine and strong drinks. Then we will look upon other passages which are thot to sanction the use of one or both.

But first we will search into the Bible charges against wine.

IT IS A POISON.

Deut. xxxii: 33—Their wine is the poison of dragons and the cruel venom of asps. In the same chapter as a sign of God's goodness to Israel it is said, Thou didst drink the pure blood of the grape. V. 14. While they were satisfied to follow God's command, they enjoyed the fresh natural juice of the grape: But when they left the true God, they became depraved also in their appetites, and turned the pure blood of the grape into a poison like that of dragons. Again, Hab. ii: 15—Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink that putteth the bottle (Heb. thy poison) to him, and makest him drunken. Evidently the woe is here owing to the quality and not the quantity given. There is never any woe connected with giving a neighbor milk, honey and oil. Yea, as a sign of good times under God's blessing and the influence of his spirit, Zach. iii: 10 says: "In that day saith the Lord of hosts shall ye call every man his neighbor under the vine and under the figtree (to partake of the fruit.)

Here the man who shares the fruit of the vine with his neighbor pleases God, while the man who shares it after it has been turned into poison is under God's curse.

The Hebrew word rendered here poison is kamath. Parkhurst defines it "inflamatory poison."

WINE DECEIVES.

Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. Prov. xx: 1

Look not then upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth his color in the cup, when it moveth itself aright. At the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder. Prov. xxiii: 31, 32.

I cannot conceive of any stronger terms to prohibit the use of intoxicating wine. It is the use, not the abuse of this kind of wine that is absolutely prohibited here; yea, so far as not to look upon it. There are many other passages condemning the use of wine and strong drink equally strong, but the limit of this article will not permit me to call attention to them; neither do I think the case could be presented any stronger than it has been already.

Now we must look on the other side. Taking our English Bible only we find wine frequently recommended in the same book as we have found such strong denunciations against it.

I want to call your attention first of all to Judges ix; 13 which is brought forward to recommend wine. We must remember that these words were found only in a parable, and are at least the words and opinion of an uninspired man, tho quoted by divine inspiration. Therefore I reject them entirely from this argument. On the other hand I am willing to let go Gen. xl: 11, as it is only a relation of a dream not a statement of fact. There is nothing gained by founding an argument on an unsafe basis. In the same way I would treat Prov. xxxi: 4–7 tho I think it is pretty strong for prohibition, because I am not sure that Lemuel's mother was inspired though her advice is repeated by an inspired writer. But that of necessity does not make it obligatory on us.

However we have still Deut. vii: 13. He will bless thy corn, thy wine and thine oil. Ps. 104. He causeth the grass to grow, and wine that maketh glad the heart of man. Zech. ix: 17. Corn shall make the young men cheerful and new wine the maids.

Now I want you to observe that the Hebrew word in each of the above quotations recommending wine is Tirosh not Yain the usual word denoting fermented wine. It is again said that good men and women used wine and are never reproved in the Bible for doing so, such as Melchizedech and Abram, Isaac and Jacob, Jesse and Saul, Abigail and David. But there are two remarks I would make here. There is no certainty that the wine used here was intoxicating. And on the other hand we know many of these did many wrongs which the Bible does not condemn, but merely relates the fact and passes on. The argument from the example of the old patriarchs to justify anything doubtful always proves too much, as it would justify many things now utterly abhorred by civilized society.

I have already said that there is no certainty that all the wine which the ancients used was intoxicating. That some of it was intoxicating is certain; but that by no means proves that they turned all the fruit of the grape into intoxicating beverage. There are two sides to this question, and I want your attention now to facts which seem to indicate that the ancients often made beverages of the fruit of the vine which were not fermented.

1. Fermentation is a very difficult matter and requires the temperature to be in a proper state, not below 50 or above 70 or 75. The summers of Palestine are dry and extremely hot in the valleys of Eshcol and Sarek, in the vintage months 100. This would compel the inhabitants to seek some method besides fermentation to preserve the fruit of the vine.

Again the grapes are very sweet: they will turn sour instead of fermenting, even in favorable circumstances. Very hot climates produce very sweet grapes which would be an additional inducement for the ancients to find some means beside fermentation to preserve the fruit of the vine. We have historical evidence that they had at least three methods.

1. Grape juice will not ferment when the air is completely excluded.

When the juice is boiled down till the substance becomes a very thick syrup it will not ferment.

3. If the juice be filtered and deprived of its gluten, the production of alcohol will be impossible.

Calmet says, "The ancients possessed the secret of preserving wines sweet thruout the whole year;" Dictionary of the Bible.

Archbishop Potter in his Grecian antiquities says, the Lacedemonians used to boil their wines on the fire till the fifth part was consumed, then after four years were consumed began to drink them.

Aristotle says, The wine of Arcadia was so thick that it was necessary to scrape it from the skin bottles in which it was contained, and to dissolve the scrapings in water. Pott. London Edit. P. 80.

Horace says there is no wine sweeter to drink than Lesbian; that it was like nectar, and more resembled ambrosia than wine; that it was perfectly harmless and would not produce intoxication. Anti Bacchus 220.

Another plan was filtration. The gluten or yeast is separated from the juice of the grape. Smith in his Greek and Roman Antiquities says, A great quantity of sweet wines was manufactured by checking the fermentation.

Pliny mentions still another method: They plunge the casks immediately after they are filled from the vat into water until winter has passed away and the wine has acquired the habit of being cold. Smith's Antiquities.

The question now comes, did the ancients call the grape juice thus treated wine.

Pliny says the Roman wines were as thick as honey and that Albanian wine was very sweet or luscious, and he speaks of a Spanish sober wine which would not inebriate. Anti Bac 221.

Nicander says "and Aeneas having squeezed the juice into hollow cups called it wine." Pott 78.

Horace speaks of fumigated wine of which an hundred glasses could be drunk without clamor or passion. This seems to me quite sufficient to prove that the ancients used unfermented beverages and called them wine.

SPREAD OF THE ORDER.—Information has just been received from D. D. R. W, G. T., Bro. W. R. Kahler of Shanghai, China, announcing the organization of a lodge of our Order on board the U. S. flagship Richmond with 42 charter members, Rev. G. A. Crawford L. D. Bro. K. writes; There are between 60 and 70 Good Templars on board who will all join the new lodge which is called Neptune No. 3. It will be a roving charter as the flagship goes to Panama shortly. The Worlds (Malins) two lodges here have gone to the wall!!! They bursted up the first lodge that was started here in Shanghai by myself years ago under the I. O. G. T. After they had joined the English order for a time I had a commission as D. D. but no G. T's!! Now we have three lodges Star of Hope, No. 1' Star of Faith No. 2 and Neptune No. 3, Juvenile Star of Hope, No. 1 and Star Degree Temple No. 1. I am now trying to arrange for a lodge in Hongkong." Bro. Kahler has rendered the Order invaluable service, and the lodges established by him will prove permanent if they partake of his enthusiasm for the good cause * * * Thru Bro. A Peterson, Interpreter and D. D. R. W. G. T. of New York comes the news of the organization of another new lodge in Norway. Bro. Peterson's correspondent, A. Johnson L. D. of Bergen N. W. Norway writes: The victory is ours; the lodge Nordcap (North cape) is instituted in Tromso (far north) after half a year's labor and the opposition of the Secession Party. It was instituted by Bro. Christophersen from our 'Stjernen.' Many prominent men in the land have joined. Yes, brother; there is great joy in Bergen to-day, as this is the most northern lodge in the world.

JAPAN.—Bro. Geo. W. Elmer, L. D of Alpha Lodge, No. 1 Yokohama reports his lodge as having initiations at nine out of the thirteen meetings of the quarter. The lodge is gaining in membership and influence. He proposes to try to secure a club for the RESCUE. An open meeting was held on the 24th of April which did much good and yielded two propositions for the lodge. The Christian Temperance Society hold fortnightly meetings and get a few signers. Thus the temperance work goes on.

A FEW PLAIN WORDS.—Judging from outward manifestations and the multitudinous congratulatory epistles received from every quarter, no ruler ever came into power with greater felicity or a more leal following than did the present R. W G T. It is but fair to say however that his elevation was contrary to his own desires and expectations, and all but demanded at the hands of the R. W. G. L. in the interest of a harmonious union and a sinking of factious warfare. Indulgent friends may be led to expect too much from the present R. W. G. T., simply because of his promotion or exaltation. No member of the Order would do, or if need be, sacrifice more for its advancement than he, were the opportunity and means at hand to do with. For years the R. W. G. L. has been but a figure head to the Order, and aside from holding annual reunions has accomplished but little. The secession movement of a portion of the Order in England caused it to waste much energy and more money, (which could have perhaps been more advantageously employed) and by reason of which it has been financially disabled ever since. The war of secession left it almost hopelessly in debt, and to free itself from which had well nigh absorbed its entire energies. The strength of our Order like that of a chain must be tested by its weakest part or link. Like a grand Lodge, which to make itself strong, aids to build up and fortify its weaker subordinates, so the R. W. G. L. should animate, and by its help intensify its weaker Grand Lodges. This would be the policy of the present head of the Order were the the exchequer in his command replete. Whenever in the jurisdiction of a Grand Lodge a prohibitory contest is being waged, the R. W. G. L. should send its most powerful advocates of that principle—the Bains, Finches, Hickmans, Kanouses, Hastings, etc. of the Order into that jurisdiction, all at one time to help make the good fight effective. This would be the policy of the present R. W. G. T. were not the treasury bankrupt, and such a consummation, no matter how devoutly to be wished for, an impossible feat. And thus other advance and reformatory measures might be presented, which under other or different circumstances might be feasible and politic are now impossible. It requires much of the "oil metalic to keep the machinery of an aggressive warfare such as ours should be in motion; and the aim and study of our leaders as good mechanics in charge of delicately organized machinery, should be to overcome the loss of power, by securing as little friction as possible. The beer interests of Kansas have been bodily kicked out by the prohibitory law of that state. The beer brewers lose no time in intercenine warfare, they are united, they appeal to their R. W, G. L. or "Beer brewers congress" and the latter reply "we will help you," and they immediately place $75,000 at their disposal, "to fight those temperance fanatics and their laws," while our R. W. G. L. standing in opposition to the other, having law, justice and right on our side, can do nothing to help maintain our position, but must leave it all to the local workers and authorities. Of course this will not always be so. It is hoped the present administration, if it do nothing else, will be able by careful management to bring the supreme body entirely out of debt during the coming year, present a clean balance sheet at the next session, and place the R. W. G, L. once more in an independent financial condition, with at least the opportunity to plan and execute advance and forward movements. It is expected of the R. W. G. T. of this year to be simply an administrative officer, the position at the last session being made an honorary, and not particularly a salaried one, which was right. In future when it has the financial ability to back its promises, it is hoped a competent and qualified leader will be chosen at a good round salary, and then be required to devote to the position all the ability and energy he may possess; but until this is done, too much should not be expected of a R. W. G. T. who is required to do his own work and furnish his own means. These words of friendly admonition are deemed to be meet because of the apparent tendency of the friends of the present R. W. G. T. in the goodness of their hearts and height of expectation to anticipate seem ingly a complete revolution of matters and things in general within the one brief year of his reign.

One warm friend writes a congratulatory letter and concludes that "the first and greatest thing to be seen in the position of R. W. G. T. is the vast amount of responsibility shouldered—a much higher one than a Popes or Kings, and capable of vastly better results, and thus leads one to question "whether he had not committed a great wrong in allowing himself to be thus burdened. Another friend aiming to be more considerate writes "I do hope the work will be revived under your administration. * * * * I wish the R. W. G. L. had adjourned for two years, then you could have accomplished something and vitalized the Order—one year is too short a time. "Another aiming to be eminently practical closes with "I authorize you to draw on me at sight for any assistance I can render "etc, etc, etc. The R. W. G. T. can but pledge his best efforts with the limited time and more limited means at his command—he can but promise to do the best he can, than which "Angels can do no more."

ENFORCE THE LAW.

There is in our Statutes a law prohibiting liquor saloons from keeping open on the Sabbath day—This law has not been enforced, as yet, to any very great extent. That has now commenced. In Solano county they began by petitions to the saloon keepers to close. Most agreed to do so, but some refused; prosecutions followed; the example spread to Yolo, Sonoma, Yuba and some other counties, generally. The complaints were made in the Justice courts, but in some instances indictments were obtained. I advise that complaints be made before the Justice, as there is a doubt as to the jusisdiction of the Superior Courts.

The farmers of California are compelled to employ such help as they can procure from the cities, during certain seasons of the year, and our State being dotted over with little villages and towns filled with liquor saloons, these men repair to these centers on the Sabbath, become intoxicated and render the town unfit for the residence of women and children. Week days they are out at work and if the saloons were closed upon the Sabbath, there would be comparatively little drunkenness in those farming centers; as it is, however, riot reigns as the rule. Many of these saloons get most of their income from this Sunday custom. Close them on the Sabbath and they must remain closed.

Is it not the duty of good citizens all over our State to rally and aid in seeing that this law is no longer a dead letter? shall we allow Sunday to be a day of riot instead of a day of rest? shall we allow the rising generation to be endangered by this demoralization, when there is a remedy at hand? All are equally interested in sustaining decency and morality in our State. Property, morality, religion and temperance should combine to enforce this law. As temperance workers, we are often met with the observation, that, if we had more restraints on the liquor traffic we would not enforce them; that we do not enforce the few we now have. Let us give them no chance to say that hereafter. Let prosecutions be pushed in all quarters and followed up, until it shall be unprofitable for the Sunday vendors to open, and then only will many of them stop the violation of law.

At the recent election of Rockford, Ill., the women were allowed to vote on the license question under a special ordinance; and of 2,622 women voting, only 24 voted for licensing the liquor traffic. No wonder the rumsellers hate and fear woman suffrage.

Whatever you do, dont forget to talk up the camp meeting at the Redwoods; get ready to go and get your friends to go with you.

Five temperance almanacs will be sold for 25 cts.; if kept over till next year they will be held at 25 cts. apiece.

Lecturers' Reports.

☞ The only authorized Grand Lecturers in this jurisdiction are Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Messrs. Wm. Crowhurst, Hugh R. Hughes, Dr. M. D. Merrick, F. J. Culver, Col. C. N. Goulding and George Bramall.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the Rescue, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

WM. CROWHURST.

Marysville, June 18th 1881.

Paskenta (under the hill) had a good audience and has done a good work. Whisky spies have all been expelled. House decorated with evergreens and literally packed with people, many had to stand outside, a number of names was obtained for Lodge. Bro. Whitlock is alive.

Newville, Colusa Co., reorganized the Lodge with good material and under favorable circumstances, large meeting on first night, not even standing room. Second night, extra benches would not accommodate the audience but many were compelled to stand outside.

Tehama was reached after 35 miles drive by Bro. W. C. Tatham, W. C. T. of Rock of Safety Lodge. He did good service in Lowereys, excellent service under Bro. Whitlock at Paskenta, was a host in Newville and Tehama. 13 names were obtained here for an earnest and hard working young Lodge, everything is strongly against them, but Bro. Wheeler may wheel them safely along yet.

Red Bluff was in earnest concerning the enforcement of the Sunday law. A vote of the audience showed a readiness for immediate action in the matter. Bro. Ryan, who conveyed us all around the country, as Bro. Milton Kennedy of Visalia did around Tulare Co., and as Bro. Crane of Forbestown did around parts of Butte and Yuba Counties, certainly deserves praise and thanks for courtesies and kindness extended to Grand Lodge through its Lecturer. This ends the present campaign in Tehama Co. God grant that the work may continue.

COL. C. N. GOULDING.

Colusa 6th 1881.

Since writing you last I have lectured two evenings in Grimes Landing, two evenings in Sycamore, spoken three times in Colusa and by request lectured in Meridian at 11 o'clock Sunday morning. The meeting here last evening (Sunday) was one of the largest ever held in the place, the Pastors of, the various churches all uniting in a Union Service; the Sunday law has been strictly enforced, to the great delight of law abiding temperance people and the evident discomfiture of the "Whiskyites." Colusa county (long called the Missouri of California) is awakening and a better day is dawning. Considering that "Harvest" is at hand my meetings have been unusually large. I lecture here again to-night (Monday) and then go on to Princeton, Butte city etc as annouced in the Rescue.

Have endeavored to impress upon the people the necessity of temperance literature; I trust my efforts in that line have not been in vain. To reach the balance of my appointments in this county it will be necessary to obtain a horse and carriage, as I am getting beyond daily mail and stage communications. If my reports have not been voluminous I trust my efforts, have not been in vain, and that some seed may have fallen by the wayside that may bear fruit, in the future.

You may forward Rescue to Orland where I expect to be Saturday and Sunday next 25th and 26th; prospects are good for organizing lodges at Williams, Maxwell and Grimes Landing on my return from Gaiter school house and Leesville about the 9th of next month.

M. D. MERRICK.

Met in the M. E. Church a small audience, the meeting not having apparently been well advertised The lodge is said to be doing well altho I saw but few of its members.

At Petaluma my appointments had not been properly understood, and I was expected the evening before. I had a fair audience and an interesting meeting, the Revs. Allen and Dille being present and joining in a cordial invitation to repeat my visit and hold a series of meetings. On the evening of June 16th met with the friends of Hugh DeLacy and wife to celebrate their tin wedding in San Jose, and on the 17th visited the young and growing Garden City Lodge of the same place. My first meeting in Salinas was not a large one, but the audience seemed deeply interested. On Sunday the 19th addressed the congregation of the M. E. Church South at 3 o'clock, and spoke to a large and enthusiastic audience in Central Hall in the evening. The lodge in this place is in a very flourishing condition, and is continually adding to its working force. Some of the prominent men of the city are among the most active workers, and the future of the lodge and of temperance work in Salinas is bright indeed.

Little River, Mendocino County. June 19, 1881.

Since brother Culver left I have delivered addresses at Albion and Little River. At the latter place I spoke to excellent audiences on Friday and Saturday evenings. At the last lecture I took up a collection of $7,25 for Orphans Home. This was a good showing compared with 75 cents which the Postmaster assured me was all that was collected at a meeting held here a few years ago. But I have to record a further pleasing circumstance which occurred since I came here.

Messrs Coombs and Perkins, Mill owners have offered to give the requisite lumber to the Lodge to build a new hall.

The Good Templars will at once look out for a site. The gentlemen making this generous offer are not members of the Order, but they recognize the existence of a fact, which is observed in other places beside Little River, that a Good Templars Lodge in a place improves its moral and social standing.

I am advertized to speak at Mendocino city this evening and to-morrow evening. John Arnoup.

LECTURER'S APPOINTMENTS.

J. ARNOUP.

Notice.—The services of Grand Lecturer, Culver being required in Sonoma county in connexion with the Temperance camp meeting to be held at Guerneville from the 1st to the fifth of July, an arrangement has been made with Mr. John Arnoup of Oakland to fill the appointments made for Bro. Culver in Mendocino county commencing with that of the 13th and 14th June at Salmon creek (Albion) and continuing for the balance of the month. Bro. Arnoup's appointments will be as follows; Kibesillah, 24, 25; Westport 26, 27; Cahto, 28 and 29. R. Thompson G. W. C. T.

COL. C. N. GOULDING.

Will speak at Butte City, 24, Orland, 25, 26; Newville, 27, 28; Elk Creek, 29, 30; Sheet Iron July 1, 2; Guithers school house, 3, 4. Leesville 5, 6.

MRS. EMILY PITT STEVENS

Petaluma, June 19th 1881.

Ed. Rescue—Dr. Merrick lectured here on the evening of the 14th on Prohibition. I wish that lecture could be repeated in every voting precinct in this state. It was the most masterly plea for Prohibition I have ever heard. We want him to repeat it here soon on Sunday evening, and he shall have an audience limited only by the capacity of our largest church. E. R. Dille.

Bro. Hughes sent his report in a registered letter which only reached as the paper was going to press, and it has to stay over with a good page of other outs. Registered letters do not come directly to the P. O. Box like other letters: they are safe but not swift missives.

Lompoc has set a good example in dealing with saloons, that are set up in temperance colonies against the wishes of the whole community.

Juvenile Department.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the G. W. C. T., Robert Thompson, 1,531 Golden Gate Avenue, or the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, George Bramall, Haywards, or Geo. B. Katzenstein, 328 J street, Sacramento.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

OUR FIRST TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.—NO. 5.

OUR TEACHERS.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

We could not have attained anything like the proficiency we did in our temperance school, without the arrangement of the scholars in small classes with faithful teachers. This enabled us to secure accuracy of recitation and ambition to gain the prize without much public talk about it. The latter was all about alcohol, its nature and effects, which gave that subject the prominence really its due. At the same time it relieved the teacher of any urgent necessity for the careful study and understanding of the lesson; many would not have had time to give that; but they could sit with the class, hear its recitations, and keep up the ambition and the attendance of the scholars, leaving the superintendent free to give his time to the study and explanation of the lesson.

This arrangement so divides duties and responsibilities, that it becomes possible for temperance schools to be started in many places where it has hitherto been considered impossible, because no one had been found capable of taking all these duties upon himself. No one would require this of a Sunday-school superintendent, and it should not be required of a temperance school. It furnishes good temperance work for many temperance people, who might otherwise do little or nothing, and especially for young people. The bond between teachers and scholars is closer than between superintendent and scholars, so that the attendance is more likely to be kept up. Sometimes also a Sunday school teacher can be brought in with the most of her or his scholars.

Another good plan is to have an assistant superintendent to study and give the lessons, especially where the attendance is large, but in no case should the classes and tcachers be dispensed with unless you make a primary class of the whole and treat it as such, which is indeed the method essentially pursued in most Bands of Hope, and this is one of the reasons why that institution is popularly thought to be for "the little tots," and why it cannot command the attendance of the older boys and girls.

With this arrangement of teachers and classes, the teachers can become learners without losing their dignity, and indeed without being told that they need instruction, which at first they might resent. If questions are asked in class which the teacher is not able to answer, a little tact on her part will delay the answer until she has had time to look it up, or refer it to the superintendent which can be done in many ways. The practical outcome in many cases is that the teacher gets a manual and becomes an earnest student.

I shall never forget the expressions of delight with which some of the teachers in this our first temperance school came to the superintendent because they had found explanations of truths which they had never understood before. One lady understood the symptons of beer poisoning for the first time. She had always supposed that beer fat was good healthy flesh. She now saw that it was an indication of disease, tending to degeneration and death. She saw how some of her dear friends were being unconsciously taken off by it, and she was as indignant as if they were being taken off by any other slow poison. She immediately set on foot efforts for their rescue, making herself an active and efficient worker outside the school. This is the constant tendency of these vital truths, at least among conscientious people. It is one of the best methods for recruiting and training effective workers, and if adults would enter it in order to start it working in the younger element, gradually they would soon prove it so.

We are obliged to say however that the order of sequence of affairs was rather in the opposite direction in our school. We were poorly supported with teachers at first, but when the genius of the work came to be better understood, we had the wives of two of the ministers, and the children of the third who could not attend, one of the teachers from the academy, the deacon's wife and her sister and occasionally the deacon himself, and even a vestryman from the Episcopal church, while the ministers frequently gave us the light of their countenances.

I have known the women of one large Union to adopt the plan of planting a school in some favorable locality and nourishing it in this way until they had worked in the residents in that vicinity, and then leaving them in charge go elsewhere and start another school in the same manner. Indeed the system is but in its infancy. It is capable of large development and we hope the work may yet reap from it very large results.

SALMON FISHERIES OF ASTORIA.

Come now, my folks, and we will talk about these fisheries. Let us go up Main street on to the hill for a grand view. Behold the scene! Boats, boats, boats! The great Columbia is seven miles wide and literally covered with fishermen's boats, the white sail fluttering over the broad expanse like ten thousand butterflies on a prairie. And how do they catch the salmon? I will tell you; they catch them with gill-nets. The gill net is made like a seine with large meshes. The fish attempts to go thru, and if he is a juvenile fish he makes it all right, but the larger ones, failing to get thru, try to "back out when the strong twines draw into their gils and hold them fast. The nets are some twenty feet wide and some of them 600 feet long. One side is floated up with pieces of wood, while the other side is weighted down with lead; and so the net hangs from the surface 20 feet deep, and as the fishermen (two to a boat) row their boats along the line of floats they can see the entangled fish by seeing the floats bobbing up and down. They then draw up that part of the net, and put the fish into the boat. Now think of thousands of these nets drawn in a direction across the river, and extending up and down the river for many miles, and you will conclude that Mr. salmon has very little chance for escape. They sell the fish for the uniform price of 60 cents each, and when we remember that thousands of men are engaged and making good wages, we may suppose the great number caught.

And how do they save and get market for these enormous quantities of fish? Look along the shelves of every grocery store, and see what stocks of canned salmon, and then remember that the stores of the civilized world are supplied from these fisheries. And I hear you say, "O, my; how do they can so many?. It is done in large establishments called canneries. I am told that there are over 20 of these establishments in Astoria and vicinity. You would be astonished to go thru one of these canneries and see the systematic order of the work and the many thousands of cans made ready for the market daily. Now, boys, would you like to go fishing? Do you think it would be grand to haul up the great red fellows, and when your boat was loaded set sail for the canneries? Ah, look out! Danger there! Better stay at home and buy a nice can of salmon once in a while, and think of the hardships and perils to which these fishermen are exposed; think of their little open boats away down there on the bar, among the frightful breakers in the darkness of night. Often the boats are filled or capsized, the men drowned beneath the merciless breakers, and all carried out to sea by the tide, and in the morning the brief talk goes round that another boat and crew is lost. One morning since I have been here three boats were found drifted on the beach, and no one to tell the tale of the fearful struggle. Such losses are of so frequent occurrence that little is said of them. But more dreadful even than the midnight breakers is the terrible shark that infests these fisheries. Just at the time when the weary fisherman is rejoicing over the success of his long night's toil, and feels himself most secure, is when the vicions monster makes his fearful onslaught, and the poor fisherman will hardly escape. This most ravenous species of shark is numerous along the shores of the city. Their great red eyes are often seen glaring from behind their hiding, while from their horrid mouths a stench of loathsome poison fills the air and stupifies the unhappy victim into a strange spell, in which condition he regards the monster as his best friend, and the venom of his breath as a healing balm for every ill. To this dreadful spell indeed is attributable almost all the loss of life in these fisheries. And you wonder that the people dont destroy such a terrible foe. Ah, you will wonder more when I tell you that the laws of Oregon protect them with all possible care. Many fathers have seen their sons and daughters torn and mangled by them, and yet vote every year for their protection. They feed entirely upon human flesh and blood. The hearts of women and girls are their special dainties, and the husbands and fathers of Oregon cheerfully vote them an abundant supply, not knowing but that their own wives and daughters may be the unhappy victims, dragged away to the slaughter pen as food for these awful creatures. It is sickening to think of, but I have little hope for the better until an army of juveniles is trained up in Oregon to an honorable man and womanhood. To this end I shall work and hope and pray.

THE LIITTE DRUNKARD ASLEEP IN SUNDAY-SCHOOL.

—A Christian lady had collected a lot of wild street boys into a class, and was trying to teach them, when, one day, she noticed that one of them had fallen asleep and begun to snore.

"He's drunk!" said his ragged little companions, laughing. Of course there was no use in trying to do anything with him then, but three days afterward she saw and questioned him.

"Yes, I was drunk, that's a fact," said Johnny, as frank as could be. "I didn't mean to let you see me, 'cause I kind o' love yer, but I couldn't help it,"

"Why, Johnny, you shouldn't say so. You could help it."

"No; yer see I've got so used to it I can't stop."

"Oh, I am so sorry! What was it that ever made you begin to drink?"

"I learnt it when I runned errands for Mike Dooley, down in Willard Street. He keeps a liquor store, and he gin me the rum and sugar in the bottoms o' the glasses for my pay."

"Johnny it would be terrible to have you die a drunkard. I can't bear to think of it. Won't you try to give up drinking, if I'll tell you how you can?"

Johnny thought a minute.. "I don't believe I could I've got so used to't, you see. If I go without I feel so gone here' (putting his hand on his stomach.)

There were tears in the gentle teacher's eyes, Johnny looked up and saw them, and was touched. He began to reconsider.

"I—I donno know but I'd try if I thought' twould make you feel better."

"God bless you Johnny, do you give me your hand on it, and say you'll stop drinking, honest and true?" There was a pretty long pause then. Johnny was making a mighty effort. "Yes'm"' he said (and he drew a long breath) "I'll promise never to drink no more liquor—for your sake."

"It ought to be for Jesus' sake, Johnny."

"Could He make me keep my promise? You ask Him, can t you?"

Hardly sure of the boy's meaning, the question was so unexpected, the kind teacher neverthe-less knelt immediately; Johnny knelt too, and when she had prayed, he said he guessed he would "ask Him himself."

"Lord Jesus up in heaven, please help a little feller as wants ter be good, and don't never let him drink rum no more. Amen."

That was Johnny's prayer· And he meant it. All his conduct since has proved how truly in earnest the poor little street boy was when he asked the Lord to help him keep a promise made to his teacher, "'cause he kind o' loved her." He is living in a good situation in the country, and bids fair to grow up a conscientious, upright man.

THE CHILDREN'S BREAD CAST TO DOGS.—The Rev. Dr. Tiffany in a recent sermon stated that if the grain used in the United States, in the year 1878, in the manufacture of alcoholic liquors, had been converted into flour, and baked into four-pound loaves, there would have been a sufficient number to have given one to every family in the country forty-seven and a half weeks of the year.

ROVER'S PETITION.

JAMES T. FIELDS' LAST POEM.

"Kind traveler, do not pass me by,
And thus a good old dog forsake;
But stop a moment on your way,
And hear my woe, for pity's sake!

"My name is Rover, yonder house
Was once my home for many a year;
My master loved me; every hand
Caressed young Rover, far and near.

"The children rode upon my back,
And I could hear my praises sung;
With joy I licked their pretty feet,
And round my shaggy sides they clung.

"I watched them while they played or slept:
I gave them all I had to give;
My strength was theirs from morn till night,
For only them I cared to live.

"Now I am old, and blind, and lame,
They've turned me out to die alone,
Without a shelter for my head,
Without a scrap of bread or bone.

"This morning I can hardly crawl,
While shivering in the snow and hail;
My teeth are dropping one by one;
I scarce have strength to wag my tail.

"I'm palsied grown with mortal pains,
My withered limbs are useless now;
My voice is almost gone, you see,
And I can hardly make my bow.

"Perhaps you'll lead me to a shed
Where I may find some friendly straw
On which to lay my aching limbs,
And rest my helpless broken paw.

"Stranger, excuse this story long,
And pardon, pray, my last appeal;
You've owned a dog yourself, perhaps,
And learned that dogs, like men, can feel."

Yes, poor old Rover, come with me;
Food, with warm shelter I'll supply—
And heaven forgive the cruel souls
Who drove you forth to starve and die!

To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen."

NOTES AND QUESTION.

Who is called the Prince of darkness?

How are bad people like darkness?

What are the right uses of night? (Psa. iii: 5; i. 2; xix. 1, 2).

What are some of the wrong uses of night? (Last part of verse 7; Matt. xxiv. 43).

What sort of life makes it like darkness even in daytime?) Isa. xxviii. 7 Job v. 14.)

Verse 6. What are the right uses of sleep?

How many hours should a growing person sleep? (Eight or nine).

What does the Bible call the man who sleeps more than is necessary, and when he should be at work? (Prov. vi. 9; xx. 20).

What causes some men and boys to sleep when they don't need to or intend to?

What sort of places have you seen drunkards asleep in?

What makes men who use beer and other intoxicating drink become so fat? (They are idle so much that fatness increases.)

Is such fatness health? (No. Such flesh is not living flesh but dead, and so much extra load to carry, making a man more liable to sunstroke, apoplexy, and mortification of slight wounds and bruises.)

What are some of the meanings of the word "sober" in the Bible? (See margin of Titus ii.—vigilant, wise, discreet.)

What other meaning has the word?

How does vigilance, wisdom, and discretion lead men to be "sober," in the temperance sense of the word?

What sins do we need to "watch" against? What opportunities should we "watch" for?

Verse 7. What difference is there in business the next day between men who spend the night in drunkenness, and those who spend it in innocent and restful sleep?

Verse 8. As soldiers of Christ and Temperance what do we have to do besides watching? What helmet should we wear? The hope of Heaven beyond the blue, as a reward of being true and good, is indicated by the blue ribbon of some temperance clubs. I will give you all one to-day to wear like a ticket, to show that you are going to Heaven. What breastplate should we wear? (Thousands of drunkards by trusting in Jesus to help them in answer to their prayers, and by loving the Saviour instead of loving sin, have been saved from the attacks of appetite.) What can we take as a Temperance shield.?

PLEDGE, PRAYER, PROHIBITION.

Verse. 9 What punishment does the rum-drinker bring on his body? on his mind? on his soul? What sufferings to his family? To society? How may he be saved from all this?

Verse 21. After taking a pledge, what should be our motto? "Hold fast."

Verse 22. (The real meaning of this verse is, "Abstain from every form of evil").

A SUM IN ADDITION.

"Add"—Faith; Courage; Knowledge; Temperance; Patience; God-likeness; Kindness; Charity.

TOTAL, A True Man.

Or these virtues might be set up, in imagination, one after another, as a group of statues: Faith, not as a feeble woman, but an armed man going forth to such victories as are recorded in Heb xi; Courage, as a John the Baptist telling some wicked Herod of his sin; Knowledge, as a true scholar; Temperance, as a man of health and strength and self-control; and so with the rest.

ENIGMA.

BY T. J. ALLEY.

A declarative sentence of 17 letters.

The 1, 2, 5, 6, furnishes the best beverage;

3. 2, a short method of writing "you and I;"

4, 12. 7, the abreviated name of a state that is amending her constitution against the liquor traffic;

14, 15, 16, what Indiana will do in the constitutional amendment battle;

10, 13, 14, the time to renew our vows against every degrading vice;

3, 13, 8, 11, what is sure to give us the victory;

5, 9, 17, what liquor and tobacco tell when they promise good.

The whole was a sharp rebuke to the wine bibbers of Jerusalem, and lives upon the holy page as an example of fidelity and wisdom to us.

"Rapid Transit Lager-Bier," is the sign over a saloon in a neighboring city. We know of nothing more appropriate. It affords a quick passage from wealth to poverty, respectability to disgrace, health to bloated bodies, and from this world to one of reckoning beyond.—Ex.

NOTES FROM THE GEN'L SUP'T OF J. W.

Mrs. E. P. Stevens sends us orders for Rituals and Badges for new Bands of Hope organized by her. Her heart is in this Juvenile work, the most important work of the Order, and we hope very soon to make the whole Order sec it in some measure as she does. Our G. W. V. T. writes, "If all our Good Templars would do their duty, and help us as they ought to do, we could have all their children in the Good Templar lodges in a few years. How sad that such a great work is left for a few to do, or half do I might say, for a few cannot do all that ought to be done."

Thank God the importance of this juvenile work is calling forth new laborers in the temperance field, and the open Band of Hope meetings will soon prove a powerful aid in the advancement to universal sobriety.

Prof. William Crowhurst also sends us a number of new Bands organized by him, and also a charming letter to help us in our work, and from which I quote.

"Now and then I take a charter member into a new lodge who tells me that he has never drank liquor, and that his training is due to the Band of Hope, and he therefore desires to unite with our order so as to give aid and support to an order so noble as to reach out after the children, and throws a safeguard around them thru the formative period of life." The above ought to be read, and reread in every lodge of Good Templars in our jurisdiction. Laurel Lodge, No. 202 has a dozen members if not more who have joined the lodge from the Band of Hope of this place.

Bro. Tubb has organized seven Bands in Contra Costa county.

Bro. Hughes is doing well in this work in his field of labor.

NOTICE:—Orders for supplies for Bands of Hope, must be signed by the superintendent of the Band sending an order, or by the organizing officer at the time of organization.

GEORGE BRAMALL.

HAYWARDS, June 15, 1881.

MR. EDITOR:—The Haywards Union Temperance Society held its regular temperance meeting in the M. E. Church, Sunday June 12th, and as the day was called the childrens day by the M. E. C. the meeting was a union one and conducted by the Superintendent of the Sabbath School. The church was beautifully decorated with flowers and evergreens. The exercises consisted in singing, reciting and reading by the children, and a Bible reading by Mrs. M. E. Congdon, whose services had been procnred by the H. U. T. S. and who were repaid by the highly cultivated and christian character and manner of the lady. I cannot occupy the space I would like in the good old RESCUE but I hope you will give this a place. The audience was very large, and I believe every one present was much pleased with the reading, and I am sure a very hearty welcome awaits Mrs. Congdon should she be pleased to visit us again.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

THE WINE INTEREST.

No. I.

There was a time not very long ago, when wine was almost universally believed to be a legitimate natural product of the fruits of the soil, and a proper article appointed by the Creator for the use of man. It was supposed to be nourishing, strengthening, supporting, and to possess a greater range and variety of medicinal properties than were ever claimed for Holloways Pills or R. V. Pierce's quackeries. It was also believed that the Creator had been a little careless or indiscreet or mistaken, in providing us with such a useful food and such a cure-all medicine, that is so expensive and so dangerous, and so tempting to abuse and excess; and which has destroyed more human lives and souls and properties, and caused more sin, crime, misery and untimely death than war, pestilence, famine and all the other evils combined that have ever cursed the world.

But there were some folks who did not believe the Creator ever made mistakes or surrounded men with snares of perdition; they subjected wine to a thoroly scientific inquisition. The result was the discovery that every pretension ever made for wine outside of the Bible and the writings of some heathen philosophers, was a fraud, a folly, a delusion: they found wine was an unmitigated impostor, a cheat, a lie, in every thing. It was and is just what the Bible says; a mocker, a disturber, a deceiver, a perverter, a biter, a stinger, a fell destroyer. Its claim to be nourishing, strengthening and a medicine was most absolutely false. Every thing the world had believed of it was a mistake, except that it was dangerous. It was found that God never made or provided for making a particle of it. It was and is a product of rotten grapes, after every particle of any useful property of the grape has been destroyed. It is nothing but alcohol, and water with a flavor which is unsubstantial, and a vestige of sugar perhaps. It can be made just as good from rotten potatoes or apples or cactus plants or cabbage leaves or molasses—and water, and a few coloring and flavoring drugs—provided always, that the original vegetable article from which it is made, must be rotted and putrified and made to emit for days a nauseous and deadly poisonous gas and a horrible stench.

The value put upon wine was a monstrous fraud too. The imitations of regular grape wine made from any alcoholic base at a few cents a gallon, are consumed all over the world by drinkers without suspicion, and they answer the purpose equally well. No one who buys French wine in or out of France, of the cheapest up to the most expensive brands, unless he has watched their manufacture, has the least security that they are not frauds made for 10 or 20 cents a gallon. No one, who drinks California wine away from the ranch or factory where grape wine is made, knows or can find out whether it is potato or grape or cider wine. Everybody who drinks it is quite satisfied of one thing: and that is all he needs or wants to know: it will make drunk, and one thing is actually as good as another for that purpose. There would be a terrible outcry made if tea and coffee merchants were known to sell a fabricated article for a dollar or two a pound, that they were manufacturing from old rotten rubbish at four or five cents a pound; but, as the scripture says, wine is a mocker and they that are entrapped by it are not wise. So one thing answers for them as well as another, if it has the right amount of drunk in it.

The advocates of the manufacture and sale of wine are so, either because they desire to make money themselves by the ruin of others—or they have been entrapped and mocked and fooled by wine—or they are most deplorably and comprehensively ignorant of everything that relates to wine as almost every wine drinker in this country is.

The traders in drunkenness and their tools have one defensive weapon, which they are very fond of using, because they have no other.

They say the advocates of sobriety and honesty and decency lie about wine and drink, to make money out of it someway. Now every body with any sense at all knows that such a charge is utterly false, because we are the only people in the country who could sell liquor and make money by it: not drinking ourselves, we could gobble up all the money of the drinkers and hold on to it, and only lose our self respect and character and honesty and our souls: we could hold on to the fool's money to the last, but the liquor sellers cannot: they drink and go to death and ruin and perdition, at a quicker average rate than the victims they destroy. If we were after money and would lie to get it, we could make easy fortunes in the wine business.

The wine dealers have no motive except gain, and that too, dishonest gain; gain obtained at the expense of their neighbor's life and soul and of their own. We have a prospective gain too, from the final extinction of wine; and we are proud of it. We expect to save 100.000 or so of lives from going out in darkness and in the service of satan every year in this country. We expect to be the helpers and instruments in making millions of homes and many millions of people happy, safe and joyous and prosperous thru the downfall of the devouring monster, who has been the merciless butcher of our race, the destroyer of our homes, the invader of our peace for centuries. We expect to see this now most unhappy of all States become a garden of innocence and peace and happiness and the worship of the God of our country replace the horrible orgies of satan which now desolate it. And we hope with good reason to see every nasty deadfall that now destroys all honest business, replaced with at least five honest and enriching industries and employments. And we hope many millions of people will dwell in Heaven who can never get there while the grogshop and the devil rule here.

The people who want to gain money by the drunkenness and ruin of their neighbors tell us, that making wine and brandy is an enriching business for the wine makers and for the State. It is freely admitted that if a remunerative price could be obtained for those drinks and they should all be exported and sold, and not a drop consumed in the State, the business would be as enriching to us here as any other could be, yielding the same percentage of advance upon cost. That is quite clear. But we know its purchase and use would result in a dead loss to its consumers abroad, without doing them a particle of benefit; we know it would kill thousands of men, women and children, and would have just the same effects as its use by the Alaska Indians, only those effects would be a little slower among some of the whites.

If we could steal a large amount of cattle and horses every year in Oregon and sell them in Nevada at an exorbitant profit without any risk of being caught and hung, we should get very rich all the same; but the people of Oregon and Nevada would be a good deal more impoverished than we should be enriched; and that is precisely what occurs with our wine and brandy customers, except that they are worse sufferers than people who only have their cattle stolen.

Our leading papers which fish for subscribers by prophesying smooth things and great wealth from the cultivation of drunkenness in this State, are very fond at times of enlarging upon the monstrous crime of England in forcing opium upon the Chinese. They have no subscribers in England or they would sing an entirely different song. The crime of England in that thing is one of the most wicked and cruel and sordid and utterly horrible ever known in the history of sin; but it is very much like our sending wine and brandy to China and Japan and England or anywhere. England dont force any body in China to buy opium a particle more than we force Englishmen to buy brandy. But she does compel the Chinese Emperor and his advisers to abstain from prohibiting its voluntary purchase by the Chinese people. That is all the difference and it is a very trifling one.

But the pretensions and promises and statistics and arguments of the wine and brandy advocates are utterly fallacious and unfounded. There are statements made by some of them which are so false that they seem designedly so; some false impressions are received and promulgated thru the terrible fanaticism enkindled by avarice and the use of these poison beverages, and no doubt in most instances the most sublimely ridiculous and self-contradictory statements are made and accepted and believed because of the benighted ignorance which is so very general upon the whole subject.

In next and following numbers these pretensions will be examined and their falsehood exposed.

SWALLOWING A CAMEL. The Canada Temperance Act provides that no election shall be held under it on the day of a parliamentary election. The county of Lambton, Ontario, carried a no license election on the day appointed by the Dominion Governor: but after the day had been so fixed, the Ontario Provincial government made it the day of parliamentary nominations. After the law went into force, a Court decided the election had been illegal because a nomination day is often an election day.

THE CIRCULATION of the RESCUE has been during the last four weeks 3120, and will be for several weeks to come. Five extra copies are sent each week to a number (nearly one hundred) of the lodge deputies, who it is hoped will distribute them to the best advantage. The Market Report on page 240 of this issue will save many a family five years' subscription to the Rescue on a three or four months grocery bill.

LOMPOC THE TEMPERANCE COLONY.

BY MRS. E. P. STEVENS.

Lompoc Valley is situated in the Northern part of Santa Barbara county, sixty miles from the town of San Luis Obispo. Thru it runs the Santa Inez river to the sea. Just beyond it to the north is one of the two wharves over which the immense quantity of wheat, barley, flax and other produce are shipped. There are many thousands of acres of rich soil, easily worked and not seriously affected by drowth. The large area of grazing land is said to be unexcelled for dairy purposes by any in the state. The climate is cool, similar to that of San Francisco, but when there are no winds the sun's rays are much more powerful than in our city, being farther south. The valley was purchased by a company seven years ago, and offered for sale in various sized tracts, town lots or large dairy ranches on the installment plan, a clause being inserted in every deed that no liquor should be made or sold. Bro. Webb, Judge Heacock, Hon. F. Adams, W.W. Broughton, B. F. Tucker post master, being the advocates of that clause and pioneers of the colony. So from the fact that it was to be a temperance colony it has attracted many families from all parts of the state and Eastern states, and in the old world it has become widely known, only thru the fact of its safety for homes because of the immunity from liquor selling.

Just outside the colony a saloon was once started, but an Irishman who got to drinking there demolished it. In the same place another was started on rented ground, but Mr. Jesse Hill would not renew the lease of land to the parties selling, so that died. The drug store soon after the colony was started, was visited by the ladies and all the liquor poured out, because it was proven that the druggist was selling for other than medical purposes, and the proprietors refused to promise not to sell only on prescription of a physician.

At one of the hotels the proprietor was several times waited on by the people en masse who demanded that his selling of liquor should cease; every effort was brought to bear upon him, but he defied public opinion and continued to sell to young and old, and finally his hotel wa bomshelled and he had to leave the colony. Of the later attempt of the man named Walker to defy the public opinion of Lompoc, and the destruction of his saloon you have already learned. The stage company have forbidden their drivers to carry any liquor into the colony from neighboring towns, and I believe all the stage drivers connected with the Lompoc line are total abstinence men, I received at Lompoc the very best of attention. Bro. Gregg W. C. T. and all the lodge vied with each other in kindly courtesies. It would look like egotism for me to further dwell upon my reception. I will only add that it was the only place where a brass band turned out to do me honor, and that it was very sweet music, for it sounded to my ears like the music of the future, when all our state like Lompoc shall be free from the traffic in strong drink. I wish to add that land is still to be had at Lompoc, and I know that it is not possible for a saloon to exist in the colony; eternal vigilance may be the price of their liberty, but it will be freedom from the curse of the traffic.

I suppose all know of the zeal and energy of our indomitable Bro. Webb, Ed. of Lompoc "Record" and thru him all information in regard to the colony, and its lands may be had. I was amused at the reply of the Band of Hope children when I asked "boys and girls what will you do when you are grown, if a man should try to plant a saloon near your homes ?" "Blow it up" was the shout from the children, so you could easily tell what was the sentiment in Lompoc from the voice of the little ones. Santa Rita, several miles from Lompoc is also a temperance settlement, a good Lodge there and no saloon. At Pine Grove there is a society called the "Pledge of Honor" and many men have been reformed from drunkenness: they are making a desperate effort to rid themselves from saloon influence. I hope the Pledge of Honor will see the wisdom of uniting their forces with ours. "In union is strength"; there is only one way to accomplish the work. A strong compact organization. We have that organization 15,000 strong and we are coming with thousands more.

I secured several subscribers for RESCUE at Pine Grove school house and received every attention from the good people.

At Los Alamos, we organized a Lodge of 41 charter members composed of the best of material. Bro. Webb and daughter accompanied me to Los Alamos; and I cannot speak in too strong terms of his counsel and aid. That he is an excellent speaker, all who have heard him will testify. I had taken a severe cold and was very hoarse while at Los Alamos, so that Bro Webb not only lent me support but his voice for he did the most of the speaking on that occasion.

I regretted that he could not continue thruout the entire trip. Of his unfailing fund of wit, eloquence, song and good nature, his unswerving love for our Order and our Cause, I can bear witness. I think the Order of California Good Templars numbers among its ranks some of the grandest of men; more than a score of them will be found in the southern part of our jutisdiction. That we are in advance in this State cannot be gainsaid. The high honor just given us by the R. W. G. Lodge, in electing Geo. B. Katzenstein, Chief Templar of the world certifies to the fact.

I trust that we will wear our honors meekly, and prove that the Order is not mistaken, when it acknowledges the strength, energy, perseverance and earnestness of California Good Templars.

TEMPERANCE INCONSISTENCY.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. EIGHT.

The temperance voters of this nation must yet realize that to act with a rum and license party is to perpetuate the evils we detest, and authorize others to sell rum for us. Hence to vote with a dramshop party makes us equally guilty with the dram seller. We want to understand that to vote for an unpledged or rum legislator implicates us more in the liquor traffic than any one rum seller. His business is confined to himself and customers, but we by vote uphold all in the state.

The time has come when temperance men should withdraw their support from rum parties, no matter what party interest will suffer by it. For temperance voters to remain in a party while it is supporting the rum traffic is to support its guilt.

A rum seller is the voter's agent, while the voter is the principal, Every rum blighted man is the voter's victim. Every rum made pauper is a voter's pauper. Every rum made criminal and murderer is a voter's criminal and murderer. The wretched wives and starving children of rum's victims can trace their condition to the ballot box. The 60,000 drunkards who die annually are the hecatombs of voters.

Every voter in a rum and license party is a rum voter and drunkard maker, a particeps criminis, and we brand such a vote as a crime against society and God.

Let every Christian and temperance voter know that it is as great a crime to vote for rum as it is to drink and sell it. Again, to act with a party when it ignores our cause is to allow it to use us for its purposes. This is what we have been doing for years. Like so many cattle we have been kept in the party by the tricks of politicians who care only for office and spoils. The consequence is, parties have never felt the necessity for taking temperance ground in order to retain us, and they never will while we remain. To remain with a party when it betrays our cause, is to proclaim in advance to all corrupt politicians that we as temperance men have no principles, no conscience in all our professions, bnt are henceforth their tools, to do their bidding. This is what thousands of temperance voters have been doing for years past. Good men have prayed for temperance, but have voted the continuance of rum. Their prayers are exactly on a par with the prayers of a thief that stealing may be done away with, while he continues to steal. Shame on such inconsistency! Let us remember that every voter is a law maker, and individually responsible to the extent of one vote for the existence of a dramshop; if your party favors license, then the dram seller is your legal agent, doing that which your vote has authorized him to do, and you are the greater criminal of the two. By thus voting you have made yourself a corruptor of youth, a destroyer of your country and a copartner with the wicked in opposing all that is valuable on earth or in heaven.

We charge upon the thousands of ministers and the tens of thousands of church members and professed temperance men, who have blindly voted with rum parties and for rum and license candidates, whether they know it or not, they are drunkard makers and aiders of the whisky rings and liquor leagues of the country. The triumph or overthro of the dramshop simply depends upon the votes or withdrawal of the votes of professed temperance advocates and church members. If they will pause in their criminal course and cease to uphold it at the polls, there is hope of success. Until our leaders and popular advocates take this stand, we cannot expect the people will cut loose from license parties and rally to the standard of prohibition. We thank God that the temperance cause is certain to succeed whatever becomes of this or that political party. The dram shop will not always control the politics of the nation. The rum power is as certainly doomed as was slavery and the parties which support it like those which supported slavery will go down into infamous graves.

This whole business of drunkard making, which is is all hell from beginning to end must be abolished. The age is against it. Civilization, humanity and God are against it. May God give all who profess to be devoted to the cause of temperance sufficient strength to vote as they pray, and to follow some political Moses who will but lead us out from political bondage to the way of organization and triumph under the glorious standard of total prohibition.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

BY H. H. PECKINPAH.

Nearly a year since San Francisco seemed to be afflicted with the black vomit, and some of the filth which was spewed forth passed thru our little town and was deposited upon the camp ground just below. The daily papers thus chronicled the event:

"The Bohemians have gone to Guerneville for their summer jinks." Now I know not the meaning of the distinctive word "jinks," but the nearest approach to a true definition I conceive to be the word "drunks," tho it expresses not the half.

Being somewhat curious, and knowing nothing of their character, I with a friend sauntered down that way. I soon learned that ladies had been requested not to visit the grounds. Could it be that the ghost of their manhood, long since dead, was haunting the scene of their orgies touching them with a sense of shame ? On my arrival they were engaged in the ceremony of burying "care." This farce concluded, a rush was made for the saloon. There indeed did pandemonium reign. Oaths, screams, cat calls, cries of "police"—in fact almost every diabolical sound that could issue from the human throat combined to make the scene truly hideous.

The inscriptions above the doors of the tents were characteristic, showing that those placing them there were not ignorant of the true effects of strong drink. Among them were the "Pandemonium" "Jim Jams" and "to the Brain;" the latter being above the door leading to the saloon. Some were so profane and obscene that they will not bear repeating here.

The literary exercises were the ne plus ultra of filthiness. For two hours and longer scarcely a decent thought was uttered; but the different speakers seemed to ransack the English language in search of words filthy enough wherewith to express themselves.

There was nothing too sacred to be trailed in the slime which exuded from every pore of their immoral natures. I am well aware that there may be some who think that this is a question which does not concern me, but as a worker in the temperance cause, I believe it to be my duty to proclaim with tongue and pen the immoral effects of the drink traffic and drinking customs. Besides which, by publicly exhibiting themselves and their principles they tacitly invite criticism.

A few days since, after the lapse of nearly a year, the same club came here upon another spree, I did not go near it, my former experience having thoroly sickened me. Some say that, compared with what it was a year ago, the crowd was a decent one. Others say that it was nearly if not quite as bad. I was told by a friend that when he arrived at the ground the "literary exercises" were in progress, and that an influential editor of one of the San Francisco papers occupied the rostrum, and was entertaining his audience with a refinement of nastiness which can be attained only by a man who is educated as well as vulgar. When such men become the moulders of the public mind, we naturally conclude that the influence they wield, instead of being beneficial will curse humanity with the reflex of their own immoral natures.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct 13.—The revenue cutter Corwin brings news that at St. Lawrence Islands, out of seven hundred inhabitants, five hundred were found dead of starvation. The traders had introduced liquor among them causing them to neglect the laying up of the usual supply of provision. (See John viii. 44).

SOMEBODY ordered this week a lesson book and catechism, "if you can spare them." They can always be spared to the extent of 10,000 in a very short time.

SOUTH AMERICAN EXPERIENCES.—No. 6.

BARBACOAS.

Is a magnificent city, populous, refined, grand in its history, heroic in its achievements, rich not only in wealth and architecture and taste and culture, but also in its riches of noble institutions of religion, science and learning. That is the opinion of the little colored boys who go to school there, and who never were anywhere else.

Unless in a very dry time, a steamer drawing about 3 or 4 feet of water can get to Barbacoas. When the river is low the steamer ties up about 2 miles below where the cargo is discharged and another received by canoe for which there is always a sufficient depth. The town is built on a promontory or bend of the river and from any convenient rising ground, the appearance of its leaf thatched roofs suggests the idea of a centennial reunion of 200 or 300 of the surviving veteran haystacks of past ages, that have made the journey on stilts.

Some half dozen of the aristocratic mansions are roofed with zinc, upon which the almost daily shower, at any hour between 4 P. M. and 4 A. M., beats a tattoo which when heard by a sleeper for the first time, arouses him with a sudden fear that this world has been captured by assault, and that it is not worth while to try to attempt any resistance to impending fate.

The mode of constructing a dwelling is curious in its simplicity. There is about one man in 10,000 there who can plan a house foundation on a square; but the favorite plan is to have two or three of the experienced people talk it over and square it by guess. The ordinary dwellings are built on four or six posts sunk about three feet into the ground. The posts are put in double and lashed together securely with wooden strings which grow there in abundance: one post is short, the companion to which it is lashed is long: on the end of the short ones, at about eight feet from the ground rest the sills of the dwelling, and the long ones support the roof and sides. The lower story is always vacant and consists only of the supporting posts, except in the business part of town where it is enclosed and used as a store or shop when necessary.

The sills are lashed to the post; a short piece of square wood at the extremity of the longest posts and a few rafters lashed as usual, form a framework to which tons of leaves are attached by the stalks, in such a manner as to make a matting of leaves four to six inches thick to protect the inmates from the rain and the penetrating heat of the sun as well. The roof is foursided, and projects about four feet laterally beyond the main part of the building. The leaves are not cut square, and there is nothing square, round, oval, straight, level or even, about the house: so the irregular hanging leaves give it a rather staggering expression, and one cannot help imagining a hut having been out late, taken too much guarapo, and trying to steady itself homeward on its stilts.

The floors are of wide hard wood planks in the wealthy mansions, but of waltas in the ordinary. There are a great many varieties of the palm tree in that country. The waltas are made from one of these; it is a kind of tube of ironwood: the wood on the exterior is black, smooth and hard, and from ¼ to an inch in thickness: on the inside is a soft pith which can be easily removed. The tree is cut into proper lengths, split in two, and then split into widths of about one to two inches without separating the pieces entirely: thus when the pith is removed you have a flat board, very smooth on its upper or outer side, and of that kind of boarding all the floors and partitions are made. The better houses of course use boards of hard wood sawn by hard labor.

It is not necessary to use a single nail in a house, nor is there a pane of window glass used anywhere in the vicinity. They require all the openings possible for fresh air, so that glass would be of no use.

The roofs of thatch make a most convenient and highly appreciated residence for rats, ants, cockroaches, crickets, bats, and some other birds, and sometimes snakes make a voyage of inspection up there. A black one about 18 inches long made a misstep in his travels one day and slipping thru, fell on the floor about four feet from where I was lying sick of fever, and was killed by my attendant, who happened to be close by with a stick in his hand. It was not a venemous kind, but it was supposed to be on a frog hunt in the thatch.

You dont believe that; frogs in a roof you say is too strong. I have heard stories of jumping frogs there which were probably myths, but have seen frogs jump that would put all Mark Twain's stories nowhere. The frog is a jumper, and often alights in a country house in the evening among the family; when poked, he will jump for a standing post ever so many feet away, and cling fast to the side of it as a cat or a very smart monkey does. It dont take many jumps for them to get from the ground to the roof.

The most familiar domestic animal is the bat: at evening twilight his activities begin; he keeps flying guard over the family during the evening, resting himself occasionally by hanging himself head downward by the toenails to the rafters, which is the posture in which that animal alone delights to rest.

There is a large sized bat here of the vampire species which people dread very much at night, and to avoid being bled by them they sleep under a toldo or cotton sack enveloping the entire bed. An aged female cook reported once where I was boarding that the bats had bled her toes very badly during the night, and a day or two after the family dog was laid up with a face badly bitten and bleeding, which was ascribed to the bats. Stories are told of how bats have gone for and used up people when drunk. I suffered the torture of a toldo for some months, but concluded afterward that bats and fresh air were less to be dreaded: have pretended to be asleep and seen the bats sweep over dozens of times within a few inches of my face with apparently evil designs, but was never in the least molested by them, never could tempt them to alight.

Some remarkable things have happened in Barbacoas: let us lay aside the description of the town for another week and tell one of these. The Virgin Mary and several other supernatural visitors have appeared there on various occasions, the former generally costumes as a very poor widow with a child, asking charity, "to find out whether the people's hearts are good or not". There is a widow, too, dressed in black, of another kind who embraces people in the street late at evening, and leaves them fainting and collapsed A very fine good old gentleman who lately died there, the priest of the township was once caught that way. He had been out spending a rather jovial evening with a party who were celebrating some happy event. He was of course perfectly sober, for the hour was 9½ P. M. the night was very dark; was making strait for home thru the principal street of the city when he was suddenly clasped in the bony arms of the skeleton widow, and of course he knew no more till he was picked up and carried home. "Now, perhaps you Yankee Protestants dont believe that," said my informant. "Oh, yes, we do," was the reply. "Lots of the same old widow with us, but we call it a different name."

CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT.

Why not begin to-day to work in earnest for what we have to work for sometime, a Kansas constitutional amendment? If we should fail in securing that at first, it does not seem probable that our having advocated and labored for that ultimate perfect measure, can ever result in damaging our chances to get a local option law or anything less than the full extent of what we desire.

If we ever expect to gain any point, it can never be too soon to agitate it. It is quite clear that the amendment plan will be the universal method and will be very soon universally adopted by all the states. If it were not for the utter lack of patriotism which prevails among politicians and the active influence which they so insidiously use against every worthy interest and every interest that does not directly contribute to their own personal gain, we could very easily get an amendment before the people, and if it could now be submitted to the people of every state separate from all other issues, there is little doubt that they would about all adopt it.

GLORY,

The most glorious chapter of American history has been written within the past few days. Two American horse gamblers have got the advantage of the English horse race blacklegs in two or more games of horse jockey. Whether the victory (?) was achieved by placing a judicious amount of the National 4 per cent bonds, on the horse market just where they would do the most good, or how large the amount it cost, is not stated. The leading American papers however are in high-feather-glory over the triumph of our blacklegs over the English. It is to be hoped American burglars and counterfeiters will be able some day to outshine their European brethren and add their contribution to the National Glory. Then what a glory it would be for American genius if some one could train a pig to run faster than any English pig. The country is growing in greatness.

DANCING.

The chief of police of New York city says that three-fourths of the abandoned girls in that city were ruined by dancing. Young ladies allow gentlemen liberties in dancing for which, if taken under any other circumstances, these gentlemen would be reported as improper persons. It requires neither brains, good morals, nor religion, to be a good dancer. It will not mix with religion any more than oil will mix with water. As the love of the one increases the love of the other decreases. How many distinguished Christians are eminent dancers? As certainly as the atmosphere around the thermometer at zero will freeze things, as certainly as the wind will drive the boat, so certainly will dancing freeze the religious sentiments out of the soul.

It will drive its devotee away from the church; it is a wind that blows in that direction. In ancient times the sexes danced separately. Alcohol is the "spirit" of beverages. So sex is the spirit of the dance; take it away, and let the sexes dance separately, and dancing would go out of fashion very soon. Parlor dancing is dangerous. Tippling and parlor dancing sow to the wind, and both reap the whirlwind. Put dancing in the crucible, apply the acids, weigh it, and the verdict of reason, morality and religion is, "Weighed in the balance and found wanting."—Tract.

RICH. It is not positively known who is the richest man in the world, but the man who owes the most stupendous debt in this or any other world lives in Vallejo or did lately. A Mr. Heermans from NewYork State wanted to borrow twenty dollars there in 1872, and was not at all particular as to the rate of interest charged, so he signed a note for the amount at 10,000 per cent a month interest, to be compounded monthly. At the end of a year if the holder of the note could have collected it in full, he would have had 20 septillions of dollars, but Mr. Heermans concluded to let it run. In 1876 when the sum total amounted to 20 and a row of 72 ciphers, the money lender most generously offered to throw off the whole amount of the principal, if Mr. Heemans would pay the interest; but he let it run and now in nine years, as the debt multiplies itself by 100 every month, it has reached to the superprincely sum of 20 followed by 216 ciphers. enough to build a double railway track to the most distant fixed star. Let any other State or country beat that for a debt, and the debtor has never once threatened repudiation nor asked a reduction of the interest. Says he is no repudiator nor readjuster: in fact never in all his life made any reduction whatever of a debt he owed.

GEO. G. BRIGGS, the pioneer orchardist of this county, and at present an extensive grower of raisin grapes near Davisville, Yolo county, is planting another large vineyard in Fresno county. The raisin growers are taking steps to introduce their stock into Eastern markets. Several samples have recently been sent to New York, Boston and other cities, and merchants speak in the most flattering terms of them. They report that the best California raisin compares very favorably with foreign varieties. and that a good market will be obtained. —Sutter Co Farmer.

WOMEN'S RIGHTS.—This week Miss M. M. Gillett, of Wisconsin, who has been a law student in Washington for some time past was appointed by the President a Notary Public for the District of Columbia. That is the first instance of a woman receiving such an appointment from the President, and what is better, it is the first of a great many in the future. The opponents of justice to women are dying off very fast and those not dead are modestly unobtrusive.

THE WATCHWORD says a missionary ship called the John Wesley left England not many years ago with missionaries and bibles and also with 1680 bottles of porter and ale, 360 of wine 1 hogshead of rum and 58 gallons of brandy. John Wesley would have indignantly protested against his name being defiled in this manner. But if the devil noticed that bill of fare he must have lain down to enjoy his laugh.

THE Presbyterian General Assembly, in session a Buffalo last week, disposed of the sacramental wine question by relegating to the church session the question of what is bread and what is wine.

THE keeper of the New York city morgue says that four-fifths of the 5,000 bodies which annually reach that dead-house are sent there by drink.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

One hundred and fifty-eight women voted in Grand Island, April 19. for members of the board of education, including the most prominent American and German ladies of the city. The great respect shown to all ladies who attended the polls totally annihilated the strongest argument that has been urged against it—"that it would be degrading, and that the polls would be no fit place for a respectable woman." We are glad to know that much of the prejudice has been dispelled by this practical test, and to know that our good German-American citizens now look upon it in a more favorable light.—[Independent.

A TEMPERANCE GOVERNOR FOR CALIFORNIA.

EDITOR RESCUE—If ever there was a propitious time for the Temperance workers of California to make a hit, and score decided progress for their cause in the interest of good homes, general welfare and true political economy, that time is at hand. Some hide bound fossil in the Good Templars will probably arise and plead that we are about to prostitute the Order to a political organization, if we adopt the suggestions made here; for the benefit of said fossils I desire to ask them on the start. 1st, are you sincerely desirous of making California a Temperance state.

2nd, If yea--how will you succeed in accomplishing your object unless you go at it through agitation, organization and the ballot?

Certainly the state will not be redeemed by a special interposition of Providence, or by a "conjunction of the planets;" one is as likely as the other.

But you say you are opposed to bringing "politics" into the Order—

My friend have you any politics? are you a Republican—a Democrat, a Greenbacker or Workingman?

If you have been identified with either of the first two organizations, as you probably have, you must admit that neither one of them to-day represents any living politics, principle or issue before the people, except to get the offices, and control the federal and state patronage; they are both cowardly slaves of the Railroad, Bank, Telegraph and Rum Corporations, their platform and public utterances are mere generalities and jingles to catch votes, and you know it; secretly perhaps, you think your party may give you a nomination or appointment to some office in the near future, and that you will lose that chance if you dare to act from principle and independently of your old party in the fight for a home and redeemed state. That is the real reason, that will make many an old fossil deprecate "politics" in the order—get out of that way of thinking, old friend, there is nothing in it, this is an age of progress, the parties who do not dare to espouse living truth in behalf of the people will surely die—they are dying—their nomination will be of no value, they will have no appointment to make, disintegration has begun already—a political revolution is brewing that will scatter all the cowardly slavish corporation organizations to the winds—Temperance and Integrity, twin sisters must and will be the corner stone of the state, the home circle is the unit of sovereignty, elevate that, purify it, enfranchise woman, and monopoly, political waste and national degeneracy are impossible. The temperance organizations of the nation are the true nuclei around which the lovers of national greatness, of pure democratic republican institutions must rally; let the living men and women commence the war to-day—let the tidal wave of temperance roll higher and higher till from the top of the Sierras at the next gubernatorial election, we can proclaim to our brothers and sisters of Kansas, all hail to the glorious sisterhood of states redeemed from the rum curse; a hundred thousand homes of the setting sun rejoice with you and join with the grand Temperance army "marching on" to the redemption of the whole nation.

San Diego the southernmost county of the state has commenced the agitation, let us hear from the whole column—I enclose an article from S. D. Union of a recent date.

PROHIBITION IN KANSAS.

EDITOR UNION:—Governor St. John says: "It is true that a good many saloon Keepers are leaving Kansas to engage in the liquor-selling business in other States: but for every one who thus leaves and closes a hotel or Restaurant, enough families will enter the State to build and maintain a new school house. The success of the Prohibition Law has already produced a revolution in the State." The temperance loving people of Kansas took the right course to accomplish practical results for their work; they selected Mr. St John for their candidate for Governor a long time in advance of any action of the regular political organizations of the State; and then every man, woman and child in the State went to work with a will in a fight for their homes, and they elected their man. That is just what the temperance folks of this State must do; and they must commence now. Milk-and-water candidates of old parties won't do; we want a right out-and-out Prohibition Candidate. He must be a solid man, with a clean record; thoroly dry in the cause; no time server "go-as-you-please" man, who is here to day and biddling at the saloon back doors to-morrow. He must have brains, courage, character and zeal; willing to fight the devil with fire. Backed by fifteen thousand Good Templars to start with, such a candidate can be elected, and the state redeemed. It is pretty well settled that the temperance people of California will have the first candidate in the field for Governor at the next election. They expect to elect him. Other parties may endorse and vote for the temperance leader as much, and as many as they please. The temperance folks will endorse no candidates but their own; and they propose to make things terribly hot for the rum forces. They will redeem the state as their brothers and sisters in Kansas have done there. H.

SAN DIEGO, June 19th, 1881.

For the benefit of those who are afraid of "politics" in the order I give Websters definition of the word; after reading it if there be any brothers or sisters who will say they do not want "politics" in the Order, then I say that brother or sister had better organize a society of their own, and wait for Providence or the planets to win the temperance fight; for their methods are not those of common sense or practical life work.

POLITICS.

"The science of Government; that part of ethics which consists in the regulation and governmeut of a nation or state for the preservation of its safety, peace and prosperity: comprehending the defense of its existence and right against foreign control or conquest, the augmentation of its strength and resources and the protection of its citizens in their rights with the preservation and improvement of their morals. Yours truly. A. B. Hotchkies.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., June 13, 1881.

PUBLISHER RESCUE:—Within find a list of names who I think might subscribe for a Pacific Coast paper which speaks as boldly for the truth as does yours. I have selected them from the subscription list of my late State Temperance Journal. They are good names, and I think if you would send them a single sample copy of your excellent paper, quite a number of them would take it. I started out with a view of selecting 200 of them for you, but on counting the list found it reached 286. Of course I do not consider you under any obligation to send the paper to any of these; but I would be glad to have the RESCUE circulated in Connecticut, and think this would be a good way to introduce it.

C. D. RICE.

Many thanks to Bro. Rice for his kindness in sending that list of names; the parties who receive this number and perhaps another, in Connecticut, will understand how it came to them and can signify their desire to have it continued in the usual manner.

CASPAR, June 23, 1881.

Bro. Arnoup has just left here for Kibesillah and Westport. Appreciative audiences listened with intense interest to his lectures both at Little River and Mendocino City. We were edified and instructed at Caspar. He showed himself "a giant of battle," of no ordinary calibre, well equipped for his work and master of his subject. The argument was thoro and exhaustive, the reasoning clear and concise and the conclusions logical and convincing. Such speeches cannot fail to impress and benefit those who hear.

J. S. ROSS.

A WILD FANCY.

If the sad old world should jump a cog
Some time, in its dizzy spinning,
And go off the track with a sudden jog,
What an end would come to the sinning!
What a rest from strife and burdens of life
For the millions of people in it;
Why, away out of care, and worry and wear,
All in a beautiful minute.

With not a sigh nor a sad good-bye
For loved ones left behind us,
We would go with a lunge and a mighty plunge
Where never a grave should find us,
What a wild, mad thrill our veins would fill,
As the great earth, like a feather,
Should float thro' the air to none knows where,
And carry us all together.

No dark, damp tomb, and no mourner's gloom,
No tolling bell in the steeple,
But in one swift breath, a painless death,
For a million billion people.
What a greater bliss could we wish than this,
To sweep with the bird's free motion
Thro' leagues of space to a resting place
In a vast and vapory ocean—
To pass away from this life for years.
With never a dear tie sundered,
And a world on fire for a funeral pyre,
While the stars looked on and wondered?

ELLA WHEELER.

TEMPERANCE INCONSISTENCY.

REV. G. W. FITCH.

NO. NINE.

Total prohibition is a political measure because the dramshop is a political institution. An appeal to the ballot box is our only hope, and were it not for this slavery to party that is the curse of American politics, by which temperance people and church members have upheld the dramshop, we could save California inside of a year. Let us not talk of the impracticable idea of the total prohibitionists while the confessions of temperance conservatives show that they have made it impracticable by clinging to rum and license political parties. Our G. W. C. T. says in his plea for local option that the National Prohibition Party has failed to carry any great numbers of temperance workers with it.

This is a humiliating confession indeed! The vast majority of temperance workers, professed prohibitionists, refusing to vote prohibition, but carried away with a rum and license party, and they are the ones who are so thankful for small favors, even tho they smell of whisky. All honor to that little band of "impracticables" who place principle above party and will not compromise for supposed policy. Let them take rank with that little anti-slavery band who believed more in principles than in majorities, and who lifted up their standard, taking the very life out of the old Whig party and scorned to compromise till America was free. They dared to spurn this half-loaf theory. It was not enough for them to have permission to prohibit slavery in the District of Columbia and in the territories. They would not wait till public opinion ripened, and abolition became the undoubted will of the people. No! conscious that slavery was wrong they preferred to be right with the minority than wrong with the majority. This is the spirit that led to the organization of the Prohibition Party. They refuse to eat dirt, and to take the devil's side of the temperance question. They will not "follow the multitude to do evil at the polls. They will not pray one way and vote another, but believe that voting is as sacred as praying. They believe that right is everything, and present success nothing. They do not propose to be led by electioneering tricksters and campaign declaimers. They listen to the voice of conscience rather than the gabble of politicians, and they are the voters who will yet abolish the rum traffic.

The temperance workers who have refused to join this wing of the temperance army will yet be ashamed of their inconsistency and be converted to independent political action on the basis of total prohibition.

It is all folly to prosecute reform measures by those who are opposed to reform. If prohibition is ever secured it must be carried by a Prohibition Party. This party must have three things:

1st. It must have a policy that means something. No half way measure will answer. No sugar coated license principle concealed under the name of local option. We challenge any man to give us in words a local option law that precludes choice—option, preference, as between whisky and no whisky, license and no license. A veto power conferred upon the people in reference to an existing license law necessarily carries with it the power of approval. Vetoing license is permitting prohibition and vetoing prohibition is permitting or consenting to license. A veto power put forth is withholding consent, and a veto power not put forth is giving consent to a license law. We pity those local optionists who cannot comprehend this, This whole question turns upon this as a matter of policy.

Whether with a given prohibitive reserved power among the people, that power shall find expression and declare rum-selling illegal, only where it is in the majority and in perfect agreement with the existing license system, and thru existing rum parties, or whether that same prohibitive force shall combine upon the platform of strait out and out total prohibition, and thru independent political action, go to the headquarters of legislative power and demand a law that shall eventually annihilate both the license and the dramshop systems. Here are the two policies; The local optionist dont pretend to strike at the license system, but is willing to swallow it for the sake of a little veto power on rum selling wherever it is strongest, thus giving our cities and large villages over, bound hand and foot, to the rum power and making them supply the drunkards of these places that have vetoed the sale.

Our G. W. C. T. makes the strange assertion that a prohibitory law could not be enforced if passed, and yet he vainly imagines that this little veto power cropping out here and there will enforce sobriety in one town while a neighboring town is allowed by law to sell to citizens of both.

Total Prohibitionists reject all this nonsense as dangerous trifling, and are seeking to combine and centralize this reserved prohibitive power of people and carry the very citadels of the rum power. They want a prohibition that prohibits, founded upon the immorality of the traffic by the state as the protector of all its citizens. They propose to direct the people how and what to vote, not that they can vote rumselling up or down, yea or nay, license or no license. They propose to work with a party that

1. Has a policy that means something,

2. Has a platform giving an honest and open profession of policy.

3. Has candidates pledged to carry out its policy. Untrameled by whisky rings and prolicense politicians, prohibition will be secured, for right is with us, God with the right and victory with God.

CHRISTIANITY AND TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

BY REV R. E. JONES OF PETALUMA.

Concluded.

The mainstay of modern opponents of total abstinence is the supposition that Christ made fermented wine at the marriage of Cana in Galilee; that he used fermented wine when he instituted the Lords Supper and that he drank it habitually as a beverage.

These thots pass current in society and are accepted by intelligent and thotful men as if there were no reason to doubt their genuineness or truth. But there is great reason to suppose that every one of the three opinions are false and a forgery or rather a libel on the character of our blessed Master.

Jewish writers assert that the Jews never used intoxicating wines at their weddings or religious feasts. Could this be proved without a doubt, the controversy on two points would be settled. But as we have not absolute proof we must inquire into the circumstances.

I maintain two things regarding the miracle of Cana. 1. There is no proof that Jesus turned more than one cup of that water into wine. 2. Neither is there any proof that the wine in the cup borne to the ruler of the feast was intoxicating. John ii: 9 says that it was water the servants drew, but it was made wine ere it reached the hand of the ruler. There is no intimation that all the water in the six waterpots, nor even any of it except that drawn was made wine. Had it been otherwise surely John would have told us, or there would have been a rush to where the water pots were to see this wonderful thing that had been done. But there is no allusion to any wine except in the vessel in the hand of the ruler and out of which he drank.

Were it proved that all the water was turned into wine, (which cannot be proved) there is nothing to show that it was fermented. That the ruler of the feast should call it good wine only proves that it was to his taste and the best of its kind.

When we remember that Christ was the Creator of all things and that he never created alcohol anywhere, it is certain that he did not create alcohol this time, when commencing to reveal his glory as a deliverer from sin. The character and aim of Jesus inthe world, as well as the nature of all his other miracles is a sufficient assurance that he did not call into existence at this time anything so destructive as alcohol. The miracle here was calling into existence the fruit of the grape without the assistance of the grape vine. One cup would manifest his power as much as many gallons.

With regard to the wine used at the supper, the fact that the Jews were absolutely prohibited the use of leaven at that time, and that they so carefully and conscienciously observed that command, gives us the strongest assurance that they did not use fermented wine at that time, for they well know that leaven and ferment were the same thing. Their own writers inform us that they used the unfermented juice of the grape; the quantity they are said to have drunk confirms this. Hence it is clear to every unprejudiced mind that Christ could not use fermented wine at the supper seeing it could not be procured at the time. Also it is worth remark that he invariably calls it the fruit of the vine which indicates that it was fresh and unfermented.

To the last question, did Christ drink fermented wine ordinarily? I reply, this cannot be proven. The only ground for it is the assertion of his enemies, Matt. xi: 18. But if that be taken as a proof it proves too much; for it proves that John who was full of the Holy Ghost from his mother's womb, was also full of the devil which could not possibly be; therefore it proves nothing but allows us to infer that Christ had not like John pledged himself to abstain entirely from the use of the grape in every form. But it is by no means likely that he who commanded John to abstain, and by his spirit thru the prophets, denounced so unsparingly all kinds of fermented liquors and their use would himself partake of them.

Paul's command to Timothy is quoted by moderate drinkers. But it does not help them. For on the one hand it proves that Timothy was previously a total abstainer, otherwise there would have been no need of the advice. Again it was Timothy's sickness that demanded a change. And lastly there is nothing to prove that Paul recommended fermented wine. It may have been the prepared juice of the grape which was highly recommended for sick persons. The burden of proof rests on the moderate drinkers.

ED. RESCUE:—You will see by the enclosed that our cause is making progress in San Diego County.

National City is the initial point of work on the California Southern Railroad leading from the Bay of San Diego northward to Colton on the S. P. R. R., from thence to a crossing of the Colorado River at or near the "Needles," and thence to a point of junction with the Atlantic and Pacific, or really the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe R. R., the great eastern competitor of the Central Pacific.

A large force of laborers and Mechanics is employed at National City and great activity prevails; vessels arriving constantly with material etc. The Kimball brothers who owned the land for years are temperance men; they sold their land, stipulating against rum; but the enemy has lately got a foothold, and two saloons are under way, greatly to the disgust of the better classes.

Hence an organized temperance effort is being made as you will see by the enclosed item from the San Diego Union.

"About twenty-five members of Golden Rule Lodge, I. O. G. T., went out to National City on Friday night for the purpose of instituting a Lodge of Good Templars there. They were met at Grange Hall by about twenty young ladies and gentlemen, the cream of Society of National City. Brother S. Whitmore, District Deputy of San Diego county, assisted by the visiting members, proceeded to initiate the candidates. The name chosen for the new Lodge is Silver Gate Lodge. Some very excellent material for Temperance work will be found in this Lodge, and there is no doubt it will be a perfect success. Sisters Langdon and Losee were present and beamed on the occasion with their sunny smiles. They are entitled to much credit in the matter." H.

DAVID TATUM who has been lecturing for some months in Britain is going to visit Germany, France and Switzerland and report on the effects of wine and beer there, so as to answer the assertions that are circulated in America as to the sobriety of those peoples.

"DAVID DAVIS says Senator Conkling is the greatest man the Senate has seen since Daniel Webster, and that his resignation is characteristically brave and noble." If David Davis is wise in that opinion a great many people who get credit for common sense are fools.

TWIN EVILS—TOBACCO AND INTEMPERANCE.

The use of tobacco has become so common that most persons look upon it as being quite as essential to life as is food, light, air, and water. Parents and guardians, with few exceptions, neglect their duty to their children when they do not guard their little ones from the approach of this terrible evil. From the moment they are old enough to go to school, boys ought to have it instilled into their minds that tobacco is a vice that grows slowly and surely until it becomes the partaker's master. It weakens the nervous system, and creates an irritable temper. It poisons the saliva, and as a consequence, indigestion follows. It destroys the lining membrane of the nasal organ; causes hemorrage from the nose; creates a dry uncomfortable feeling in the throat, which forces the victim to seek liquor as a means of relief; it affects the brain so as to keep it in a comatose state.

The victim of this disgusting vice is unable to study; he never can keep up with his class; his name is never on the honor list. He has no appetite; cannot sleep; has no energy; is troubled with the desire to lie down, continually; and is much more susceptible to contagious diseases than persons who are not cursed with this vice. Until he can steal away from under his mother's eye mornings, supposing it to be objectionable to her that he should indulge the habit, which, I regret to say is not always the case, he acts like an escaped lunatic, because his master—love for tobacco—is gnawing at his very vitals.

Then it is such a disgusting habit; the victim is incessantly expectorating; has dirty hands, foul breath, discolored teeth, etc. The user of tobacco is generally shabby for instead of buying neckties, collars, cuffs, 'kerchiefs, or toilet articles, all his pin money is spent for cigarettes.

His little sister never rushes with delight to meet him on his return home; for there is no orange, apple, or toy for her. Tobacco has not only used all his money, but has also destroyed his natural feelings of affection. He is incapable of making a sacrifice for the feelings of those who should be dear to him. In short he is the personification of selfishness.

Once tobacco has anyone in its clutches all the noble feelings which are our inheritance, are destroyed. No thought for mother, father, sister or brother; no thought of how to acquire an education, profession, trade or business, to fit him to make a living; all thoughts are absorbed in the one of how to get enough of tobacco and time and opportunity to use it.

Whisky is a sequel to tobacco. When we meet an old gentleman, as we occasionally do in society, whose garments seem as if they had been worn ever since he witnessed the signing of the Declaration of Independence, and who is probably unshaven and whose hair trails on his coat collar, and yet is invited because he is a graduate of Oxford or Harvard, and can read as only the few can, or recite, and is full of wit and humor; and we ask who he is, we are told that "he is a highly cultivated gentleman, but poor man! he has been addicted to drink, and in consequence is nobody, that is, he has no position, but is simply tolerated out of respect for his learning."

In answer to my question as to how such debauchees acquire their knowledge, I was told that in those days boys waited to become men before they acquired the vices now so common among minors; hence their ability to obtain an education. Here, then is a man who might have been an ornament to society, might have been a great statesman, scientist, writer, lawyer, doctor, banker or merchant; but whisky and tobacco are his masters, and in consequence he is a drone. Then again let us look into a drunkard's home. His wife may be a cultivated refined woman, but as a drunkard's wife she has no place in society. Her home, if a few rooms in an alley with a bed on the floor, bare boards, dirty walls, a few broken articles of furniture, old crockery that the children pick up in the streets, can be called such, is——— Well if Mr. Beecher had to live in it for one day he would never again deny that there is a hell. The reader of this may say, yes, but a refined woman would not live with such a man. We know they do; they cannot desert their children. They as far as it is possible fill the places of fathers and mothers, They wash, mend, make and do everything in their power to bring their children up nicely and in the vain endeavor to hide from the world the fact that their children are the offspring of a drunkard, wear themselves into a premature grave.

I say vain endeavor, so it is, for cannot any one single out the drunkard's children in a school? Can we not tell them by their hungry looks, by the way they start when any one attempts to speak to them, as if they were afraid their drunken father was to form the subject of conversation? Can we not tell by their clothes? Yes; even the mother's effort to hide the situation acts the teltale.

In the drunkard's home you can never find a paper of pins, a piece of toilet soap, hair brush; nor in fact any of the necessary articles of comfort. The children do not know what it is to have even the cheapest of vegetables on their table. Their food consists of stale bread bought at the baker's, five loaves for twenty-five cents, and slop they call coffee, with clay colored sugar minus milk. A bath is something they have no personal knowledge of, and as for amusement of any kind, that is entirely out of the question. If the children complain that the bread is musty, the father who has spent the money for grog that should be devoted to his family's comfort tells them, that they ought never be done thanking God to be let live.

Another effect of liquor is that the victim cannot afford a good word for any one except the man who trusts him for his whisky.

Now that my essay is finished, however imperfect, it is my best, and I hope it will receive that recognition which it deserves.

SACKETT CORNELL.
Age 16 years.

The above article is put in type as a sample of the first effort in the essay line. I think it is a credit to the writer and I can see that if all the boys and girls could be induced to study this subject of temperance we should soon have an educated class of men and women who would do away with this great evil.

TEMPERANCE IN TULARE COUNTY.

ED. RESCUE:—I have just returned from a canvassing tour in the Mussel Slough district where there are six lodges. The whole country is alive with harvest hands; the header and thrasher crews are seen in every direction, and in every crew there are some Good Templars, and in many cases the entire crew are. Some men have been refused employment because they were not Good Templars, altho men were scarce.

This is one way Tulare fights alcohol. The plan of employing exclusively sober men should be practiced thruout our country.

Our lodges are doing good work, initiating from one to five persons every meeting, among whom are some of the leading citizens of the county. On the fifth a mass meeting of the good citizens was held at Hanford for the purpose of closing the doors of all business houses in Hanford, Grangeville and Lemoore on Sunday, the Rev Mr. Yager presided: interesting speeches were made. Bro. Muthero introduced resolutions that were almost unanimously adopted: respectfully asking all the business men of Hanford, Grangeville and Lemoore to close business houses on Sunday in the interest of morality and good citizenship, and promising not to patronize any house or firm that persists in transacting business on Sunday.

There were many other good features in the resolutions; but the above will give yonr readers a fair idea of what the Mussel Slough people mean to do. Committees were appointed to circulate petitions thruout the county. The six lodges of I. O. G. T. have taken hold of these resolutions and intend to carry them to success.

Another good omen is seen in this county. Office seekers lose no time in courting the friendship of our Good Templars. Well they may; for none but a temperance man can hold office in Tulare county hereafter.

Tulare county is now ready for a local option or prohibitory law. If it was left to a vote the result would be total prohibition. I regret very much that we cannot have one of our grand lecturers to spend a month in the distriet; he could accomplish a great work now. I hope the G. W. C. T. will take advantage of this golden opportunity and send us a wide-awake man.

Next annual meeting of D. L. meets at Visalia, Sept. 6, 1881. A large attendance is expected; the indications now are, we shall have a grand display of our temperance work. All Good Templars are invited to meet with us and share in the festivities now being prepared for the occasion.

"THE CYCLOPEDIA WAR."

The Cyclopedia War and literary Revolution are working wonderful and happy results for the readers of books, and searchers after knowledge. The great "Library of Universal Knowledge," is announced to be completed, ready for delivery to purchasers, in the early part of July. It is probably the largest and most important literary work this country and the century have seen. It is based upon Chamber's Encyclopedia, the last London edition of which is reprinted entire as a portion of its contents, a large corps of American editors and writers adding thereto, a vast amount of information upon 15,000 subjects in every department of human knowledge. Chamber's Encyclopedia, whose distinguished merit is universally known, is the laborious product of the ripest British and European scholarship, but being a work of foreign production it has been naturally deficient in its adaptation to the wants of American readers. In this new form it is most thoroly Americanized, and becomes at once the largest and most complete Encyclopedia, in the field, at a mere fraction of the cost of any similar works which have preceded it,containing about 10 per cent more matter than Appletons's Encyclopedia, at less than one-fifth its cost, and 20 per cent more than Johnson's Cyclopedia at a little more than one-fourth its cost.

The superlative value and importanee of this great Encyclopedia, however, lies especially in the fact that it is brought within the reach of every one who aspires after knowledge and culture. It is really a library of universal knowledge. It brings liberal education even within the reach of every aplow-boy. Every farmer and every mechanic owes it to himself and to his children that such a cyclopedia shall henceforward form a part of the outfit of his home. To the intelligent man in every walk of life a Cyclopedia is indispensable. It is issued in various styles, in 15 large beautiful octavo volumes, varying in price from $15 for the edition in cloth to $25 for the edition on full library sheep binding. Liberal discounts even from these extraordinary prices are allowed to clubs, and the publishers, besides, propose during the next two months to distribute $10,000 cash in special rewards to persons who forward clubs of five,ten,or more subscribers. The American Book Exchange 764 Broadway, New York, are the publishers, who will send sample pages and full particulars free on request.

MR. GLADSTONE'S intended railway grogshop bill has been killed beforehand by the protests of the people. Its purpose was to get twenty five dollars a year revenue from each carriage that took a license and to increase the national revenues by the duty on the increased consumption of drink thus created. This proposition to increase the revenue of a enormously wealthy government by the promotion of vice and by the destruction of the lives of its own subjects has seldom been excelled in deliberate, fiendish atrocity. The Lower House of the convocation of Canterbury voted by a good majority against Gladstone's proposal but could not get the requisite two-thirds majority to carry it to the Upper House. The drink god stands high up yet in England when a two-thirds majority of a high clerical body would not protest against the introduction of grogshops on railroad trains.

Nos. 113, 146, 184, 263, 319, 385 and 404.

DUTCHER AND WATSON.—During the past week, learning of the presence of Mrs. Judge Watson in Sacramento, she was solicited to call at the G. W. S. office, which she did accompanied by a friend and representative, where certain documents and letters on file were exhibited to her, As a result of the interview, Mrs. Watson voluntarily presented her apologies and begged the pardon of The G. W. S for any personal allusions made to him in her addresses, particularly for an attack made at Modesto which she proffered to recall and apologize for by a card to be printed by her in the newspapers of that place. Mrs. Watson will probably leave the lecture field and state to return to her relatives and friends East. Mr. Dutcher's deplorable condition makes it probable that he will pursue the same course.

TEMPERANCE REUNION.—The temperance reunion held at Woodwards Gardens on the 23d inst. proved a successful affair and attracted a numerous company. We met there many of the representative temperance men and women of the state, and enjoyed the day and evening visit. As local mention will probably be made of the occasion, no further comment will here be made except to express the hope that such reunions and gatherings of temperance people generally may be made a matter of more frequent occurrence.

DELINQUENTS.—Quite a number of lodge deputies have failed so far to forward their quarterly returns for the term ending April 30th last. To receive the password for the term next ensuing, it is necessary the returns for the previous quarter shall have been filed from each lodge. The delinquent deputies have each been notified of the nonreceipt of their quarterly returns by a personal note. Next week a list of the delinquents will be presented in this department.

THE BANNER.—Sister Emily P. Stevens, Grand Lecturer, has won the laurels in the matter of organizing the Banner new lodge of the year, which she organized at Central city, Santa Barbara county on the 18th inst. with 100 charter members, 55 males and 45 females. The lodge was named Positive and will meet at Central city on Saturday evenings. Positive is the ninety-second new lodge of the current fiscal year.

CLEARANCE CARDS.—A new supply of clearance cards, printed on an extra quality of heavy linen paper has just been received from the R. W. G. S. office. The cards thus prepared are preferable to the cardboard heretofore used, as they will not crackle nor break. All delayed as well as all future orders will be filled with the new stock.

MUSIC ODES.—The demand for the new music ode cards continues and a new supply has been received. All the music to the subordinate odes printed on the ode card including the opening, closing, initiatory and installation odes. When ordering please order "music ode cards."

RECEPTION AND CELEBRATION.

It is proposed to give Brother George B. Katzenstein the R. W. G. T. a reception on the evening of Monday the 18th day of July 1881 at the city of San Francisco.

It is eminently proper for California to recognize the great honor done to her in the election of one of her Good Templars to the highest position in our noble order.

The committee of invitation has been appointed and will within a few days, send out invitations to every lodge in our jurisdiction asking all Good Templars to be present on that occasion.

In connection with that reception it is proposed to celebrate our anniversary, as an order. This would be on the 17th, but as that day falls on the Sabbath, it will be held on Monday following.

R. THOMPSON, G. W. C. T.

Lecturers' Reports.

☞ The only authorized Grand Lecturers in this jurisdiction are Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Messrs. Wm. Crowhurst, Hugh R. Hughes, Dr. M. D. Merrick, F. J. Culver, Col. C. N. Goulding and George Bramall.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the RESCUE, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

H. R. HUGHES.

Sunday the 12th talked to the children of Murphys and organized a Band of Hope. On account of the entertainment the previous evening being kept so late the little folks were tired and sleepy and but few out.

But Murphys Lodge can sustain and build up a large Band. The 14th met with Bear Mt. Lodge; it numbers 50 members, is about to move into new quarters, and is in every respect a live lodge.

The 16th crossed over to Tuolumne and met with Mt. View Lodge of Columbia; had a general discussion of matters and a free expression of opinion. Though the lodge has lost members it is stronger in moral worth, harmonious feeling and determined spirit, and will profit by the experience of the past.

The 15th lectured at Tuttletown to a fair audience; am indebted to Bro. J. Philips of Bald Mt. for the interest taken in getting hall ready for the meeting. Sister Richardson of Sheep Ranch favored us with songs.

Sat. 10th met with Tuolumne D. L., Bro. Holiand D. D. presiding; nine out of the ten lodges represented with full delegations, and the court house was filled. The report of com. on State of the Order shows there are ten lodges with 524 members in good standing: two more points where there is a prospect to organize this fall and two Bands of Hope, at Soulsbyville and Columbia.

After an animated discussion a committee of three, Bro. Wing of Columbia, Drescher of Jamestown and Bluett of Soulsbyville with the D. D. Holland and the D. S. J. C. Coles as exofficio members were appointed to enforce the Sunday law and existing liquor laws. It was a large and enthusiastic meeting. I never saw more true interest manifested in the cause and Order, and all now see the benefit and power of the district lodge.

Next session at Columbia in September. At the close of the business session at 5 P. M the brass band being in readiness the L. D. formed in procession by J. L. Coles as G. M., and paraded the streets of Sonora 140 in line. Many effeminate and weak-kneed were either afraid to show their colors or thot it a boyish performance. The town was full of people and the parade was a decided success. All honor to the sisters who voted to march in the middle of the street.

In the evening we had an immense mass meeting in Turn Verein Hall. Reports of lodges, addresses, etc with good singing and a collection for the Home formed the program.

Mrs. Richardson favored us with appropriate temperance songs as she only can sing them. Bro. J.E. Cole made a radical speech to close, that took down the house and touched the popular pulse that begins to beat high for total prohibition in old Tuolumne. And I am too modest to repeat his kindly words about the writer, and the cordial, hearty resolution adopted by a rising vote for the efforts I have made for the cause in our county.

Tomorrow I leave this part of my district. One year ago we had one lodge of less than 40 members, to-day ten with 524 and with a splendid D. L. We have agitated, now let us educate. Sample copies of RESCUE have been sent to every lodge, now let there be a general effort to increase its circulation. By helping it you help yourself. For the present farewell dear friends of Tuolumne.

June 10th at 2 P.M. met the children of Sonora and organized a Band of Hope with 36 members, Mrs. Rev. J. Sturtevant Supt. Meet at G. T. Hall every Sunday at 4 P. M. Evening good meeting in the Presb. church Columbia, Mrs. M. E. Richardson conducting the musical exercises at both meetings. After my lecture complimentary remarks were made by Bro. Peters and cordial mention made of the work in Tuolumne. And were it to some one else, I might say more of the raising vote of thanks tendered. It is pleasant to labor where one's feeble efforts are appreciated.

The 21st met Murphys Band of Hope at their first meeting; new members secured. The rituals and badges had failed to connect. Evening devoted to good of the Order, and remarks by Rev A. J. Jones Mr. Songer, Mrs Richardson. and while at Murphys interviewed committees of D. L, and helped plan some work. Some one writing for RESCUE says our present system of Grand lecturers is better adapted to organize than to sustain lodges. In accordance with instructions of Ex. Com my work has included both. Less than a year ago we had three weak lodges in my district; now there are 27 with about 1200 members; 2 fine district lodges organized, and several Bands of Hope. Mrs Stevens commenced the work last July and it has been pushed ever since.

24th went to ElDorado, and 26th attended the entertainment of Mrs. Vincent. My meeting had been announced for same evening. The place too small for two meetings; so we went together. It was a treat, and the singing of temperance songs by the children gave it an air of a temperance meeting. Made a few remarks at the close.

Sunday evening had a pleasant meeting in Union church, San Andreas. Old No. 407 holds the fort and has a corps of good workers.

Met the other members of the D. L. committee and completed arrangements to push the battle to the gates.

M. D. MERRICK.

Met with Salinas Lodge on Monday evening. The meeting was a large and very interesting one. Something over twenty members will be added to the lodge as the result of our meetings. The brothers here are doing a splendid work.

At Gonzales our first meeting was not large but the second evening the house was well filled and a list of sixteen names was taken for a lodge, but for local reasons it was deemed best not to organize at present. Rituals and Badges will be sent for and a "Band of Hope" will be organized at once.

At Monterey the meeting on Saturday evening was fairly attended and a good deal of interest manifested. On Sunday at 3P. M. delivered a lecture in the church at Pacific Grove and spoke to a very good audience in Monterey in the evening; Del Monte Lodge is said to be doing very well; I did not however become acquainted with many of its members. The L. D. did not attend any of my meetings and the W. C. T. only one. There is much need of work in Monterey and by persistent effort the order may by and by obtain a solid footing there.

MRS. STEVENS.

Has described pretty well in her letter elsewhere, her work in and near Lompoc: was getting pretty well used up and tired with the long stage journey, was looking hopefully forward by last accounts to a holiday at the Campmeeting and in the City. The numerical strength of our order and the public sentiment of the southern Counties in favor of the temperance movement, have been vastly improved and strengthened by her efforts in this campaign, and thru the generous help and sympathy as well, that has been accorded to her during her ministrations not only by the members of the Order and advocates of temperance, but by many who have not heretofore taken pronounced ground in favor of temperance. Now it becomes all concerned there and elsewhere, not to let any of the good accomplished tip over and get lost.

MRS. STEVENS.

When last heard from was in san Luis Obispo, recovering from a severe cold and over exertion. Finds S. L. O. a beautiful mountain town, but sadly beset with the rum fiend. At Arroyo Grande she organized a lodge with 47 charter members, H. M. Osgood L. D., and as reported elsewhere had pregin with. Her trip has been one of late over wearviously started one at Central city 100 strong to be ing stage routes, and some of her communications have gone astray. The Lompoc record reports a wide spread revival of temperance interest in Santa Barbara county, and hopes it will not be allowed to cool or wane, News of good results from San Luis Obispo may be confidently looked for, and Mrs Stevens will close with to-day's engagement at Cambria her present campaign in the south, which by the way has been one of signal and triumphant success. Her labors have added great numbers to the temperance army; and it is on the other hand a very pleasant duty to remark that the manner of her reception in all the places she has visited, and the warm sympathy extended by all classes to her work and mission, reflect the highest credit upon our neighbors in the southern counties, and assure us very forcibly that that portion of the state is the home of a very excellent and intelligent class of people.

ORLAND 27th 1881.

Monday 20th concluded my meetings in Colusa; 21 22 lectured in Princeton to large audience; the Lodge will be organized at that place on the 28th, good audiences at Butte City; called at Willows on my way, live Lodge in good condition and large accessions each meeting. The people here are aroused, and determined; they turned out in large numbers last evening 26th, many being unable to gain admission.

I go to Newville from here, and as I shall be beyond direct mail communication you may address me at Leesville; slowly but surely we are marching on to victory. Yours Truly. C. N. GOULDING.

"LITTLE BLUE-JACKET:"—The National Temperance Society have recently publisded a book entitled "Little Blue Jacket," written by Miss M. A. Paull, author of "Tim's Troubles." The story is of a little sailor lad, and of his quiet but effective work for temperance on shipboard, and is told in a most charming way. With this story is bound also five others equally well written and interesting 12mo, 163 pages. Price 75 cents. Address J. N. STEARNS, Pnblishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, New-York.

A VOICE FROM CONNECTICUT.

ED RESCUE:—Considering the RESCUE to be the best Good Templar paper in America, I wish that every member of the Order in the United States would subscribe for it.

I admire your pluck and wisdom in advocating the National Prohibition Party. The Prohibitionists are not numerous at present, but a majority of our people believe that the principles of the Prohibition Party are correct. They will ere long cease to support political parties which legalize the greatest evil of the age, and unite with the only one which seeks to destroy that evil.

I have read the able articles in your paper concerning local option. In my humble judgment, if all the temperance people in California would ask for entire prohibition they would get local option much quicker than by asking for the latter, as the legislature might give the half loaf as a compromise. In that case the temperance folks would not consent to legalizing crime. On the other hand, if they ask for local option, they solicit a law which would sanction the liquor crime in many places. Moreover, 'twould take about as much effort and time to get even this half loaf as 'twould to secure a prohibitory law for the entire state. Several years must pass before even a local option law can pass a California legislature, and if such a statute is asked for by a temperance element, at least one-half of our own friends will object to entire prohibition, "until the new law has had a fair trial," and that would take several years longer, thus postponing entire prohibition for a long period.

We have tried local option in Connecticut for eight years. I have referred to it as a "half-loaf," yet I do not think it deserves so much credit. While some temporary good is secured under it in some localities, yet, as a whole I deem even the local option feature a curse. This redeeming clause is the sugar coating which makes the license pill (law) acceptable to thousands of Connecticut Christians. Under it many of our smaller towns vote no license and are willing that the larger towns shall be cursed with legalized grog-shops so long as they can keep the evil away from their own doors. The cities and large towns contain four-fifths of our entire population. While the temperance element is a strong majority in these large towns, yet it has not strength enough to overthrow the rum power (which is composed of Republican and Democratic politicians, rum sellers and rum drinkers, and is held together by political ambition, avarice, and appetite).

During the eight years of local option, crime has increased in the license towns, and as these contain most of our inhabitants, it has also increased in the state at large. Repeated efforts have been made by temperance folks who reside in license towns to secure entire prohibition, but as a general rule these efforts have not been properly supported by temperance men in the country towns, because they already have prohibition thru the local option system. But for that feature (local option) we should secure full prohibition in Connecticut within one year. But for eight years full prohibition has been crucified between the apathy of temperance men in the no license towns on one side and the rum power on the other.

A New England Prohibition convention is to be held in Highland Lake Grove near Boston Wednesday Aug. 17th. Yours for the war, C. D RICE.

Middletown, June 13 1881.

Connecticut has always had a good prohibition paper and lots of grand prohibition people. But has not its failure to secure legal state prohibition been largely due to the fact also that the advocates of temperance generally have crucified their temperance paper every time?

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

GEORGE STEPHENSON.

On the 9th of June 100 years ago, George Stephenson was born: the man who first solved the problem of steam carriages and railways. His native place was the village of Wylam about eight miles from Newcastle upon Tyne,in England; I should like to write Newcastle, Placer county, California; but that would not be true. There may be however some great famous hero of the future who shall hail from there.

His father worked in the coal mines for three dollars a week, and supported a wife and six children thereon, but he did not learn to smoke cigarets when he was a boy; if he had, he would not have had that wife and six children: he would not have been able to support a cat and two kittens respectably. The floor of his house was clay; the ceiling above was the roof and had not a particle of Italian fresco on it.

His father was too poor to send him to school, but George was a good boy; he helped his mother and carried his father's dinner out. Then he got a big paying job of work: he "minded the cows" of a woman farmer, and got four cents a day for it, and was promoted to hoeing turnips at 8 cts a day. Thence he was employed picking out stones from the coal, and was in turn promoted to lead a horse at the hoisting gin at 16 cents a day: he was getting wealthy then, but he did not smoke cigarets yet. Perhaps the proudest moment of his life was when he was put on as a fireman at 15 or 16 years of age and said "he was a made man for life," for his wages were $3 a week.

He worked 12 hours a day for these wages, but he studied the machine on which he was employed: took it to pieces on holidays, but as he could not read or write he found great obstacles in the way of learning much about machinery. At 19 he went to school evenings, paid 8 cts a week for tuition and soon got ahead of his teacher (without the help of any cigarets). To get money to purchase books he mended shoes and watches, and after mending a pair of shoes for a young girl he married her when he was 21 years old, but lost his wife two years after; her only son became the great engineer, Robert Stephenson.

About this time his employers began to think and talk about George, how industrious, persevering, sober, punctual and truthful he was—and so different from the most of his fellow-workmen. His good conduct began to pay. (it is a grand thing to be trustworthy and thoroly honest and reliable, is it not?) So he was sent to Scotland to superintend an engine. He came back with a fortune of $140 in his pocket and presented his father with $75 to help him in his old age.

He was determined to educate his son Robert, but he had to work at night to get money to do so, for there were no public free schools then. When he was about 21 years of age he made an engine that pumped out a mine, which they could not dry out before, and he got $50 for that, and had soon his wages raised to $500 a year. Still he did not smoke cigarets nor drink beer. They laughed and hooted at him in 1821 when he promised to make an engine that would go 12 miles an hour; the papers called him crazy, just as silly people call us now-a-days, when we propose to bury the grogshop a million feet deep pretty soon and forever.

But his engine went at the rate of 35 miles an hour when it had a fair trial in 1829. He had then been employed some years constructing a railroad between Liverpool and Manchester, and his salary had been $5000 a year. He died in 1848 at the age of 67, having led a most useful and busy life. In his busy times he found leisure to raise and feed robins and other pets, and he cultivated choice fruits and flowers, but singularly he never found time to cultivate cigarets and a red nose. His life work has developed now into a system of railway communication that has spread all over the world. He was not the sole inventor of the system, but he did far more than any other man to make it practicable and set it in successful operation.

He was one of the greatest men of his time and rose from poverty with no other aid at all but his industry, honesty and sobriety. There are lots of our juveniles that can lead as useful lives and become as great as Stephenson, altho there is no railroad system for them to invent or initiate. When you see a young man buying or using tobacco, beer or wine, you may be perfectly sure he will never become a Stephenson or any kind of a son that will amount to much.

George Stephenson's son Robert was highly educated, was a great engineer, built the Britannia Tubular Bridge over the Menai Strait, the Victoria bridge over the St Lawrence in Canada and various other great public works; was a member of the English parliament, and after being much honored thru life, he was buried in Westminster Abbey in 1856. He always attributed his success to the merits of his father and to the excellent example he had set before him. Possibly there were a hundred of George Stephenson's young acquaintances that might have been all as worthy and successful as he was; but who chose to be poor, idle, smoking, beery insignificant drones for life.

TEMPERANCE HOSPITALS.

It is hoped that the present juvenile readers of the RESCUE will never be deceived or entrapped into using any kind of liquor as a medicine under any circumstances. Many thousand have been destroyed thru wine, beer or other alcoholic poisons recommended by mistaken medical men, as remedies for some malady. There are a great many medical men who still continue to prescribe and advise their use as medicines or daily drinks, but there are a great many of the most eminent and excellent doctors who do not believe they are of any use except at some rare peculiar crisis; and they agree that on all occasions they are harmful. Some believe they never can be of any service whatever.

The class of men who having studied this question well, believe alcoholic liquors are harmful either in health or sickness, have built a fine Temperance Hospital in London, at a cost of about $130,000. They have had their hospital running several years in a rented building, but now have their own. So far 1003 indoor patients have been received and treated in every case, without any use of alcoholic drink or medicine. Now you must know, there are always some people taken to hospitals, who cannot recover or be cured by any human skill. Of these 1003 there have died 43 and that means that this hospital, run without any alcohol, has only lost one half the average of the other great hospitals of London. And the friends of temperance including their abstaining medical men firmly believe, that the treatment which excluded all alcoholic drink or medicine is by far the safest.

Similar experiments have been previously made with a similar result upon a small scale. A large poor house in England about 8 years ago was the scene of one trial. The tax payers complained of the large cost of liquor medicine fed to the paupers: some total abstainers got upon the poor committee. They entirely expelled liquor for 6 months from the poor house and they were the wet and unhealthy winter months too. In that time they had just half the sickness and half the number of deaths which had occurred in the previous six months of more favorable weather.

A trial was made soon after in a womans hospital in London for a year, and the fatal cases were reduced one half, but still the doctor in charge, who liked to prescribe drink, refused to allow that the lives saved had been saved by the non use of alcohol—he said in his report, it was very probably due to some other cause, which he did not even guess at.

OLD TIME DOCTORS.

It is well for the young people of to-day to know that only a few years ago, 25 to 40 years ago, the doctors were terribly in the dark, as to the proper treatment of many complaints. No doubt many thousand of people died every year under the doctor's hands who would have recovered, had the doctor let them alone or had they been given a treatment only of fresh air and bread and water. It was no fault of the doctors, they did as they had been taught, and did their very best every time to cure their patients as they do now. But they had not learned everything then and some have not yet.

They used to bleed people in the arms and sometimes in the feet. When a boy I saw the old family doctor bleed my sister in both feet and it makes me shudder with horror to remember it to-day. But strange to say she got well after a while, in spite of that barbarous treatment, and perhaps the doctor thot he had done first rate. She was only in delicate health and in her school days. Many people used to come every spring and have the doctor lance their arm and take a pint or so of blood from them just because they were a little weak or had a headache or a poor appetite some day. Perhaps a pint is too much to say but I think I have seen that much often.

FRESH AIR.

For some diseases, smallpox for instance, the sick room was closed up tight, for fear the fresh air which God gave us, should kill the patient. If he lived away in the woods too far to get a doctor brought to him, the sick man had some chance of recovery. To breathe over and over the air which he had, poisoned, was a peril which few could survive.

WATER AND FOOD.

It was a favorite plan to deny the sick the kind of food which they desired, and which nature was thus instructing them was the very thing most wholesome and necessary. For instance if a patient wanted chicken broth, the doctor would strenuously forbid that, but if he knew that he particularly abhorred salt herring, he would allow him a little of that—which of course would have been very bad if eaten.

But the most cruel thing that they did was in many diseases to deny the water which they craved, and which was the very best and in many cases the only medicine needed. The sick begged and screamed and sometimes cursed for water. Another memory comes in here. In my boyhood of 10 or 11 years, a much loved brother, the favorite of a large family circle, stout, healthy, with the strength and activity of more than two common men, 26 years of age and with a constitution and an ancestral record that promised nearly 60 more years of vigorous life, was laid up with a fever induced by a careless exposure in a cold winter's day. The same family doctor was summoned; bled of course, and lots of calomel—water for which the sick man longed strictly forbidden: a cup of water was certain death!!! Patient grew worse, another doctor called in to help, fresh from college with all the new improvements learned by heart. More calomel till even the old doctor was horrified; more calomel doubled, but no water. The sufferer begged and prayed for just one spoonful; offered his farm, his house, everything he had but his wife and two children, just for one cup of cold water, and his dearest friends dared not give it, for fear instant death would ensue and they should be his murderers. At length the doctors gave him up; he could not live till next day. Dont send for us again: no use, nothing can be done.

He was watched that night by several women who waited for his death. One was an old nurse who, hearing his piteous wails for water, water, said, "he must die, why not give him water, and not have him die in this terrible agony." "Agreed; let the poor fellow die easier. The old nurse who, by the way, was a kind hearted Irish woman, carried him some water: he drank it eagerly and begged for more. Without the knowledge of the rest that woman went out tnto the cold frozen porch and got a bucket of icy water, and stupidly gave him pint after pint the whole of it, an astounding quantity. For three hours he struggled in mortal agony; it almost killed him, but then the iron man grew better, mended rapidly next day and used more water: was considered out of danger in two days. The doctors both returned, were horrified; what an awful thing !!! What a mercy you did not kill the poor fellow; stop that water instantly; and such was the blind heathen faith which people had in the omniscience of doctors at that time, they obeyed and were thankful they had not killed him with water. In two days more the patient's life went out under the doctors' hands begging for water!!! Murdered and his wife widowed and his children orphaned—by the ignorance of two men who were doubtlessly as sincerely anxious to restore the sick as his own wife was. And it is quite probable that had there been no doctors procurable, his sickness would have gone off itself in a very few days with cold water and rational treatment by his family.

BRANDY.

Brandy and wine was another thing they always prescribed, and some do yet. But it is universally admitted now a-days that the withholding of water from the thirsty sick was the worst medical treatment possible. Bleeding as they did once, is now known to have been a fatal mistake. Denying them the food which nature craved, it is now known was a terrible mistake. Excluding fresh wholesome air we know was a sad mistake. And some eminent and excellent doctors now say that the dosing with brandy and wine and beer was the worst and direst mistake of all. Yet some very well meaning doctors who have abandoned all the other falacies cling to this one, because somebody taught them that way, and they have not properly sought for the truth. And just like the doctors we find people in all other professions. A temperance education will kill off a monstrous hive of ghastly superstitions and death laden follies.

PRIZES FOR THE CHILDREN.

It will be news for the young folks that there is going to be a grand competition over the state for prizes for the best essay written by school children. They have competed in the Oakland schools as reported in the RESCUE lately and quite a number of children secured prizes.

Now they are going to put up $800 in the schools of San Francisco, to be distributed among pupils of all grades in prizes of different amounts for the best essays written by them on the effects of tobacco and intoxicating drinks. And there is little doubt that the example will be followed soon all over the state. Dr Mc Donald of the Pacific Bank has provided the $800 for San Francisco for which the children of the whole state should remember him kindly. That is not all the money he has in the world but it is $800 more than any other wealthy man of the state has given to such a useful purpose. It is quite likely his example will stimulate some others, who have never seen the importance of expending their money in that manner, and they will no doubt help to carry out the effort all over the country.

In England they are trying to introduce temperance lessons into schools and Sunday school, but they are very much afraid that it will offend some of the parents to have their children taught that the bottles and pipes which they see at home dont contain wholesome food. But most parents love their own children well enough to desire to have them guarded against becoming ruined by slavish and unfortunate habits.

CHINESE BABIES.

In China there are so many people that an immense number live on the water: they are actually crowded off the land; there is no land for them, except a place to bury them in some day. There is of course plenty of ground not built on and not farmed, but there is none on which these outcasts could make a living so conveniently as they can on the water. So a great many are born and live and eat and sleep and die on their boats, and some of those family boats are not more than 12 feet long and about 4 wide, which you will imagine dont afford much space to each room when the parlor, kitchen, sitting room, nursery, sleeping rooms, play room, cellar, garret and hen coop have all to be in that space. The bathroom is on the outside and has plenty of room in it. But the boats are not all so small as that: they are of all sizes up to junks that will carry a hundred tons and more. One of the funniest things to be seen on the small river boats, is the little chinese baby crawling round the deck, with a line made fast aronnd its waist about 6 or 8 feet long and a little fancy made buoy at the other end; so that if the little subject should fall overboard, as it is always liable to do, they can immediately fish it up again with the buoy.

Most California people have seen chinese babies but they have not seen them with that article of dress so indispensable to the folks who live on the river.

A NICE PRESENT.

In the latter days of April of this year some English gentlemen, members of a hunting society, made a "handsome generous present" to one Stephen Cooper a farmer, over whose grounds and fences they had ridden. They must have had a great regard for Mr. Cooper for the present was a very precious one in that country. It was a gallon of brandy a gallon of whisky, and a gallon of gin. The farmer had four men working for him and in the evening he called them in and treated them to a good glass of brandy each. Next morning the gallon of brandy was missing; it had been stolen by two of these men who had got a taste of the good beverage; they were inspired by it to steal; and one of the men was found dead in the chaff-house poisoned with that nice present. There was an inquest; and one of the jurymen thot that Mr. Cooper ought to be reprimanded for giving the brandy to the men in the first place: but the coroner thot he had received caution enough already in the death of his employee. That was bad enough, but it was not all of that good present. Mr. Cooper himself in a week drank up nearly all of the other two gallons and died of delirium tremens on the 9th of May. It was a very nice present indeed!.

ENGLAND'S RULE.

It is to the credit of England that wherever she has had intercourse with heathen and barbarous nations, her people have sent them the Bible and the missionary and christianity, and the government has given them every countenance and facility in doing so.

But with the Bible the rum barrel has been the inevitable fellow passenger and proselyter. The English government has abolished in India the chucking of children into the Ganges to appease a heathen deity; has put a stop to the burning of widows at funerals and has destroyed the Thug society of treacherous murderers. And in China its influences has very much worn out the practice once so common, of drowning most of the female infants.

All this, we should recognize, is very creditable to England. But unfortunately the mockers wine and beer have a terrible hold of the English people, except the temperate class who are now becoming very numerous. Wine and beer mock and blind all who use them. Therefore the same government of England has replaced the evils it abolished, with others vastly worse and more wicked. They have been manufacturing the sober people of India into drunkards and beggars and criminals with fearful rapidity—They have diverted vast districts of fertile agriculture to the production of opium, to plague and blister and blast and curse the whole people of China to make revenue for England. They have taught them to convert the wholesome milk of their cocoa and other palm trees into murderons alcohol, for the sake of collecting a duty tax upon it.

They have converted the beautiful Island of Mauritius and its sugar cane into a rum mill to grind out death, to be sent to Madagascar and Africa, to kill the natives there and make a little revenue and gain for England. And the English government compels the government of China to admit opium to poison its people, against its will, and compels the Queen of Madagascar to admit English rum, to kill her people, in spite of her remonstrances and earnest appeals for many years past.

Our people have done a good deal of the same thing and would have done a good deal more if they had had the same opportunities as England. We are not saints that can stone wicked men by any means. The temperance people of England have been protesting for long years against these monstrous national crimes, but without effect. Their statesmen and politicians are blinded by drink and party spirit and love of power, exactly as ours are, and the voice of the better and consciencious majority is drowned in the noisy tumult of frivolous party questions which blind the nation as to matters of real and weighty moment.

And the great solemn fact keeps preaching to us all the time. All this terrible slaughter of human lives, and souls, this festering pool of national and public sin and crime, this substitution of the temples and worship of satan for those of the God of our countries and race—continue because the better majority of the American and English people, the christians, the temperate and moral and virtuous people who can always lead if they will, continue year after year to throw away their votes carelessly and inconsiderately and therefore sinfully; and are recreant to their duty to country, to neighbor and to God.

SERGEANT OKEY the champion marksman of 1880 is 25 years of age, was raised a Band of Hope boy and a Good Templar. His family have always been teetotalers and he says his marksmanship is due to temperance in eating and abstinence from tobacco as well as strong drink.

THE SONS of Temperance in England have a mutual aid society similar to ours in this state. Its death rate has been so far 4¼ per 1000 per year against 11 per 1000 in the fraternal societies.

PROFESSOR LOUIS AGASSIZ.

Let me tell you how the great and good naturalist Louis Agassiz, came to be so famous, and it may incite some of the boys to whom I am writing to follow in his footsteps—you may not become either famous or a professor, but if you make the best use of your eyes and your time, the world will surely be the better of your having lived.

It was in a very plain home on the shore of a pretty lake in Switzerland that the little Louis first opened his eyes to the light. Switzerland you know is a wonderful country made up of steep mountains, lovely green valleys, beautiful lakes and great fields of ice, and it is not to be wondered at that a child growing up in sight of so much that is grand and curious—should think about all he saw and want to know more and more of what was every day before him. Do you not know how delighted children are with the sight of a stream or lake? Did ever a country boy or girl live, who had not, with a string and pin hook, coaxed the minnows from their watery home? What hours of patient waiting that were hardly rewarded with a nibble, but the charm was all the same.

So let us fancy the boy Louis by the side of a sunny lake, taking his first lesson in Natural History. It is said of him that he was often heard telling in the most lively manner about what he saw along the shore of the lake; and his observations were continued with great eagerness. He learned the habits of caterpillars and bugs, and indeed of all the animals that lived about him, but his greatest pleasure was found among the fishes, and when he grew to manhood he studied medicine that he might be better qualified to follow his favorite pursuit.

When he was thirty-nine years old he came to this country; this was in 1846. In 1847 he was made professor in Harvard College. He made his home in Cambridge near Boston from that time, and was loved and honored as one of the first naturalists in this or any other country. He died from overwork near the close of the year 1873.—AUNTY KARLIE in Scattered Seeds.

CLUBS.

Attention is requested to the offer of premiums for clubs, found elsewhere in this paper. The Encyclopedia offered is a reprint of Chambers Encyclopedia complete, in nonpareil type, size 6¼by 5 inches, 15 volumes 830 pages each, bound in cloth. The Library of Universal Knowledge is also 15 Volumes 9½by6¼ inches 900 pages each, in good clear brevier type, and is a handsome well printed book: contains all of the encyclopedia above and American additions,said to be altogether about 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's.

These works should be of inestimable value to every Lodge: give full information upon almost every subject or question that can be raised: they form a nucleus for a complete library, and will give the members a stimulus for the acquisition of useful information. Either of the two supplies the reading material that used to cost quite lately, $50 to $90 but the latter is the fullest and best printed and is recommended as the best choice.

In addition to the premiums offered elsewhere, for a club of 12 subscribers for one year at $2.00, an engraving of Mrs. Hayes portrait will be presented, and the same will be given for 6 subscribers for one year at 2.00 in addition to the clubs of 18 and 30.

For a club of six new subscribers for one year at $2.00, Julia Colmans excellent and useful works,the Juvenile Manual and Alcohol and Hygiene handsomely bound in cloth and six catechisms will be presented. It will be seen that these liberal premiums are offered for the purpose of extending the circulation of the RESCUE, not to make money for it. To put 52 copies in the post office prepaid costs a good deal more than $2.00. Renewals of former expiring subscriptions will be counted in new clubs.

FIVE MILLION bushels of grain have been taken by the railroad companies for transport from Chicago to New York at $3 per ton. If the Southern Pacific railroad is going to take wheat from California for delivery in England at $15 or $16 a ton, their present tariff of $120 a ton for books, and various other articles from New York to San Francisco dont seem like too much self sacrifice on the part of the company, for the benefit of the public.

THE SUNDAY law is being enforced in Yuba City and in quite a number of villages. There is no reason why it should not be universally enforced except the indifference of the people who might be expected to take some action to that end.

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

SAMSON AND DELILAH.

The Republican party was inaugurated for a purpose which has been accomplished. The emancipation of the African race has been completed. The foundation principles of that party were such as to enlist the sympathy and command the respect of good peeple, who could look upon the matter without prejudice or blinding self interest.

As that party became powerful, it attracted from the ranks of its opponents some of their best and some of their worst material; the former came over from principle, the latter much more numerous, for the hope of personal gain. When Gen Grant was first elected President, the Republican party was in a position to perpetutate itself indefinitely. It was completely master of the situation; its power was not derived from its bayonets or its ironclads, but from the confidence of the people and their reverence for its great work of reform. It then had but to continue to be an antislavery, anticorruption, antiwrong party, and it would have continued to hold the keys of the hearts of the great best majority of the American people, whose vote and will and verdict are the greatest power in this world to-day. If its leaders had acted wisely they would have studied the lessons of history, and taken above all things the utmost care to avoid the errors which caused the downfall of their predecessors. They should have made virtue and honesty and the protection of the public welfare their watchword; but they did every thing else but that. One is absolutely obliged to make a plain quotation from scripture to fitly qualify their conduct; "they played the harlot" in a good many directions, but most particularly and conspicuously and with housetop notoriety, have they coquetted with, and yielded themselves up to, the unholy blandishments of the bejeweled and begreenbacked and bedrunken harlotry of the beer and whisky rings: the most inveterate, insidious, malicious, destructive, deathdealing enemies of the people and of the country, and the closest allies and agents of hell.

Had they, when the war was over, been true to the principle of right and justice and liberty, which was the lawful spouse of that party; had they continued to reform abuses and turned their attention to the emancipation of the country from the worst of human slaveries and cruelties, there was no earthly power which could have assailed their tenure of office with any hope of success. But they yielded to the temptation of the demon of wine and have only been by a close shave returned in their offices, because their supporters have feared their places might be filled with something even worse, and less to be trusted than they have been.

As african slavery demoralized and destroyed the two old parties, so whisky slavery will reward its adherents. Whoever cannot see that the abolition of the filthy reign of rum and debauchery and riot and murder and pauperism, is going to be the issue, which shall form the principal plank in the platform of a successful national party in the near future, has a blindness to be pitied. And the statesman or politician who thinks the Republican party would hazard its success by adopting a sweeping prohibitory platform, has an unworthy opinion of the moral rectitude of purpose of the American people. If the old proverb, "whom the Gods wish to destroy they first make mad," is not to have an application to the Republican party, they will begin soon to shake off the millstone of the groggery from their necks, and adopt a platform which respectable people can conscienciously endorse and commend. The Christian women of America are a political power that can overturn all the foreign beer tubs and whisky barrels, that the slums of Europe can pour out upon this land. Their cause is what the Republican party knows is the right one, their counsels and behests it should observe, their interests and homes and sons it should protect.

But if it continues to trample upon them and to champion the invasion of their homes and their dearest rights by the slimy legions of drunken infidelity—all good men and true women will thank God when its light is extinguished in deserved infamy.

THE WINE INTEREST.

No. 2.

There are two and only two classes of enemies to the grape growers; both equally hostile to their financial interests and to their comfort and welfare. One class is the phylloxera which seeks to destroy their vines root and branch: the other is the wine and brandy sharp who proposes to blast this magnificent, wholesome, worthy and profitable industry, to hoist over it the death's head and crossbones of the pirate flag, and prostitute the lucious clusters of the vine into a poisonous breath of hell for the destruction of mens lives and souls; to make the beautiful vineyard an instrument of devastation and beggary and death to the vine grower and to the victim of the poison cup.

There is no use in California for either the phylloxera or the other more costly and dangerous pest. If we are to have either, the former should be our choice: it only attacks the vine: it dont attack our lives and our homes and our morals. It dont build penitentiaries and lunatic asylumns and flood them full all the time with human wrecks. The other pest does.

The vine grower has only one class of friends in this State to help him in this emergency, and of of that class is the Rescue and the Order of Good Templars. Let us talk it over and see who are friends and who are enemies of the vineyard men.

The temperance men have no possible personal gain to derive from the vineyard men: the wine and brandy men expect nothing but pecuniary gain and have only that motive: can have no other. We propose if possible to put a stop to the waste of your grapes at a cent or three-eights of a cent a pound which will probably soon be their price, to go into the rot heap and be turned into crazing, maddening, useless poison. We want to spoil that market of waste and drunkenness and shame and poverty if we can. But we offer you something vastly more profitable than that very uncertain market. The production of raisins and the employment of the boys and girls of the vine growers, in place of the chinamen of the winery, can be made doubly or trebly profitable as compared with the drunkery process. But you say, raisins cannot be made everywhere. Well, green fruit can be raised everywhere, and with as much energy and effort and State aid, expended in the development of the canned and preserved grape and grape juice, as has been given to the wine and brandy interest, a much more profitable and a perfectly safe and proper market can be secured for the fruit of the vine.

With fair dealing on the part of the railroad interest in place of their present system of charging four or five times the lawful honest freight on fresh fruit delivered in the East, a market can be secured for 1000 tons of fresh grapes a day which should give the grower three times the price paid by the wine and brandy makers. But it is admitted that kind of a business wont make the distillers millionaires by converting the vine growers into paupers and peons, as may be found marked out on the trestle board of the future, by the wine men.

There is no possible light in which the anti-brandy men can be truthfully put, except as the friends of the vine growers, and there is no possible light in which the wine and brandy makers and their newspaper advocates can truthfully appear, except as their worst and most insidious enemies, just like the phylloxera, but more far reaching in their prospective mischief.

It is readily admitted that if we come to you with a request to let your grapes rot on the vines or to dig up your vineyards, and engage in some less profitable industry, we should not expect a respectful hearing, however just and fair our case might be. But we commend you to safety and a future of prosperity and comfort. Our opponents will surely admit, as we do, that the manufacture of wine and brandy will be subject to about the same conditions here, as in other countries where it has been tried, in proportion to the extent to which the business has been carried.

If it has made any country richer, happier or more moral and honest, it is admitted, there is every reason to presume that the business will produce a similar result here. If it has benefited one-half or one-fourth or one-tenth of the countries that have harbored wine and brandy manufacture, it is admitted by us, that California has just that chance to be benefitted financially, morally and socially. And if it can be proved never to have in the slightest degree benefitted any country, it is fair to expect that it will act similarly here. If it can be proved that it never was anything but a destroying and debauching and pauperizing agency in every other country, the asseveations and oaths of a million brandy distillers, reprobate newspaper time servers and saloonkeepers, willnever make it have any other effect in this country; it will be shown that it never can nor could have any but an evil and damnable tendency in every possible direction.

There are two pictures offered to-day to the people of California. One drawn by any reasoning, commonsense observer and reader of the world's history, and the other by the devotee and dupe of the bottle and by those whom the greed of ill-gotten gain has blinded.

The picture which the sober reasoner sees, as the result of a plain common sense application of A. B. C. business principles to the grape culture question—is that of a million happy rural homes in this State, embowered in every beautiful embellishment of tree and flower and shrub and vine; every one of them fruitful in evidences of thrift and industry and taste, comfort and culture, on the part of the occupants. Every one a home of virtue and and peace and a nursery of American good citizenship. A paradise example to all the world of the proper employment of God's gifts and men's reasoning faculties.

The other picture, that whose outlines have been cast by the agents of the great mocker and tempter enemy of mankind, is one of bleak desolation, ruined homes, departed peace, the inevitable, ever present insignia of drunkenness, vice, debauchery, crime, and beggary and filthiness, interspersed with here and there a rare exception of fortunate exemption from the prevailing ruin.

The picture that shall be, will be the work of the grape growers themselves. They will elect to make their portions of the State nests of crime and ignorance and drunkenness and beggary—or homes of virtue, peace, sobriety and their inevitable fruits, health, wealth and happiness. What wine and brandy has done it always will, where it exists. What it has done and is doing elsewhere will be detailed in following chapters.

THE THANKSGIVING DIME COLLECTION.

FROM A DISSAPPOINTED QUARTER.

The impression may be a mistaken one, but it looks at present as if the R. W. G, L. or some mischievous agency there present did its very best either intentionally or ignorantly to kill the dime collection enterprise. The idea first and last of the proposed National Dime collection, was to combine all temperance organizations and friends of temperance in a judicious and unselfish national effort to collect on one stated day of the year, one dime or more from as many individuals as possible, especially from those outside of the temperance army, for the purpose of a national temperance literature fnnd. It was hoped that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and the Good Templars being the most numerous and the most generally distributed bodies of workers, could be induced to combine for the purpose of pushing this enterprise, year after year, to an ever increasing success. To that end it was justly and reasonably proposed that the N. T. S. and the National W. C, T. U. should be equally the recipients of the collections, and should each return in temperance literature one half its receipts to the local donors if desired. It was certainly to be expected that the W. C. T. U. would be the most numerous and successful collectors, and they should have had an equal voice in the disposal of the funds Therefore the proposal was that as many as possible should be interested in the success of the enterprise, and in the good results that should come of it. But as usual the amendment cobbler about the only artizan that has ever made a record of accomplished work in that body was on hand to improve, and, as usual, so far as the action of the R. W. G. L. can affect anything it touches, the dime collection is dead and buried. In the shape in which their action reads, nobody will ever make a movement in it, that will get a return of half the cost of printing circular notices. It is not clear yet to whom the contemptible alteration is due which excluded the most active and most efficient and most excellent temperance organization the world has ever seen, from participation in a national temperance movement. The wretched bigotry which cunningly prompted the charge, is not common to Good Templars and would be disowned by most of the delegates who were induced thoughtlessly to pass that vote. But the writer of this deserves the largest blame for this folly. He might have prevented the matter from being presented to the R. W. G. L. and ought to have known that no beneficent, well considered motion could ever pass that body without first being subjected to about 25 amendments, which would more than probably make it entirely the opposite of its first intent. That piece of shortsightedness which did not forsee this result is bitterly lamented, and it is conceded that our supreme body in the solution of the problem, "how not to do it," has made a success in this instance perfectly consistent with its whole past record of wasted years and utterly neglected opportunities. Perhaps we may have something else in future.

SAILORS.

A correspondent expresses surprise that an ex-sea captain should be engaged in an enterprise of a high moral character, should run a paper of a high moral tone. The merchant captains would be any of them surprised at the expression of such an idea. They are a class of men who almost without exception have been promoted from among their fellow seamen, solely because of their capacity, integrity, fidelity and good report. It is a surprise to any one of us to hear of a captain or ex-captain engaged in anything disreputable, altho we are well acquainted with the extent to which the characters and morals of our brethren are liable to suffer from contact with the numberless rascals, with whom their business compels them to meet on land: we all know the thousand temptations offered them by thieves who wear good clothes and gold chains.

Sometimes a captain is a defendant in the "assault and battery courts" and has been tortured into violence by a set of mutinous, rumpoisoned, shore-crazed sailors: the real culprits dont often come into court: those who do, are nearly always the innocent victims of a blackmailing case of perjury, planned and hatched by scoundrels on shore who live on plunder from the sea. It is quite likely many persons are innocently led to estimate the morals of that profession from the reports they read of these scandals.

MORE KANGAROO SCIENCE.

The sweetest little gem of modern amateur scientific discovery appeared in the Chronicle of June 25 on the comet question. A new power in creation has been discovered, "Jupiter's repulsive power upon comets." It appears that Jupiter is an exception in some respects to the planetary family: he has imbibed a prejudice against comets and about a hundred years ago in a fit of illhumor at one of them, which was wagging its tail intrusively aronnd and among Jupiter's moons, the big burly giant kicked the comet out of the solar system altogether, and it has never been able to get back into range of our vision.

Astronomers discovered that a comet first seen in 1770 and calculated from its apparent movements to return in 1776 was never seen again; the supposition has been that Jupiter's attraction when the comet approached it, had entirely drawn and diverted it from its regular orbit. Its proximity to Jupiter's moons did not affect their places or motion to any extent that astronmers could discern, but it is supposed that the attraction of Jupiter exerted upon the comet was fatal to the further pursuit of its old route and caused it to slide off on a new one. All these theories are speculations, but the attraction of Jupiter is a known fact. His "repulsion on comets" is only to be explained, if we can believe that the planet is of a testy disposition and has been insulted on some occasion by a malicious joke that a humorous or mischievous comet has played upon him.

That "repulsion" must be a function exercised or restrained at will by the planet that has learned the trick. Otherwise there was no possibility that the comet in spite of that repulsive force in constant activity, could have approached, so near to Jupiter as to get within the orbit of his moons, there to receive the kick which sent it into the outside infinities. Jupiter must have coaxed the comet with his attractive power, till it was unwarily decoyed within the reach of the jovial boot, and then let loose his bottled up wrath and repulsive capacity united. When the Eastern and European scientists learn of this new addition to the world's scientific barrel of knowledge, they will probably organize another Boston jubilee to celebrate this latest triumph of bottomlessly profound research.

It is also stated that the idea that comets may have been originally expelled from the sun by a volcanic effort, to a distance beyond the power of the sun's attraction to recal, is a new theory lately developed by a San Francisco patentee: that will also be a very interesting and amusing piece of intelligence when it gets East.

IN SUNDAY'S PAPER

Jo Snell after a drinking bout jumped on Sunday last from the St. Louis bridge, but was drifted alive by the current to Arsenal Island.

A man in Sheffield England lately sold his wife for a quart of beer.

Two young girls, daughters of respectable families, arrested in a beer dive in Eureka, Nev. where they were employed as waiters, having run away from home in Cal.

Attempt made to burn a house in Portland, Oregon, defeated.

A San Fco. hoodlum had a big fight with a harlot there and in the row set fire to the house.

Two men badly stabbed in a grogshop in Portland.

W. Hauffman gets two years States prison for assault with a deadly weapon.

Henry Graft a German 32 years old drank a pint and then a quart of whisky in a grogshop for a wager of $5. He won the wager and fell dead.

A tan game (Chinese) broken up in Stouts alley, but no grogshop or white tan disturbed.

All the above is from the Chronicle of one Sunday, and is not one thousandth part of the evils wrot in one day by the successful license system. The same paper has the following which is very probably an entire lie cut out from some dirty whisky drugged grogshop circular.

FAILURE OF PROHIBITION.

"The municipal authorities of Cedar Rapids Ia., have refused to grant licenses to any tavern or saloon-keeper, hoping thus by one bold stroke, to finish liquor drinking. Now, however, the serious question arises how to meet the expenses of the local goverment, which have hitherto been defrayed in large part by the fees and taxes paid by the liquor business. And the worst of it is that liquor drinking has not been stopped at all. Six miles distant is the township of Marion, where beer and other drinks are to be had in unlimited quantities, and to that place the thirsty population of Cedar Rapids make daily pilgrimages by means of a handy and now extremely prosperous horse railroad."

License is not a failure.

THE London Times and Temperance. While the brewers and rummies and outlaws of our Western States are distributing as whisky documents a million copies of the Rev Howard Crosby's lecture in favor of drunkenness, the Temperance Alliance of England are trying to circulate a million copies of a recent editorial of the London Times on "Englands drinkbill for 1880" in an 8 page tract. They want to send it, as they say, particularly to magistrates, ministers of religion, medical men, town councillors, members of school boards &c. It is but a few years since the London Times was a potent scoffer at temperance, but now it sends out an "important document" in its favor. The liquor sellers might as well call in their roosters. Their time to crow is short. Their shadows lengthen and the long eternal night that shall close over their revels in human blood, is near at hand.

MODERATION AND ABSTINENCE.

BY J. M. ALLEN, CAMPTONVILLE.

Every moral truth will always need defenders, altho it may have long been established as an axiom among large numbers of intelligent and unbiased people. We see this fact illustrated in Dr. Crosby's "calm view of temperance." All temperance people worth anything to the cause, long since came to the conclusion that total abstinence is the keynote of all real temperance reform, and a very formidable army that makes no pretensions to temperance has formed the same conclusion; consequently it is not strange that men like Dr. Crosby should receive considerable attention when they boldly declare that the tide of sentiment among the great body of temperance workers is tending entirely in the wrong direction, and that their labors have not only been in vain, but have been productive of drunkenness. Of course it is presumptuous for ordinary mortals to think of differing with a man of such large attainments as Dr. Crosby possesses, yet we cannot prevent the action of our judgments, altho our conclusions are not wrot out in Greek.

When men say that temperance sentiment is not advancing and that no wiser methods of reform are being adopted than were used 40 years ago, the most charitable view that can be taken of the statement, is to regard these men as having failed to make any intelligent investigation of temperance history. The signs of progress among the better portion of our population must certainly be apparent to any unprejudiced mind.

Scientific research has accomplished great things in the past 20 years, in revealing the real nature and effect of alcoholic drinks. It used to be supposed by every one, that there was food, strength and warmth in these beverages. But this has been very clearly disproved, hence the conviction of total abstinence is gaining ground every year among intelligent and right minded people. This sentiment is spreading with wonderful rapidity in England, and we now see the learned and the eloquent coming grandly to the front, in this warfare against a common foe, and they are entering the conflict on the line of total abstinence, notwithstanding this position is regarded by the majority, there, as pharisaical, impracticable and unmanly. It requires a large degree of charity to find any excuse for intelligent men who claim to desire the abolition of drunkenness, yet advocate moderate drinking.

Dr. Crosby tells us that moderate drinking does not lead to drunkenness. Such a statement would need no comment, and would receive none if it came from an ordinary man. It is an insult to common intelligence, for it flatly contradicts all experience, and sets aside a truth that has become an axiom in thousands of the best minds that any country can produce.

There are, at least, two things that the sad history of the past has shown; first, that out of every one hundred young men who commence to drink spiritous liquor moderately, some are sure to die drunkards, others will receive more or less injury in a moral, social, or financial way, while the remainder will at least receive no benefit from their indulgences.

Secondly, it has been shown beyond a reasonable doubt, that the nature of alcoholic liquors is such, that their use leads to excess. Men may eat potatoes and drink water without any fear of over-eating or over-drinking, even if it is done seven days in a week for an indefinite time, but the result, with a majority, of those using alcoholic drinks, is entirely different, therefore it is illogical to say that it is not the use, but the abuse of these drinks that men should do well to stop. We are told by the learned gentleman, already quoted, that total abstinence is impractical, for men will not submit to any such regime. So men have talked of every reform that has been inaugurated since the birthday of humanity. But I am glad that doctors of divinity have not always been the ones to put forward such objections.

A reform that the masses will at once receive is no reform at all: It is just the reform that these advocates of moderate drinking have been proposing for the last three hundred years, and what is the result? This line of action has entailed upon us fearful results; it has fortified a deadly enemy; it has made that which is dishonorable, honorable; death and sorrow have followed in its track; heart-broken wives, disgraced children, widows and orphans can everywhere be found to testify to the fact, moderate drinking is a dangerous and generally ruinous course to enter upon. These advocates of moderate drinking would show more sense if they would cease talking about impracticable theories until they demonstrate the value of their own. Surely these men and those that preceded them have had time to reform the world by giving a little for the stomach's sake, for they have been carrying the theory into practice for several generations. If total abstinence can show no better results of their work at the end of 50 years, than can be shown by the efforts of moderate drinkers for the past 200 years, it will undoubtedly be best to seek a new line of action.

But this grand foundation stone of total abstinence, has become to firmly secured in the hearts and intellects of the wise and good, to be ever removed. Let the structure of reform, already begun upon it, be continued, and bye and bye, with God's help, it shall present beautiful proportions.

A NEW STATE.

The question of a new State, to comprise Southern California, is being agitated. Some steps in that direction have already been taken. This is a question that interests every reader of this paper in the Los Angeles Conference. The vital question is not, Shall the State be formed? nor When? nor How? but it is this: When formed, if ever, shall it possess a constitution so weak or corrupt as to insure protection to the rumseller and leave boys who know no better, and wives and little children who can't help themselves, to the mercy of men who will beggar, starve and murder them with rum, for the sake of gold?

The only design of government is protection—not of a few merely, but of all—not of property merely, but primarily of life, and then of health, physical, mental and moral. No government is a success which fails in these particulars. Has ours failed? For over one hundred years it has most signally failed. It is called "the best government on the globe." It may be; but I should prefer to say that it is the least objectionable of all that now exist. It is inappropriate to say "best" of an institution which has so far failed in its primal object. A government organized to protect the lives of its citizens, and yet permits absolutely thousands upon thousands of them to be slain every year is hardly a success. But can the government prevent it? This government did abolish slavery, an evil not one per cent. the magnitude of the drink evil. This "best government" has been guilty of the stupendous folly of "straining a gnat and swallowing a camel."

If only those who sell and those who drink suffered, the evil would be reduced in magnitude; but thousands suffer death, and worse than death, who never taste, buy nor sell the accursed stuff.

The following has been going the rounds of the press—we insert it for the force of its logic:

"Liquor won't hurt you if you let it alone," said one, with a sneer, to another who was making a strong fight to have it kept out of the town by law. "You needn't meddle with it. If others take it that is their lookout."

"But liquor does hurt thousands who let it alone, who hate it utterly and never set foot in a saloon."

"I should like your evidence," said the other a little puzzled.

"Just step round the corner into Mrs. Watson's little house—a pretty little house, but it will not be hers much longer. The rumseller has it in his grip; I hear she must move out next week. Watson is working on his new veranda, which is to run around three sides of the tavern, to pay up another liquor bill, while his wife and children are starving. They never touch liquor but it has hurt them. I can pick out twenty families in this little place where it has done its mischief, more or less, and it is so the world over."

If we are to have a new State in Southern California, for the sake of God, Christ and his holy religion, for the sake of men with the slender grip upon manhood, pale, weak women rearing the generations to be, and pure, helpless childhood, for the sake of prosperity, secular, social, mental and moral, let us have a State with a constitution which eternally forbids the rum traffic.

But what must we do? Educate public opinion, educate men by making them think about these things; educate women to see their danger and their influence, and to use that influence for the overthrow of the monster; educate little children to know and hate the evil, and by and by they will drive the tempter from the land. Preach temperance from the pulpit, talk it in the social circle, teach it in the Sunday school. Organize any kind of an institution which can reach men and women, and get them to think and act in the matter. Organize the children into bands of hope. Get every body pledged against the evil; and when the time comes get everybody to vote Bacchus out and God in.—Pacific Methodist, L. Ang. Dep.

GRAPES FOR WINE.

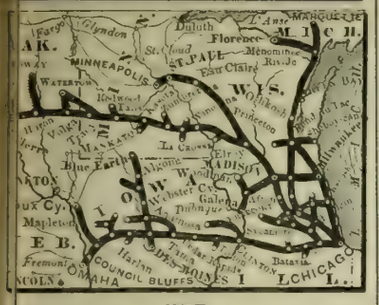
A good Christian woman who lives in a wine district writes:

Enclosed you will find two new subscriptions for your paper. I will do all in my power to circulate it as I think it one of the * * * We have an old vineyard; all wine grapes, and if they would give us one thousand dollars a ton they couldn't have one to make wine of. My husband has been fighting against the wine question for years; he contends that a good Templar has no right to sell grapes to be manufactured into wine; and I believe that church-members who are trying to save souls have no right to raise grapes to be manufactured into something to destroy more souls in one day than they can save in a year. And still they do it. A temperance organization can hardly be sustained here, and raising grapes to make wine is the cause of it. Church members that dont raise them want the question kept quiet for fear that those that do raise them will get offended and wont support the church. Some of the preachers are of the same opinion, and some advocate the use, not the abuse. Please give us your views on the question."

There is no better argument on the sin of using grapes for the purpose of debauching and murdering men and women, than the one the lady has used "If they would give us a thousand dollars a ton they could not have one to make wine of." Nothing that is right to do, is ever suspected of being wrong. It is only wrong acts, acts of positive sin, that are doubted and suspected and made the subject of argument.

The grape is a good nourishing food, fresh or preserved: its good properties as food and as one of the most precious and dainty luxuries can be preserved for 100 years in the utmost purity, and the market for the grape thus treated can never be glutted. To destroy such a blessing and transform it into an agency of vice, crime, blasphemy, prostitution, violence, murder and of beggaring and pauperizing and cursing mankind is manifestly a most grievous crime against God and our neighbor, which no man's conscience would approve if it were made the judge.

THE AMERICAN BOOK EXCHANGE.—A copy of the revised new Testament published by this firm has come to hand, nicely and tastily bound in cloth and only 30 cents. Attention is called particularly to the item on page 547 "The Cyclopedia War." The country owes a debt of gratitude to this great enterprising concern, for cheapening the most valuable literature and bringing it within the reach of every one who thirsts for mental improvement. People can pay their debt to the company and benefit themselves by ordering their remarkably cheap books. And those who look over the club list of the RESCUE can get a cyclopedia entirely free, by getting up a club for the RESCUE or the cyclopedia. There are many lodges, many private libraries, including those of the Good Templars, ministers and others of our readers, whom this library of useful knowledge would suit exactly, and be a grandly useful thing for the young folks to dive into. Our new lodges that are going to try to live and amount to something ought to have one of these excellent compendiums of information.



"JOSEPH G. MYSELL has addressed a communication to the Board of Supervisors in which he suggests the abolition of the wholesale and retail liquor traffic as the only feasible method of reducing the municipal and State taxes.—Chronicle. And John G. Mysell offers the only possible mode of reducing those taxes. That is about the only sensible communication that has ever gone to or come from the supervisors on the subject of tax reduction. An ox or a donkey is excusable in its ignorance of the fact that three-fourths of the taxes are directly due to the grogshop. But a man is not.

DAYTON, June 21, 1881.

On last Saturday evening the stores and saloons in this place were requested to close on Sunday by Bro. J. W. Fritter. None of them closed for which offense they were all (four in number) invited to an interview with Judge Hallet of Chico, where they danced to the tune of $15 as rendered by the Judge. Great indignation is felt at the Good Templars. Let it boom.

Get These Good Books

The standard, beautiful, and incomparably cheap books of the Literary Revolution are in demand far beyond our resources for manufacturing them. We must manufacture and sell quickly immense editions of these books in order that we may afford the low prices, and that we may transfer our capital to the manufacture and sale of still other standard books for which we are having most urgent demands. If, therefore, you want any of the books named below, order them promptly, as we shall after a few days cease to manufacture these editions, and they will then not be obtainable in the market.

HOME FOR ORPHANS.

In 1869 a capacious and elegant structure was erected near Vallejo, in Solano County, and in 1870, it was dedicated and opened under the auspices of the Grand Lodge, and entitled the "Good Templars' Home for Orphans." Its title is not meant to carry any idea of exclusiveness as to the class admitted to its sheltering offices. On the contrary, it is open to all; the only passport required at its portals is to be a homeless orphan child. Children under fourteen years of age, are received and cared for; and over one hundred orphaned children are now being cared for within its walls the buildings are sightly, capacious, and pleasantly located. The Home is under the general management and control of a Board of Trustees and a Board of Lady Managers—the former comprising nine gentlemen of the Order, who have charge of the building, grounds, (20 acres), and financial matters; while the Board of Lady Managers is composed of eight prominent lady members of the Order, selected from various parts of the State, and has charge of the domestic relations of the institution. The educational affairs are under the joint control and management of the Board of Trustees and Lady Managers. Within the Home a graded school under the "Public school system" of the State, is taught by two competent teachers. Upwards of $140,000 have been expended in the erection, care, and maintenance of this institution. The Good Templars of this jurisdiction have accepted the self imposed duty of sustaining this "Home" gratefully, and the membership is linked together in its support with unfaltering devotion.

ADOPTION.

Children may be adopted from the Home by reliable and proper persons upon application to Board of Lady Managers.

Rare Premiums FOR Clubs!

The Literary Revolution.

Either "The Library of Universal Knowledge," or "Chambers' Encyclopædia," which are described elsewhere, ought certainly to be in the hands of every reader of this paper. No work ever published, except the Bible, should more properly be considered a necessity to any person aspiring to even ordinary intelligence, than a cyclopædia. It should be ranked even before a dictionary. Before the days of the "Literary Revolution" encyclopædias were an impossible possession, on account of great cost, to the majority of readers. Ten years ago Chambers's could not be had for less than $50. Now you can get it for but a fraction of that amount, or without cost in money by terms given below.

An Amazing Offer.

By special arrangements with the publishers, The American Book Exchange, we are able to offer our subscribers the following very extraordinary opportunities to secure either one of these great encyclopædias:

FREE!

For a club of 18 subscribers to this paper at $2 each, "Chambers's Encyclopædia," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented; or for a club of 30 subscribers, at $2 each, "The Library of Universal Knowledge," 15 volumes cloth, will be presented, postage paid.

FOR $11.50 "Chambers's Encyclopædia," as above, and a copy of this paper will be supplied three years to one subscriber, or three copies one year to three subscribers.

FOR $22.50 "The Library of Universal Knowledge," as above, and six copies of the RESCUE one year to six subscribers will be sent, all postage prepaid.

Copies of these magnificent and marvelously cheap encyclopædias can be seen at the office of this paper. ☞As an accommodation to subscribers, their orders will be received and forwarded for any other of the publications of the American Book Exchange.

THE RESCUE,

THE ORGAN OF THE

GRAND LODGE, I. O. G. T.

OF CALIFORNIA.

THE RESCUE is devoted to the advancement of the business interests of this State. California never had any drawback or obstacle to the highest prosperity the world has ever seen, but the grog-shop, brewery, distillery and wine-vat. Those schools of vice, and the other evil resorts which they have engendered, have swallowed up all the wealth and industry which should have been employed to make this finest country of earth a paradise of happy, virtuous, prosperous industry. They have filled the State with crime, madness, pauperism, divorce, murder and cruel violence; they choke every nascent enterprise and trade and industry. And no conceivable productiveness of mine or field or forest or mill or garden can ever bring any improvement to this State as long as 10,000 busy factories of pauperism and crime are in full blast, seven full days and nights of every week.

THE RESCUE is the only paper in the State that deals in the truth as to the true financial interests of the people; the only one that dares tell the whole truth on any and all subjects that relate to the welfare of the State, and on all others.

If you desire to see the truth placed before you each week, and the only curse of California removed, subscribe for THE RESCUE and induce your neighbors to do likewise. Address—

Will speak at Upper Lake, July 7, 8; Lakeport, 9, 10; Kelsyville (Uncle Sam), 11, 12; Lower Lake, 13, 14; Middletown, 15, 16.

LECTURERS.—Bro. J. D. McNary reports good work of four lectures by Col. Goulding at Colusa, and Rev. C. Y. Rankin says an excellent impression was made by Dr. Merrick in Santa Rosa on the 7th and 8th, and expresses his best wishes for his success everywhere.

THE RESCUE has been sent to Girad Cal and to Shenandoa Valley, Cal, but there is nobody in the P. O. nor in this office who is scholar enough to tell where these places are: so the papers cant go, till we hear from some experienced traveler, who has been everywhere like Sinbad the Sailor.

Star of the Hill Lodge, 127, Forest Hill, is going to celebrate the ——anniversary of the I. O. G. T. with a musical entertainment and ice cream festival on Friday July 15th. Preparations are underway that warrant a grand good time time to all attending. J. C. HAWVER.

SMALL PRINT. The National Liberator is an able weekly paper at a very low price, 50 cts a year. Everybody can afford to take it. But its prohibition documents sent out in tracts in microscopic, eye destroying type are not to be commended—not for a moment: tobacco smoke and beer have ruined enough eyes: dont let temperance literature follow in the same track. Give us one-fourth of the matter on a page and charge accordingly; such small print is sinful.

FOUNTAINS. Dr. Cogswell has committed himself to the furnishing of one of his beautiful water fountains as a gift to each of the following places: Providence, Hartford, Lowell, Boston, New York and Brooklyn. And intends to look around for locations for a dozen or so more when these are completed. Next week some particulars will be given. The Dr. is determined to live and preach stone sermons on temperance every day for a thousand years in 20 or 30 different places at the same time.

TEMPERANCE LAW IN OREGON.—They have a beautiful law in Oregon which compels everybody to pay a $5 license per month or week or year, it dont matter which, before he can buy a drink at a bar. And a saloon keeper is largely fined if he sells to any one who dont produce that license. Every body has heard of that most excellent temperance law, except the people of Oregon themselves; they have never been able to hear of it except from the Eastern papers.

GOOD VOTERS.—On the last day of June the Democratic primary election was held in San Francisco. According to the Chronicle it was a circus show of drunkenness and filthiness. Probably there were lots of good honest men voted there, but the fact that it was an affair run by the keepers of jailbird factories and entirely in their interests and the character of the whole arrangement—would seem to indicate that the disfranchisement of the great majority of the participants for ever would be a most righteous act and one productive of immense benefit to the city and state. It is not likely the Republican spoil pirates will conduct themselves much better than their Democratic compeers.

DIRECTORY ALTERATIONS.—It appears a very simple thing to add another lodge or Band of Hope or two or three of these to the directory in the RESCUE, and people wonder why it is not altered every week. If one will look now at the directory at Los Angeles county for instance, he will see that to add a couple of lodges there, the printer will have to move and alter and break up the top and bottom of every one of the eight columns succeeding, because the type is not elastic like India rubber. Alterations in the directory are the most troublesome and unpleasant of all the work on the paper, and it takes a very little of it to cost two dollars at one time. So it is only done at certain times when it costs little more to make fifty alterations than it would to make two or three. The alteration of a word or letter is of no account, but additions are expensive and troublesome.

News of another lodge by Mrs. Stevens at the last moment.

BRO. MALINS. It is suggested that a recent allusion in the Watchword to the RESCUE as the "organ of the Hickmanite Grand Lodge of Cal &c." is susceptible of amendment in the direction of courtesy and dignity.

ELSEWHERE in this paper are some good words by Dr. Crosby, for which he should be accorded every credit: we should treat friends and enemies of the temperance reform with invariable justice, and give truthful and impartial credit for whatever we may find of good, coming from any source.

A VOICE from Heaven is advertised. A vision revealed from heaven to Joseph Hoag, an eminent divine of the Friends in 1803. It foretold the Rebellion and awful things to come yet; so the ad says, but it is evidently a lie to get fools to send 13 cents to a fraud. Prophecies made in 1803 and turning up now for the first time, as anybody should know, are frauds.

OHIO. The Republican Party of that state has come out as a grogshop party as it really has been all along: has nominated a most objectionable ticket, and has doubtless committed suicide. The M. E. conference, in session two weeks ago protested and promised that every one of its ministers will vote the prohibition ticket. It seems that temperance voters are coming to their senses.

CIRCULATION of the RESCUE this week is 3360 same as last week. New subscribers since June 23d, Carbondale Lodge 5 copies: San Diego 1: June Lodge 2: Arroyo Grande 3: H. H. Luse 1: Oroville 6: Forestville 1: Bro. Leland 3. Five extra copies are and have been sent for some weeks past to about 100 Lodge Deputies. The market report in this paper often saves a family in one bill of groceries, five or six years subscription to the RESCUE.

DUTCH COURAGE.—The Liquor Dealers Association of Iowa have challenged the prohibitionists to debate in public the proposed prohibitory amendment, but they carefully stipulate that only men shall be set up to answer them. They have secured Rev. Compton Burnett, an Episcopal clergyman of Iowa as spokesman for the devils side of the contest, and the devil's opponent is Rev. F. W. Evans. It is gratifying to know that even the paid champion counsel of his Satanic majesty dare not face "der vimmens" before the public. It is very significant too. No wonder there are such strenuous objections to permitting women to speak in public.

Gov. St. John of Kansas, says: "The sale of intoxicating liquors as a beverage is either absolutely right or absolutely wrong. If it is right, it should go on as any other lawful business without any limitation. If it was wrong, no license system could meet it. For ten years the prohibitionists of Kansas have been at work beginning with local option law. In some counties there has never been a saloon licensed, and in others there have been none licensed for some years. In the town of Olathie, where I live, we were defeated six years in succession, but the seventh year we got a local option law. The ministers all worked for it. It went into effect on the 1st day of January 1878. At that time we had five saloons in Olathe, each paying $500 license apiece. Fears were expressed that we could not pay town expenses without a revenue from liquor. I said I would rather walk in mud up to my knees than to walk on a sidewalk built at the expense of the souls of my fellow men. In the last year of the license system in Olathe we had 54 men in the calaboose. Next year there were but eighteen; in 1879 but eleven; last year only nine and since January 1, 1881, there has not been a single case of drunkenness in that town, and Olathe has a calaboose for sale! We have $2000 in the treasury, and town scrip is worth 100 cents on the dollar. Minneapolis Temp. Rev.

SOUTH AMERICAN EXPERIENCES.—No. 7.

Barbacoas was where the subject was dropped. It may take some time to get thru with that city and its institutions, and peculiarities. It took the writer very nearly two years to study them out, and then there was an unexplored ocean of information in the dim beyond, which was never reached. There are streets of course in the town, some five or six or more, and each one has been laid out with a most sublime indifference to, and an entire independence of all the rest. Some of them seem to have met with a disappointment in love after starting out a short distance and have either turned aside from their first direction, or their career of progress has been altogether arrested. There are the Commercial, the Dark and the New streets; if any others had names the foreigners never heard of them. The streets are paved with pebble stones, set end up and bedded in hard pounded clay: and all the clay and pebbles have been carried there in the pondos previously described. Very little has been done in the way of grading, only what was necessary to run a descending stream of water in a wretched ditch or gutter in the middle of the street or on one side, to help the women wash clothes, to carry away a small portion of the slops and afford amusement to the frogs, ducks and little naked babies. When it rains heavily these ditches run very full. There are no horses, donkeys or mules and of course no carts or carriages of any description, except the pondos and the Indian's back. The pavements are so rough and uneven that it requires long practice for a stranger to learn to walk with a sober gait over it.

THE PUBLIC SQUARE.

Like every Spanish town B. has its square or plaza. On two sides of it a very narrow walk of about 12 feet wide has been made passable with stones: The market place (open,) the jail, court house and other public buildings are on these two sides, the church is on another, and on the fourth are some old buildings, which have not been considered worthy of a pavement along side of them.

The plaza would be a very pleasant promenade and a convenient resort, but for one drawback. It rains almost every day or night, and the plaza has a clay soil in which a pedestrian would, at any but a very dry time, sink to or over the ancles in mud. There was one year an ambitious alcalde who was a born reformer, and he determined to reform that plaza. He put all the prisoners to work with pondos to carry clay and raise its level, and smooth it, so the water would run off; Probably he had visions of paving or graveling it in some future generation, but he never got that far. He made a little elevation of about a foot in hight and perhaps 20 ft. square in the middle of the plaza; there hope died out or he was succeeded by a man who had no love for progress; I never saw any person attempt to cross that square, altho they had some flag work on the little island which some adventurous fellow had planted there. People always went around it.

THE JAIL.

The carcel is of course a noticeable feature of the town, and as there are liquors sold in almost every place but the church and the school house, the carcel is a well patronized institution and a favorite resort of certain classes. It is not a very expensive affair for the community as compared with ours. The prisoners are let out every morning to earn their living round town, and thus lighten the burden of the tax payers. They are not watched or put under guard, but always come home to roost in the evening. There is no danger of their absconding. If they went by water up or down the river they could be traced as they would be met by canoes without number, and if they went by land there is only one road and no chance to hide there as we shall understand further on. There may be serious offences under which a prisoner would not be turned out in the daytime, but I did not hear of any such. I hired a prisoner to go 20 miles up river in a canoe with me and was told by the Alcalde to let him come back and see that he did; the fellow returned all right on his own hook. Most of them are shut up for a drunken misdemeanor or assault. Prisoners are hired out at 20 cents a day, when required to work at repairing streets and such jobs. For a drunk, recals a little episode of our city life here in San Francisco. A lady visited the city prison a couple of weeks ago: she was surprised to see a lady of elegant dress and superior manner, a prisoner there. She wondered what singular chain of unlucky and romantic circumstances could have ever placed a lady of her evident refinement in a prison: on retiring she asked an officer the cause; the officer at once put the question to the lady herself, who replied promptly without the least hesitation and in a very cheery manner, "only a drunk." They never see anything like that in Barbacoas. A drunken female exslave of the lowest type may get imprisoned, but an educated lady never for a drunk.

THE STORES.

There are but two importing houses in Barbacoas of any note. In fact one does about all the business. There are large imports of English, French, and German dry goods. The most conspicuous are the English prints and white and unbleached cottons, and showy handkerchiefs. Nothing American but flour. But lots of English cottons are labled American. The goods arrive in bales just large enough for an experienced carrier to pack: 100 to 125 pounds weight: they dont fancy box goods because all duties are collected on the gross weight of goods and package, the iron hoop of the bale paying as much per pound as the costly silk or lace inside. The retail stores are of two kinds, one that sells every kind of conceivable commodity except meats, fish, fat, eggs, sugar and vegetables, and another that sells all the latter. All of both kinds sell liquor by the glass and bottle. The one wholesale store dont sell by the glass. Keeping a tienda or shop is a very respectable occupation. Rebel generals and officers, exjudges and lawyers were engaged in that biz: and there were so few houses that had not about the same stock of dry goods, we strangers used to say that few of them could hope to sell more than 20 to 50 cents worth a day. The groceries are all kept by women who attend the market daily at 4 P. M, and make their purchases. The lady genius who presides is generally found squatted on the floor, smoking a cigar, and making chocolate balls, candles or something of that kind. She gets up and sells you what you want, if she finds you really do want to buy. They give the heaviest weight in their trade; if you buy a pound of meat, they cut enough to bring the scale down with a bounce, and then throw in another large junk. Their scales are a rude beam and two pendent pans; their weights lumps of lead and stones. I bought five pounds of corn on one occasion and was surprised at the extra generous conduct of the woman who recklessly dashed in another cup full every time the scales tilted; and she could only weigh one pound at a time. I felt a curiosity to know just how much that infatuated self regardless woman had cheated herself; so having to call at the drug store, I put the lot in a pair of proper scales and found there were just 3¼ pounds. As that corn was 20 cents a pound. I returned and found she had put the large potato which it took to balance her scales, on the wrong side. That was the way she explained it, as she rectified the mistake, with her former zeal and generosity much moderated.

A LIGHTNING ROD.

The principal merchant there had heard some eight years ago of lightning rods, used to protect buildings in the United States and he determined to have one, as the agent had not reached that town. He ordered the apparatus from New York and in due time it came, but there was no one there to put the thing in place. He waited patiently till two Yankees came along who understood lightning rod; they consented to fix it up. He led them to a warehouse where it had been put away and they hauled it out. On which end of your house will you have it, Don Manuel? said one. House? said Don M. house? why I would not have it on my house for the world. My wife and children are in the house. They tried to explain, but it was no use. He was not to be overcome on the house question. Well the store then? said they. Store, no, bless you, I am in the store myself all day: oh no, you cant put it on the store. But there was a little old shed about 60 feet from the store, with a thatched roof and worth about $8. altogether; used for storing salt; he said they might try it on that: it was as near the house as he dared to have it. They put it there and it is there yet or was quite lately, the only lightning rod anywhere in that vicinity: and it has been a success. That salt house has never been struck once nor any other place in the city.

MARK TWAIN—The ladies of Illinois have presented an autograph album to Mrs. Hayes of six volumes, 650 pages each. It is said Mark Twains contribution reads as follows: "Total abstinence is so excellent a thing that it cannot be carried to too great an extent. In my passion for it I even carry it so far as to abstain from total abstinence itself." That probably is not so; it has not wit enough to atone for its coarseness and its very bad taste and discourtesy. It seems to be the production of a very ndifferent second hand witticism tinker.

ABOUT WISCONSIN GOOD TEMPLARS.

A. D. WOOD.—Editors often tread on their neighbor's corns; some "squeal" (to use a slang word,) others bear their misery in silence.

I belong to the former class; and wish to correct a wrong impression that is likely to be conveyed by an article in the RESCUE of June 9th under title of "Our Present R. W. G. T. Please dont imagine I do it for the sake of making the correction; but rather for the purpose of enlightening your readers: To quote your words: "The Order East has been almost unheard of in all the great temperance movements of the past 8 or 10 years. At this distance one might have supposed the Order had died out there entirely, from any sign we could hear of of its making." Pretty general that:—but you must except Wisconsin. While I grant that California with her splendidly organized G. L. and her grand charity work, is doing nobly; yet I think no State organization in the Union has been more "heard of" in temperance movements than Wisconsin Good Templars.

Perhaps others have accomplished more than we; yet it is to more favorable circumstances that their success is due.

If am not very much mistaken it was in the G. L. of Wisconsin that the idea of the "constitutional amendment movement" originated. Certain it is that the thousands of petitions that have poured in upon our State legislature for the past 3 years, were printed and circulated by Wis. Good Templars.

Other States caught up the idea, and Kansas has taken the palm of victory in the contest. Some States have succeeded in getting the measure thru the legislatures, and have yet to pass the gauntlet of the polls. Yet, altho Wisconsin has as yet, failed to get the question submitted to the people, I dont think there has been any more hard work done in any State than has been done by our Good Templars. But with our immense brewing interests (second in the Union,)and our large proportion of German born citizens, who oppose us as a unit almost; there are few States that have the odds to contend with, that we have. Yet we are bound to succeed. Dont imagine our Hastings and our Kanouses, have no backers. They have an earnest army of 500 companies numbering 20.000 strong, who will never falter till victory perches upon their banner. Nor are our 5000 juvenile workers to be overlooked. Well in conclusion if any of your readers, in the far west come to Wis. I think we can show them as well organized a G. L. as the sun shines upon; and one that makes as much stir in the world as any; and gets their dues paid as promptly; to say naught of how cordially we are hated, and feared by our enemies.

Fraternally E. G. FULLER.

CLUBS.

Attention is requested to the offer of premiums for clubs, found elsewhere in this paper. The Encyclopedia offered is a reprint of Chambers Encyclopedia complete, in nonpareil type, size 6¼by 5 inches, 15 volumes 830 pages each, bound in cloth. The Library of Universal Knowledge is also 15 Volumes 9⅛by6¼ inches 900 pages each, in good clear brevier type, and is a handsome well printed book: contains all of the encyclopedia above and American additions,said to be altogether about 10 per cent more matter than Appleton's.

These works should be of inestimable value to every Lodge: give full information upon almost every subject or question that can be raised: they form a nucleus for a complete library, and will give the members a stimulus for the acquisition of useful information. Either of the two supplies the reading material that used to cost quite lately, $50 to $90 but the latter is the fullest and best printed and is recommended as the best choice.

In addition to the premiums offered elsewhere, for a club of 12 subscribers for one year at $2.00, an engraving of Mrs. Hayes portrait will be presented, and the same will be given for 6 subscribers for one year at 2.00 in addition to the clubs of 18 and 30.

For a club of six new subscribers for one year at $2.00, Julia Colmans excellent and useful works, the Juvenile Manual and Alcohol and Hygiene handsomely bound in cloth and six catechisms will be presented. It will be seen that these liberal premiums are offered for the purpose of extending the circulation of the RESCUE, not to make money for it. To put 52 copies in the post office prepaid costs a good deal more than $2.00. Renewals of former expiring subscriptions will be counted in new clubs.

TURN OUT FOR KING ALCOHOL.

As I came out of the RESCUE office yesterday I passed down thru one of the narrow streets, and here as everywhere King Alcohol said, stand aside. And with the feeling of a Nihilist toward the Czar, I stood aside, because I could not help myself. Barrel after barrel ranged on the narrow sidewalk, the street full of drays some of them similarly loaded. A few steps farther on, a rolling barrel and a jump to get out of its way. Every few steps in the vicinity of the wine vaults and wholesale houses a pedestrian has to step over planks arranged for rolling the barrels, step on to the curb and sometimes take the middle of the street to avoid collision with King Alcohol. He is absolutely monarch of all he surveys and even in traveling about the world in his iron bound chariot he demands homage even from his enemies.

On Mission street one of his victims staggered up to me and said "buy some soap madam," I looked at the empty basket that had evidently contained soap, at the poor creature who had sworn allegiance to this tyrant King Alcohol and gave to his majesty's subject the middle of the sidewalk. In the horsecars going home another subject is seen sleeping; trying to arouse when the car turned the corner; then sinking back again. "Take a transfer" shouts the conductor. The sleepy subject takes it but he has transfered his will, his mind, his family, his soul to the King of darkness; he sits still, too stupefied to move.

In a restaurant once, my little boy alarmed, shouted out to me, mother, see that lady eat fire! not satisfied with paying homage to her King by claret in the glass and brandy in the coffee, the plum pudding is brought on blazing, as all devotees of fashion must have it. Again; mother, see that little boy drink whisky! (in his unfashionable ignorance he does not know any difference in liquors, he only knows them all to be deadly poisons.) Yes, a boy about his own age, eight years, is also bowing down to the King, while the mother of the lad sits by with flushed face and calls for more wine. I step aside for the King, for never again can I enter and eat where his reign is so complete. Yet, this is fashion! I talked with a christian lady from Napa Valley. They have come from their eastern home and settled here that they may pay their tribute also. For the grape growing for wine making is so profitable (?) she will sacrifice her sons who, she says, are now all steady boys. Oh no! they will never drink. "It must need be that offences come but woe unto them by whom they do come."

Even at the Holy Communion, King Alcohol asserts his power. He persuades some of the ministers and many of the congregation that we have Divine example for following him. And even here at the most solemn ordinance of the church, young converts often partake for the first time of that which at the last "biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder." Arouse! Is the world asleep? Do we intend to step aside, lay down our banners that have been unfurled in the cause of Christ and allow this King, the servant of the evil one to capture the world? No! A thousand times no! The day is nearing when King Alcohol will be driven from his throne in the hearts of men. When law and order shall reign. When prohibition shall extend from the Atlantic to the Pacific and thruout all the world. When men and women shall be clothed and in their right minds. When children shall be brought up with their bodies free from all taint. When the souls of all will be ready to accept one Lord and one Master, even one Savior Jesus Christ. This is not a fancy sketch; but to attain these results will require prayer, faith and work from us all. To conquer this King men must awaken, work as they pray and vote as they pray. Women must step aside from a fashionable life and realize there is work for them to do; while the many sincere women who know what it is to live a life for others, must persevere, doing everything in their power to awaken their sleeping sisters; telling them of the danger that menaces us all if we sit quietly still and take no part in this warfare. Let every one of us hold fast to our faith, working prayerfully and persistently to crush out King Alcohol and enthrone Christ in the hearts of mankind.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT,

BY H. H. PECKINPAH.

One of the chief difficulties in counteracting such influences is the almost universal want of candor manifested by those who are trying to convince the people that the best way to lessen drunkenness is to drink more alcohol. Spurred on by their debased appetites, they pursue their winding way, regardless of consequences. Wilfully blind, purposely deaf, and from choice wedded to the sorceress, they are amenable to neither reason nor common sense. A striking instance of the manner in which the temperance question is sometimes treated by them will be found in the Argonaut of Feb. 26, 1881.

"Olla Podrida."(a kind of hash or stew, and which I am informed is the nom de plume of F. M. Pixley) after acknowledging the receipt of an invitation to address a Good Templars meeting, proceeds to show just how worthy of such distinction he is. Permit me to quote briefly from the article in question:

The great malestrom whirls on, engulfing society and scattering the wrecks of homes and families and fortune, involving the lives of men and the honor of women, multiplying crime, increasing taxation, filling the land with paupers, desolating homes and destroying society; a broad, mad torrent, destructive, inaccessible, carrying desolation in its course." Every word true is it not? And yet the writer self-acknowledged is an inveterate bibber, indiscriminately swallowing alcoholic liquors from "hot scotch" to filthy beer. He ridicules men and women, the latchet of whose shoes he is not worthy to unloose.

In his views of temperance and the temperance reform he endorses the sentiments of Dr. Howard Crosby as expressed in the Boston lecture, and insists that the word temperance has been violently wrested from its former and true meaning. Now I maintain that it is neither truly logical nor logically true, to insist that the slightest use of that which by reason of its inherent qualities can only be injurious, is anything but an intemperate use of it. I care not for the definition of the word given by lexicographers half a century ago.

The meanings of words may be, and often times are modified or totally changed to suit the exigencies of the times. Were this not so, there could be no offence taken if some one should tell "Olla Podrida" that at some former period in his life he was nothing but a knave.

But the word knave has been "violently wrested" from its former meaning having originally nothing opprobrious attached to it. So much for the violent wresting" of the meaning of the word temperance. I have no sympathy with those total abstinence advocates whoare ashamed to be considered temperance workers, and desire that the obnoxious word should be entirely discarded from the total abstinence vocabulary.

Whatever may have been the former meaning, the present meaning of temperance is, a moderate use of what is naturally good, and entire abstinence from what is inherently bad. Next naturally comes the inquiry, does alcohol produce its evil effects from its inherent qualities, or are they to be entirely attributed to excess? If alcohol is a poison can it ever do anything but poison? Hence the slightest use of it is intemperate; and temperance and total abstinence become synonymous terms. But especially repugnant to "Olla Podrida is the thought that temperance reformers are "immoral enough to twist and distort scripture."

To those who know him as a "Bohemian" who is out upon periodical "jinks," his evident anxiety in that respect presents something ludicrous and farcical. He endorses the sentiment that the temperance reformers are answerable for the growth of drunkenness, the demoralization of communities; and denies that moderate drinking leads to drunkenness. The idea that the most effective way of becoming a drunkard is touch not, taste not, handle not, presents a view of the question which is rather unique to say the least.

When one peruses the article in the Argonaut with its strong mixture of sense and nonsense (the latter greatly predominating) he is led to the belief that the adoption of "Olla Podrida" as a nom de plume was an inspiration.

For when a writer makes hash of his brains by hashing his drinks tis small wonder that his productions are hash.

He is evidently more at home with his drinking club than among temperance people. Is that fact the true reason for the sentiment expressed in another article which I quote? "It is better to be a king among hogs than a hog among kings." About the nearest approach to the swinish throne which a human being can attain is, in my opinion, to be a "sire of the jinks."

To the temperance people of San Francisco and elsewhere who may hereafter be in want of speakers I commend a careful consideration of that part of the scripture found in Matthew vii: 6.

MORAL SUASION

Had Jesus of Nazareth accepted the kingdom of the world, fed the outer world on free lunch to this hour, monopolized all political and ecclesiastical influence and power; made the sermon on the mount the constitution and the gospel the statute of every land, he might as well have been still born. No; not even crucifixion and resurrection would have retained saving virtue for our race. His precepts would have given the lie to his life, and his life the lie to his precepts. The moral product thereof would be a spiritless and soulless pauper-fungus in place of converted mankind as we find it this day. When we weary of his faith we grasp at clubs of coercion for reform—reform of our neighbor, of course.

Perchance our neighbor's moral and spiritual status needs strait jacket logic. At any rate it is far more convenient to the average would be savior of man to legislate the erring on to byways of salvation than test virtue of moral suasion as exemplified of Christ. Why throw pearls before the swine. Yet try to legislate him into strait obedience to "sell what he hath, give unto the poor and bear the reproach of his (perchance) professed Lord and Savior, and his patriotic enthusiasm for political and religious freedom will be a marvel to consider. Why indeed give what is holy unto dogs? Of course clubs must always needs be trumps among the lower strata of humanity. But us, we and co. never belong to it. Truth and grace suffice for us. Woe unto them in the outer darkness. Police clubs, chaingang, hemp and eternal damnation have their uses, else such would not be a power persuasive.

Christ drove thieves and money changers out of the temple with a scourge of small cords· (this was before the day of constitutional inalienable right). But he was gracious to repentant sinners and publicans; and is this hour. But had he forsaken living faith in the first act? He might have prayed for the thieves. What then our christian duty? First of all to do unto others as we wish to be done unto. Next to make due distinction between brazen, swaggering exponents of viciousness, and evil or sinbound victims of ill, seeking a place of repentance and deliverance. It is charity to deprive the former of ways and means corruptive to society at large. It is godliness to aid the latter to better spheres. It is insane policy for state or individual to serve the true interests of humanity by bowing before the first and rivet the chains of the other by high taxed or gratuitous license of vice promoters.

J. C. K.

The Presbyterian General assembly at Buffalo has taken advanced ground on the temperance question, altho a conservative minority stoutly opposed the action. A permanent committee on temperance consisting of 15 men (8 ministers and 7 laymen, among them, Hon. Wm. E. Dodge and Rev. Dr. Cuyler) was appointed to report a plan for active temperance work. It was also reaffirmed that each local church session decide the question of using grape juice instead of fermented wine, and declared that women may speak before Presbyterian synods. (all of which is a calm reply to Rev, Dr, Crosby.)

A GOOD MAN GONE.—One by one the pioneer workers of our Order go over to the silent majority ——that bourne upon which no traveler returns. Information is at hand announcing the recent decease of Bro. Julius A. Spencer of Cleveland Ohio, who has been a faithful worker and able exponent of the principles of our beloved Order for a quarter of century past. In 1859 Bro Spencer held the position of R. W. G. Counselor. In 1866 he was elected R. W. G. Secretary which position he held during seven consecutive years, discharging his duties with marked fidelity. He continued in the work, and at the Detroit session three years ago acted in the capacity of auditor. Age and infirmities overcame him in consequence of which he died at the Water cure in Cleveland Ohio during the week before last.

TEMPERANCE LECTURERS.—At the last session of the R. W. G. L. the following was adopted:

Resolved, That the R. W. G. Templar and the R. W. G. Secretary be instructed to prepare and publish a list of the names, post office address, and references of such temperance lecturers as they can consistently recommend to Grand and Subordinate Lodges of our Order, and send such lists, with the Quarterly Password, to Grand Secretaries on this continent, in quantities to furnish each Subordinate Lodge with at least one copy.

Resolved, That to facilitate the preparation of such list of names, temperance lecturers who are willing to devote the whole or a portion of their time to any department of the temperance work, be requested to correspond with R. W. G. Templar or R. W. G. Secretary, in reference to the same, and furnishing such information as may be desired by these officers.

Resolved, That Grand and Subordinate Lodges be requested to take such action as will tend to secure the employment, in their respective jurisdictions, of lecturers recommended as above in preference to irresponsible, incompetent and oftentimes disreputable speakers.

Reputable temperance lecturers who desire to be listed in accordance with the foregoing will send their address and references to the G. W. S.

THE BOSS.—Sister Emily P. Stevens exults over having organized the "boss lodge," and she hath reason to do so. Last week she was credited with having organized the banner new lodge of the year with one hundred charter members, but she fairly out did herself at San Luis Obispo. where on the 28, ult. she organized a lodge with two hundred and three charter members, fairly capturing the whole community. After that Sister Stevens will be credited with being able to accomplish almost anything she may desire in her field of labor. It would not be surprising, in fact it would be quite in accord with her recent ratio of increase if she were to report a lodge of 400 or 500 charter members next, after she shall get "her hand in" at organizing new lodges. Sister Stevens has met with wonderful success in her southern tour, but it has all been earned by persevering energy and hard work; hence she might more properly be credited with having won success.

ANNIVERSARY DAY.—Remember that the 17 day of July has been designated as the celebration or anniversary day of the I. O. G. T. The day falls on Sunday this year, hence it may be observed with appropriate exercises either the day before the day after or the day itself—Saturday, Sunday or Monday. Sunday afternoon however, would be a good time for the observance of the day, more people being at leisure at that time than anyother. The exercises might be semireligious in keeping with the day and if properly managed would undoubtedly result in much good. Let every Lodge celebrate in some way. The Lodge at Forest Hill, Bro J. C. Hawver L. D. announces an open meeting for anniversary day.

R. W. G. L. JOURNALS:—The Journals of proceedings of the session of the R, W. G. L. recently held at Topeka Kansas, are being rapidly pushed to completion by R. W. G. S. Keens. The proceedings have already been set in full and the R. W. G. T. has been furnished with proof sheets thereof. The appendix but remains to be added when the volume will be completed. It will be distributed and an official copy placed in the hands of every Lodge Deputy during the current month, or within sixty days after the adjournment of the R. W. G. L.

THE PASS WORD.—The quarterly password circular will be distributed next week to the deputies of such Lodges as have filed proper quarterly returns for the quarter ending April 30th last and none other. Lodges whose returns have not yet been filed with the G. W. S. for the quarter named and all such have been notified by a personal note addressed to their Lodge Deputies, will not receive the new password until the delinquent returns are filed.

PRINCETON:—Thru the efforts of Grand Lecturer Col. C. N. Goulding and with the assistance of Bro. E. E. Masters of Willows, Social Lodge No.

205 was organized last week at Princeton Colusa county, upon the ruins of old Princeton Lodge. A good future is predicted for Social Lodge, which it is hoped it may fully realize.

Personal:—Bro. Daniel K. Zumwalt P. G. W. C. and chairman of the G. L. Finance Committee, visited the capital city during the past week and favored the G. W. S. office with a call. Bro. Z. reports the outlook of temperance work in his section encouraging and hopeful.

Lecturers' Reports.

☞ The only authorized Grand Lecturers in this jurisdiction are Mrs. E. P. Stevens, Messrs. Wm. Crowhurst, Hugh R. Hughes, Dr. M. D. Merrick, F. J. Culver, Col. C. N. Goulding and George Bramall.

They are authorized to instruct and institute Lodges and Bands of Hope, solicit subscribers for our official organ, the Rescue, and receive donations for the Good Templars' Home for Orphans and our lecture and missionary work. They are employed and compensated by the Grand Lodge, and all monies received by them are paid over to the Grand Lodge Treasury. It is expected that the lodges and the friends of temperance will, in good time, secure a commodious place of meeting, provide music, advertise the meeting well, make every needed preparation and render them every assistance to make their mission a success.

JOHN ARNOUP.

Westport, Mendocino Co. June 26, 1881.

I have just returned from the hall of the Good Templars in this place where I delivered an address to a good audience. It takes three days for a letter to reach San Francisco from this place, and this is my excuse for writing this early in the week. Since my last report I have spoken along the coast as follows,—Mendocino, June 19, 20; Caspar, 21, 22; Kibesillah, 24, 25; Westport, 26. Collections for Orphan's Home, Mendocino, $11,00 Caspar, $3,40 Kibesillah, $2,25 Westport, $6,25. To-morrow evening I shall have finished the purpose for which I came up here and will at once return to my home.

In the near future I will trouble the Rescue with some observations, partly suggested by this trip, which appear to me to be for the good of the order and of importance to the temperance movement. In consultation with Brother Culver it was deemed best not to visit Cahto. Every night, considering the size of the places. I have had good audiences, and I take pride in believing that the cause of temperance has not suffered in my treatment of it from the platform. When off the platform I have gone amongst the people and talked temperance and scattered around a goodly number of Rescues, every one of which is a good lecture in itself. In all cases I have impressed upon members of the order, the importance of encouraging temperance literature. This so far as I have been enabled to see, is the capital defect of our lodges. It must be remedied. A cause cannot be carried on long without a larger amount of truth and fact is spread about than can find vent thru even the best of lecturers.

(The above came too late for last week: about four hours after the Rescue was printed.)

C. N. GOULDING.

Leesville, July 5, 1881.

I wrote you last from Orland, I went from there to Newville, where I lectured twice to a large audience; result, 14 applications for membership; then to Elk Creek, 29, and 30, found the lodge here in good condition and the two saloons struggling for existence. The people turned out in large numbers, secured two applications for membership. Thence to Smithville (Sheetiron) July 1st and 2d; had a fair audience on the first and a large audience on the second evening. One saloon here kept by a Mormon with good prospects of starving out. Lectured in Gaithers schoolhouse Sunday and Monday evenings, good attendance and fair prospects for organizing a lodge.

This concludes my 36 days' labor in Colusa county, which can be summed up as follows: Have delivered 30 lectures, secured 35 applications for membership, infused new life into the lodge at Princeton, and left matters in good shape for organizing lodges at Williams, Maxwell, Grimes Landing; but better than all, and of more lasting benefit to cause than anything else has been the awakened interest regarding the enforcement of the Sunday law, which is now enforced all over the county. The result will be the starving out of a large number of saloons and a corresponding increase of the temperance sentiment. The cause is in good hands in Colusa county and great praise and credit is due such bold and fearless clergymen as Bros. Atkinson, Sheriff, Humphrys, Paul and Sharboro for their active and hearty cooperation.

I am under many obligations for kindnesses received, and trust my labors may not have been in vain, and that the future will be prolific in results for the cause. I go from here to Lake county; you may address me at Lakeport.

TEMPERANCE TORNADO.

IT STRIKES SAN LUIS OBISPO AND MAKES HAVOC AMONG THE BARROOM STATUARY—EMILY PITT STEVENS IS AS A BESOM OF DESTRUCTION.

The residents of San Luis Obispo have been treated to a terrestrial as well as a celestial phenomenon during the past ten days. On Thursday of last week a comet flashed into the northern heavens, unannounced, unexpected and unknown. Whether this brilliant heavenly visitor was a precursor of the temperance comet which put in an appearance last Saturday night is for those interested to decide. One thing however is certain, the latter has created the most excitement and bids fair to produce more marked effects than the mysterious visitor from the realms of space.

MRS. EMILY PITT STEVENS.

Grand Lecturer of the order of Good Templars of California, came to San Luis Obispo almost unheralded. Two or three little 7x9 inch posters stuck up in as many public places announced her coming. Those little modest bills attracted no attention, and if any one took the trouble to read them, it was only to gratify a natural curiosity, and not because the person was at all interested in the cause in which Mrs. Stevens was engaged. The very idea of a temperance lecturer—and a woman at that—arousing any other feeling than disgust in San Luis Obispo would have been deemed ludicrously preposterous by the average citizen and even the friends of

THE TEMPERANCE CAUSE

Would have been skeptical upon such a proposition. But, like the Roman soldier, Emily came, she saw, and was seen, and she conquered. Never in the history of any cause has there been a more sudden, irresistible, sweeping revolution in public sentiment than has been manifested in this community during the past week upon the subject of temperance. Mrs. Stevens first lecture was on Saturday evening, in the Garden street M. E. Church. The attendance was fair but not large. There was nothing new or unusual about the lecture except that it was delivered by a woman who seemed to be earnest and sincere in her work. Mrs. Stevens said the same things that all had heard a hundred times no doubt, and heard said more eloquently too; but she had a faculty of touching the tender chords of sympathy in her hearers and irresistibly drawing them to the cause which she upheld. Her object here was to organize a Lodge of Good Templars and raise money for the Orphans' Home which is located at Vallejo, and which is under the control of

THE GOOD TEMPLARS ORGANIZATION.

She made no efforts to get signers, nor did she take up a collection on Saturday night. On Sunday night the church was crowded with people at an early hour. The lecture was interesting, and at times deeply affecting. Some of the pathetic stories drew tears from the eyes of many wives and mothers, to whom the tales of suffering and misery came home with terrible realness. Upon the conclusion of the lecture proper, Mrs. Stevens announced that a collection would be taken up for the Orphans' Home, after which an opportunity would be afforded all to sign for membership in the Good Templars Lodge. The collection amounted to $34. Three or four young ladies and one or two gentlemen were then provided with paper and pencils and sent to different parts of the room to get signers. Mrs. Stevens led the recruiting squad and created considerable amusement by the persistency of her attacks upon some of the well-known "convivialists" present. But there was nothing boisterous, unladylike or unbecoming in her demeanor. If she saw a person was not likely to be persuaded she at once turned her attention to others. The work went on for half an hour, when the solicitors were called in and the names counted. There were in all

ONE HUNDRED AND SIX ENROLLED.

The next day, Monday, the affair was the town talk; everywhere—in saloons, stores, offices—the all-absorbing topic was the temperance revival. One little instance will illustrate the feeling: During the afternoon of Tuesday, two or three gentlemen were discussing temperance matters, when a well known business man bantered a county official to sign the roll—the latter had emphatically refused at the meeting the night before. The official said that if the gentleman who had made the banter would himself sign and procure twenty other signers—men who were more or less addicted to drink—he, the official would sign. The proposition was accepted, and two hours later the gentleman had the names of twenty-seven—some of them old and constant habitues of saloons—who agreed to attend the meeting in the evening and sign the roll. Tuesday night there was

A GREATER CROWD

If possible than on either of the previous evenings, When the time came for signing, the official who had promised to sign was the first to go forward and enroll his name. As he did so the entire audience commenced clapping their hands and the building fairly trembled with the applause. then ensued a scene which it is impossible to describe, and the like of which has never been witnessed in this town. The aisles were crowded with anxious men pressing forward to sign the roll; whenever some well known man stepped up there would be a general clapping of hands, signifying the commendation and congratulation of the audience; mothers and wives

WEPT FOR JOY

As their sons and husbands joined the throng of signers. The most astonished person at this unexpected scene was Mrs. Stevens herself. She appeared almost dazed at times, but managed to occasionally recover consciousness sufficient to shout "Glory! Glory!" and call upon the glee club to sing. A large number of those who joined had persistently refused to sign on previous evenings, but they had gotten into the temperance vortex and could not resist the flood which carried them to the front. The signers were of every degree of sobriety and inebriety. The habitual drinkers, the moderate drinkers, the occasional drinkers and the total abstainers, were all represented. When the evenings work was all cleared up it was found that the roll contained 256 names. And Mrs. Stevens shouted "Glory" again.

LODGE ORGANIZED.

As Mrs. Stevens' engagements would not allow her to remain another day it was deemed advisable to proceed at once with the organization of the Lodge. The obligation was accordingly administered to all present who had signed the roll, after which the officers were chosen.

EFFECTS OE THE CYCLONE.

Wednesday was a dull day among the saloons of this city. There was a marked diminution in their business. Many fine specimens of barroom statuary were not in their accustomed places, and the chair-brigade which had previously constituted the prominent feature of the saloons, had disappeared, their vacant seats becoming silent but impressive witnesses to the havoc which the temperance storm had made in the ranks of the veterans of King Alcohol's army. The ladies spread a table in the candy store on the corner of Monterey and Morro Streets, and dispensed coffee to all comers without money and without price. The coffee stand has been continued and it is the intention of its managers to make it a permanent institution.

Amity. Oregon, June 24th.

Ed. Rescue:—Having just returned from Grand Lodge which held its 17th annual session June 21, 22 and 23 at Hillsboro, Oregon, I feel compelled to drop you a line. You will of course receive an account of the proceedings from the proper source; so I will not attempt to do so, only to say that the session was a very harmonious one, and the members seemed to gather fresh inspiration and courage, to begin anew to battle again for home, friends and country. Bro. Leland was there with his large package of Rescues.

The G. T.'s picnic on the 11th was a success. There is a tidal wave of temperance rolling over the state. God grant that it may sweep away every vestige of the liquor traffic. Amen.

Hillsboro Lodge has 140 members, most of them active workers. They have a fine hall and suitable furniture, pictures, mottoes etc., and are in a prosperous condition, notwithstanding the small number of inhabitants and three saloons. But I hope ere long these dens which are a curse to our state will disappear.

Mrs. S. A. McKune.

BAND OF HOPE WORK.

The Grand Lodge, I. O. G. T., of California, offers to furnish, free of charge, to Sunday-schools, or other juvenile organizations desiring to adopt them for use, the newly revised Band of Hope rituals together with the ritual badges. The ritual comprises a pamphlet of 48 pages. The badges are of German silver, with a safety pin upon the back. Sample copies of the rituals and badge, or quantities for actual use, will be furnished on application to the G. W. C. T., Robert Thompson, 1,531 Golden Gate Avenue, or the Superintendent of Juvenile Work, George Bramall, Haywards, or Geo. B. Katzenstein, 328 J street, Sacramento.

TALKS WITH THE YOUNG FOLKS.

WHY DO WE WANT BANDS OF HOPE.

Canon Farrar is an eminent christian minister of the Episcopal Church of England, and being an earnest advocate of temperance he stands out as a conspicuously useful preacher of the gospel. Like Cardinal Manning and Father Matthew of the Romish Church, one such man does more real service in advancing the welfare of mankind, than a thousand of his companions who are silent and faithless on the most important question of the day.

Mr. Farrar lately made an address at the Annual Convention of the Band of Hope in England from which the following passages are given to show you what we are working for. Where the word England is used you can use America and it will be true here. The whole speech ts published by J. N. Stearns, 58 Reade St. New York City at five cents.

We have in England, it is said, 600,000 drunkards. Well now, as those unhappy drunkards go too often prematurely to a drunkard's grave, who is it that fills up the gaps? The gaps are filled up by those who are now sweet and innocent children—merry and honest boys and girls. God grant that no sweet and innocent children of ours shall ever go to add to the number of that fearfully recruited army. But it is recruited by those who are now the innocent children, the boys and girls of somebody—of human beings who have hearts like ourselves. Let us struggle, therefore to save them. The late Cardinal Wiseman said, "Give me the children of England, and in twenty years England shall be Catholic." I say, "Give us the children of England, and in twenty years England shall not only be temperate but"—— and the words seem to open a vista of progress and prosperity such as we can hardly conceive— "England shall not only be temperate but shall form a nation of total abstainers." Well, now I ask you, ladies and gentlemen, is it really an injury to induce children to take the pledge, or is it an injury with heartless prejudice and callous obstinacy to leave them exposed undefended to all the terrible temptations and enormous evils of drink ? It seems to me that if we can succeed in saving them from that, we can laugh to scorn the ridiculous notion that we do them any harm by inducing them to give up that which they do not need, which they naturally do not like, and which can be nothing to them but a source of peril and ruin. But if you want to know from what it is that we are saving, or trying to save the children of England; what it is that makes us rejoice that, if there be 600,000 drunkards in England, we also believe that there are 600 000 children in our Bands of Hope (which is like a gleam of light in a stormy sky), I will tell you for a few moments what it is to which children are exposed, and what it is from which we are trying to save them. In the first instance they are exposed to the most shameful neglect.

Go into the low quarters of Glasgow, the filthy back streets of Liverpool, the foul fever slums of almost any of our great cities, and there you will see bright-eyed, tattered, ill-fed children growing up amid the reek of gin and amidst scenes of blasphemy, in low infamous rooms and in low infamous streets, dirty, dissolute, and depraved—the very seed-plot of onr future criminals—you will see them growing up without any parental control whatever, and with only one prosperous place in their neighborhood, and that prosperous place in those low quarters of our cities is always the public-house, which seems to batten like an enormous fungus in a region of decay and death. It is not only shameful neglect to which they are exposed—they are also exposed daily and weekly to accident. Not long ago a driver was driving through Southwark in the heavy brutal way in which drunkards do drive sometimes through the streets of London, and there was crossing the road at the moment a poor woman with a little babe of eleven months in her arms, and she was also leading by the hand a little girl of four years old. Well, this drunken brute drove over them, terribly injuring the woman, killing the little babe, and breaking the leg of the little girl of four years old. And they are not only exposed to accident, but also to terrible cruelty. In this very city a week ago—in this imperial city, this civilized Christian society, in Noel Street, a horrified spectator saw a woman holding up by the legs a little child of five months old, and when remonstrated with, she dropped the child upon the pavement and ran away. And they are not only exposed to accident and cruelty, but also to absolute death. I believe that every single year in England dozens, more than dozens, scores, aye and even hundreds of children are killed by being overlaid by their drunken parents. And the "accident wards," as they are called, of hospitals will tell you how frequently little boys and girls are brought in terribly burnt over neck and face and hands because they have been intrusted to drunken women or neglected by drunken mothers. I do most deliberately declare that in my distinct conviction more children are sacrificed every year in England to the awful Moloch of drink than were ever burnt alive in the worst days of Judean apostasy to Moloch in the Valley of the Children of Hinnom. You will say, "What can be worse than this accident, cruelty and death ?" Something worse than that is the congenital sickness to which those children are born, Almost every book one takes up contains some damning evidence of the awful consequences of drink, and only yesterday I was reading a book by the author of John Halifax, Gentleman," in which she describes her visit to the East London Hospital for Children, and she tells how the nurse said that numbers of children from the district, full of drink and ignorance, are brought there with cancer, hip disease, and disease of the bones, with rickets and all kinds of constitutional corruption, so weakly from the constitution which they have inherited from vicious parents that although they could only be saved by surgery they are too weak to undergo an operation, and her remark upon it is this; "For such children and in such places death itself seems to be a better thing than life."

BANDS OF HOPE.

The Band of Hope in early May had a four days' anniversary in England. It was attended by many eminent and excellent people, who take a lively interest in the right education of the young. Distin guished physicians and ministers took part in the services, and there was a sailor Admiral among them too, to make the company perfectly respectable. The Chairman said there was every reason to believe there are 930,000 young people enrolled in Bands of Hope in England. Many of the children have been the instruments of reclaiming their erring parents.

Dr. James Edmunds, a grand medical apostle of temperance, spoke of the importance of proper teaching of the young, and lamented the poisoning to which innocent children are subjected, in many instances through the advice of the family doctor.

Dr. Norman Kerr, another medical authority of high scientific standing, declared that all alcoholic drinks should be kept from children, and deprecated the wrong done to children in giving them alcohol at the communion table. In this he was seconded by the eminent Rev. Newman Hall, who said that his father was seven years a Christian, before he conquered the appetite for drink, and then altho he was a deacon in the Congregational church, he never dared to taste the wine of the communion. He allowed that every church should have a Band of Hope. It is hoped no member of a Band of Hope will ever consent to taste the unholy cup of unholy drink if offered at any communion. Drunkard's wine is no better in one place than another; the Bible says it is the venom of dragons, the poison of asps, and the Bible is a good adviser for the young.

A plan of work was determined on to establish new Bands in every county, to have them visited by superintendents, to have a regular system of thoro instruction, and give prizes to the children who furnish the best essays.

They had a choir present of 500 voices. One of the best items recorded was the speech of our Rev. Joseph Cook of Boston, whom our young folks should hold in affectionate reverence. He made a beautiful argument, in which he said that the people in America believed that the preacher and Sunday School teacher should belong to the "rescue section of society," and the work of the Sunday School included putting the pledge before every child, and when the church does its whole duty, he said there will be no jealousy between the Gospel preacher and the temperance reform, as both would be loyal to Christ's dictates, as to their duty to the children.

The "rescue section" is a class of the Church of England Temperance Society, who are appointed to reclaim drunkards, and they must be total abstainers. Our Bands of Hope and juvenile temples, and Good Templars and W. C. T. Unions in this country all belong to the "rescue section," of society; and while we should all be a little proud of that, we should be sure to worthily deserve the name.

AFTER THE CHILDREN.

The brewers and saloon keepers are looking for the support of their future business, to the children of the Sabbath-school, to the boys and girls of our public schools and to the little ones in the nursery. When a large winery or brewery or distillery is built of brick or stone, ask, for whom are you building that? And the truthful answer must be, for the future drunkards that are now pure and innocent and happy boys and girls. The drunkards of to-day will soon be gone; a slight wooden shanty would answer all the purposes of ruining all the moderate drinkers of this and next year, and ten years to come, who are going to be made drunkards. They will soon be killed off. But the stone and brick are erected to kill off the children. That is a noble project, is it not? To set a trap to betray and debauch and torture for life, and finally kill the innocent children. And oh, to think of the millions of children who never drank themselves, that suffer sickness and torture and death from their drunken parents. The millions that are to-day naked and starving and sick and neglected and doomed to wretchedness and misery and jail and punishment for life, for no fault of theirs, but only because the grogshop and winery have got possession of their parents.

A little child three years old in Glasgow last Christmas, drank in the night from the whisky bottle of its drunken mother, and was found dead in the morning. Another of 4 years in England soon after perished in a precisely similar manner. In the year 1865 there were 145 inquests in the town of Liverpool upon infants overlaid and smothered by their mothers in almost if not in every case, mothers that were drunk. Perhaps there were twice as many upon whom no inquests were held. In the large towns of England more than one-half of all the children born, die under five years of age. And drink is the cause of the most of that awful murder, for it is nothing else.

Now whenever you look at a saloon or its sign, or a brewery, or a winery, or a distillery, or a bar, or a whisky selling store or grocery, just make up your minds that it wont harm the old folks half as much as it hopes to harm the children. They are all traps to catch and curse and blast the children and you should never once forget to look upon them in that light. Just as the Rescue has a juvenile department to try to save and guide and prosper the children, so every one of these pitfalls has its main department and its principal agency—to make this world and the next a hell for all the children.

It is the children's business to begin early to hate and fight the grogshop, and to try and save the wretched men who are engaged therein from the awful fate they are bringing upon themselves as well as upon the children.

OUR FIRST TEMPERANCE SCHOOL.—NO. 6.

PROGRAM.

BY JULIA COLMAN.

"Order is heaven's first law." Of course we did not wish to violate it in our school. One of the best helps we had to this end was the understanding that it was to be like a Sunday school, Then we speedily partook of the order and decorum of the Sunday school.

Our order of exercises was like that of the Sunday school, namely; singing, prayer, singing, responsive reading, recitation to teachers, review from the desk, addresses, singing, dismission. After a while the first part was changed to secure punctuality which had become a grievous want. It was then that we devised what are now known as the "ladder tickets." We selected two sets of scripture texts, forming two ladders, one leading down to the drunkards doom, and the other leading up the path of the just. These texts we arranged to give out as tickets to those who were there punctually each day, one kind at a time, and when we had gone thru one ladder, each child who held the entire set could exchange it for a chromo card. We gave notice beforehand so that all might be ready, fixed upon the clock we should go by, closed the door and tapped the bell at the moment, had them all recite either singly or in concert the text given out at the previous meeting, talked about it a little, and gave out another for the next week, requesting every time that they should find the chapter and verse in the bible. This was a pleasant and profitable exercise. The talks upon these talks, or rather the outlines of them are given in the appendix to the "Juvenile Temperance Manual."

In order to add dignity to this exercise, we prepared a responsive exercise, harmonizing with the text, which like the text we struck off on a type writer, and permitted the most advanced class to read them responsively with the snperintendent. This was a laborious task, but as the type writer was then a novelty, its use proved a temporary stimulus,no doubt most workers will consider it far preferable to have them printed as they are now on rose colored cards at the very cheap rate of both ladder sets for one cent. The talks about them are like little sermons on as many different texts. When there is no need for improvement of the habits in regard to punctuality, they can be used for a variety of other purposes.

We have now many helps which then had not seen the light. Prominent among these is the chromo bible text card. A dozen of the best short temperance texts, are printed on a dozen different floral cards at the cheap rate of one cent each. These again are varied by having the back-ground either gold or silver, buff or black. Another variety is a little larger card with a tinted back-ground. The mottoes consisting of appropriate poetical verses, at the same price, one dollar per hundred more or less, post paid. Another size is for the wall, scripture texts beautifully printed in colors., at seventy five cents for the set of six. Some of these come in nicely, in starting the school or in forming a series of attractions and rewards for various purposes subsequently. We do not believe much in rewards for doing what ought to be done in any case, but we are often obliged to take people large and small on just the plane where we find them, and the attention of some is attracted by the giving out of these innocent texts in this guise. In many a good undertaking we find that even a little treat opens the way to hearts not previously approached.

So we found in our school that a fourth of July picnic in the woods, brought in many who were coldly indifferent, allowing that we were doing "a good thing," but never dreaming that we needed help about it. Similar methods are used by all other benevolences, not even excepting the Sunday school. We tried to take the good and omit the bad, and thus press in every available help in building up our temperance school.

We made much of our singing, repeating frequently the favorite pieces and taking time to learn new ones, often filling up with singing instead of addresses. After a while the Good Templars kindly permitted us to use their cabinet organ and this we found a decided help. Sometimes our leader would come before the hour to practice and the early birds would gather about her for a charming little rehearsal. But even the songs were talked about and criticized; we endeavored to make the little learners think about everything that came under their notice in connection with temperance or intemperance.

UNCLE JASON'S STORY.

A FACT.

BY AUNT SED.

"Isn't this just the nicest of afternoons after the rain?" said Nellie to me, as she was sitting down beside me to learn how to do a new stitch in crochet.

"Perfect," said I, when, looking up, whom should we behold coming slowly up the garden-walk but old Uncle Jason, as everybody calls him.

"How smart for one in his eighty-eighth year! He always comes with a cane in one hand and a closed umbrella in the other."

"I guess I'll send him round to pa's workshop, and save our time," said Nellie.

"No Nellie, "said I; "you move up the arm-chair for the aged do so like attention from younger folks, and let him sit here and rest."

His snow-white hair combed straight back from a very good face, and the furrows told me his calling days were almost over.

Papa soon put in an appearance, and they began talking of their younger days. Uncle Jason was speaking of working with the oxen. "T'was just such a fine afternoon as this,"said he. "I was engaged near a hedge-row, and, looking up, I spied a large snake remaining quite upright, moving his head ina peculiar way.

"Watching his strange movements before the bending bough of the bush, I no sooner spied a beautiful bird thereon than I saw it snatched and swallowed by the reptile.

"In an instant, with my ox-goad I madly struck the aggressor about half-way down his length, severing him into two parts, when, to my joy, out flew the little bird to sing the brightest praise-song of its life, and singing, disappeared in the tall trees near by."

"Oh ?" exclaimed Nellie, who had listened with breathless attention, "wasnt he good to save that innocent birdie in the nick of time?

"Yes, truly," said I. "How glad I am it was set free."

I have thought since that it teaches us a lesson. If we know of any soul enslaved by sin we should do all we can to "break their bands asunder and cast away their cords." Though the drunkard is not innocently enticed, as was the little bird, yet the gracious God is ready to forgive.

I want you to turn to the last chapter of Daniel, and the third verse, and take the text for your own bright encouragement to help others to be good, and pure and temperate: "And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars for ever and ever."—Banner.

A DANCING GOST.

ED RESCUE:—On reading your "Shaker Good of the Order," I would point a case. When last in your city,(April last) I started late for a visit to a lodge far from the city center. The streetcars make me sick, and so, notwithstanding the rain, I hurried along on foot, block after block until the number was reached. The entrance to the hall was locked, and the windows dark above. No lodge sign was to be seen, but on a post in front was conspicuously displayed, "Mrs.——— Dancing Academy," and in the room below the hall, (or possibly the next room) was the concomitant saloon, whose keeper told me with a grin of triumph that no lodge met in that hall.

After considerable inquiry in the vicinity I learned that the lodge had changed its place of meeting to a hall some distance away. On I tramped with revived hope until the point was reached. The front windows were light, but seemed inaccessible, and a little emboldened by the cheerful appearance above, I enquired of the gaily attired saloon keeper directly under the hall, and was surprised at his smirk of satisfaction in directing to a Good Templar's lodge.

Following his direction, I soon found myself in the midst of a large collection of young people whose curious glances and whispers caused me to take a shy survey of the room. Failing to find the arrangements of a G. T. hall, I enquired in the hearing of all, "Is this a G. T. lodge, or am I intruding upon other grounds?" The first answer was a polite titter of laughter, and the next a sensible one by a young man(and I fancied a little penitent) "No, sir," said he; "this is a dancing school. We had a lodge here, but it has not met for some time."

Now if I had enjoyed a thoro training of a French dancing master I might have bowed as politely as a kill-dee snipe, and courtesied backwards out of that room as gracefully as a crawfish; but wanting such accomplishments I was obliged to turn my back upon the reformed Good Templars, and in "bad taste" leave the ghost of Sparta Lodge.

"Like the ghosts in the old mill Dancing, dancing, dancing still."

And in conclusion, let me advise as one who has observed, that if any other lodge wishes to shake off the mortal coil of temperance, let it dance out of it. It is the shortest and most natural way; and if the fantastic toe could read, it might readily learn by the state of the lodges that try to dance up temperance interest, that every such step is in the direction of worthlessness and dissolution and the beer dive; and never fails of the just contempt of outsiders, whose feet we allow, may readily glide into the wake of the lodge's funeral boat.

The uniform excuse is that they are "tired of all temperance, temperance, temperance!" They fail to properly diagnose the case. They are dying for want of temperance. I have yet to find the first earnest intelligent temperance reader and worker, who is troubled with foot disease, or would recommend dancing as a moral food by which to build up a lodge. Such will always recommend a weekly dose of RESCUE, a monthly dose of Our Union, and a well ordered regimen from J, N. Stearns, 58 Reade St., N. Y. That will cure.

THE MISSING SAW-MILL.

A few days ago T. G. met an old friend, who was formerly a prosperous lumberman up North, but whose bad habits of drinking resulted as they often do, tho he has since reformed and is trying to do better.

"How are you?" said T. G.

"Pretty well, thank you; but I've just been to a doctor to have him look at my throat."

"What's the matter?"

"Well, the doctor couldn't give me any encouragement. At least, he couldn't find what I wanted him to find."

"What did you expect him to find?"

"I asked him to look down my throat for the saw-mill and farm that had gone there."

"And did he see anything of it?"

"No, but he advised me if I ever got another mill to run it by water."—Banner.

"RESCUE THE CHILDREN."

The National Temperance Society has just published in pamphlet form an able address by Canon Farrar, with the above title. It is a most stirring and eloquent plea for the children. It presents in a striking light the shocking cruelties to which innocent children are so often subjected by drunken parents and others under the influence of strong drink, and shows the great importance of temperance work among and for the children to save them from becoming drunkards. It merits the widest possible circulation. 12mo, 12 pages. Price five cents; sixty cents per dozen. Address J. N. STEARNS, Publishing Agent, 58 Reade Street, N. Y.

A SUPPLY of the works of the N. T. Society which are advertized in this paper are for sale at the RESCUE office at New York prices of course; will be sent post paid by return mail if ordered. Same are also to be had at 1041 Market St. See ad.

NOTES FROM THE G. S. J. W.

There seems to be a waking up all over the state to the importance of the juvenile work, and I think it would be well to make it a part of a lodge deputy's duty to look after and take care of the Bands in their jurisdiction. Since the first of this month I have sent out 2000 badges and more rituals, and I have on hand several orders not yet filled. Oh, sir there are great thoughts touching the possibility of this great work that make me wish I could write. Why dont some do it that can?

PROHIBITION REFORM PARTY.

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1884,

HON. NEAL DOW, OF MAINE.

THE WINE INTEREST.

No. 3.

Some of the claims set up by the wine and brandy apostles are too silly and too self-evidently false to be noticed seriously: they are only believed by the hopelessly ignorant and unthinking. They say at one time, that the use of wine does not lead to drunkenness, at another, one kind of wine does, but the other does not: which is of course the most simple nonsense. Again they say that drunkenness is not prevalent in wine making countries, when they know that they have been little else than nurseries of drunkards, ever since the time of Noah, and are to-day the filthiest harlot civilizations of the world. They still keep rehearsing the old worn out folly, that the use of beer and wine or either diminishes the use of stronger liquors: whereas all experience has proved that they have the opposite tendency.

It has been claimed that the pure wines of this State were not seductive allurements to drunkenness, that they were conducive to sobriety. But every body who has had an opportunity of observation, knows the utter falsehood of the claim. Even Mr. Wetmore, one of the chief priests of the brandy idolatry, has of late publicly declared that a large portion of the wines of this State in common use, are unfit to be used and ought to be sent to the distillery. And no one will deny that the distillery is an unmistakable drunkard factory.

In England 50 years ago it was deemed by the crazy people who drink, that drunkenness could be supplanted by affording facilities for the sale of beer. Beer houses were opened everywhere to coax drinkers away from gin and whisky. Great results were expected and they came: drunkenness and debauchery were fearfully aggravated and the sale of the strong liquors vastly increased. Ever since, it has been admitted that the Beer Act was the most awful disaster that ever befel England. But a similar attempt was made about 25 years ago and carried out, to cure drunkenness in England by introducing cheap French wines, which resulted like introducing the small pox to supplant the yellow fever, and of course drunkenness aud the use of strong spirits both had a marked increase, as all sensible men had foreseen and declared.

Every one who can and wants to see, must know that scores of thousands become drinkers and drunkards thru drinking beer and wine, who never would have acquired a taste, or conquered their natural repugnance, for strong liquors had their been no lighter drink to begin with. No one has ever seen an instance of a free drinker of strong liquors becoming a moderate drinker of light wine or beer, or if one has been such an exception, he is one against ten thousand who have gone the other way.

But the most potent argument that falls upon the ear of the vineyardist, is the

WEALTH

To be derived from the wretched prostitution of the grape into brandy and fermented wine for the pauperization and destruction of others. Now there are quite a number of wine making countries which should be brot forward as examples of the enriching effects of turning good grapes into pauperizing drinks. First among these should be

SPAIN.

That country has drawn revenues enough from its colonies to make it a country of rich bankers. The people should have been rich and amazingly prosperous from that source alone. The mines and plunder from South America alone ought to have made Spain a country of gold and silver. Its position and climate and its own soil and seashore and mines, should have made Spain rich without any other resources. If wine and brandy could ever be enriching, Spain has made enough of them to have made her the Bank of Europe. But because of the curse of her infernal wine traffic, her people and her government are bankrupt and pauperized both physically and morally. They drink nearly all the wine they make, which is an utter waste of the industry and land employed in its production. With every resource and opportunity for the most teeming prosperity, her 16 million people are semi-barbarous—only one in 5 can read and write. About a million of their nobility have almost or quite degenerated to pauperism and a large proportion of the people are paupers, beggars, brigands &c with no redeeming qualities: the people and country exactly fill the bill of a drinking, dancing, gambling, lazy, dirty, debauched and utterly contemptible played out nation of wine makers, and it was the wine makers that debauched and pauperized the nation. The wine experts dont explain to us that Spain has been enriched: a country that never had any drawback but its wine and the ignorance and vice that has always been allied with it. Spain has a national debt too, as large as ours and always increasing, and will doubtless never pay a cent of it.

PORTUGAL ETC.

Portugal, Italy, Hungary, Greece, Sicily are all wine countries and played out. They have supplied North and South America for a long time with beggars and bandits, drunken organ grinders, drunken fishermen, drunken sailors, drunken cooks, drunken shoe blacks and sometimes some very good people have come to us from Italy and perhaps some of the other countries named. These countries ought and no doubt would have been wealthy and prosperous in a very high degree but for their wine. They dont seem to have ever had any other drawback or obstacle but wine, and the ignorance, vice and pauperism which God decreed should be its inseparable companions. Our wine apostles dont write fulsome eulogies in the Chronicle and Bulletin and Record Union, calling the world's attention to the lofty, moral, social, political and financial eminence to which wine has raised Portugal, Hungary, Spain &c. They dont quite dare to do that, tho they have done bolder things in that line, trusting to the ignorance of their readers.

Peru is another country which has been very successful in making excellent wine and brandy; with a fabulous amount and variety of resources from guano, nitrate, silver, copper, cotton, alpaca and other wools &c, its wine and brandy, before the late war commenced, had pauperized the government and the country and sunk the people to the lowest depths of sensuality, debasement and imbecility. The wine sharps dont hold up Peru as a wine success, but they always say

FRANCE! FRANCE!! FRANCE ! ! !

Look at what a rich country wine has made France. Now if they can show that wine has ever added one dollar to the wealth of France without impoverishing France five dollars, the Rescue will shut down from all further objection to the wine traffic and its enriching processes. But to say France is rich; France makes wine; therefore wine has made France rich, has exactly the same force as to say Messrs Stanford, Crocker, D. O. Mills, E. J. Baldwin, J. C. Flood are all rich men: they all have used wine; therefore, without doubt, drinking wine made them all rich.

Just exactly so we can say, England makes an enormous amount of beer, exports a little of it; England is rich; therefore beer has made England rich. Whereas beer and drink has made an enormous proportion of that most hardy and capable race, hopeless paupers, and has reduced five to ten times as many more to a condition more unhappy than that of a pauper fed at the public expense.

In next chapter the sources of the wealth and prosperity of France will be enquired into.

THE CAMP MEETING.

The third annual gathering at the Guerneville redwoods has been a success as usual. The increased numbers and more lively interest at this reunion have borne testimony to the steady improvement of public sentiment in favor of the temperance reform; a growing determination to uproot the upas tree of poisonous debauchery which has been and is sapping the foundation and consuming root and branch and life of every good and worthy interest of the state and country.

The meetings commenced on Thursday evening June 30 and continued with unabated interest till Tuesday evening 5th Inst. The largest gathering was on the 4th when it was estimated there were 1600 to 1800 persons present: some of our friends figured a good many more hundreds than that. Of course the intelligence of the recent national calamity clouded the joyousness of the proceedings on the 4th and other days, but seeing that the all prevailing curse whose removal we seek, is making assassination and murder and suicide and crime more common and probable every day and every where and menacing the life and safety of every citizen high and low, the earnestness of the occasion found no abatement in the anxiety felt for the result of this appalling occurrence.

The services preceeding Sunday were of the usual description. On that day the exercises were of a religious character as they always have been. The morning services were choice and interesting, In the forenoon Dr. Haswell preached an eloquent sermon. In the afternoon, spirited addresses were given by Dr. Haswell, Judge Thompson Mrs. Congdon and several speakers and Dr. Merrick in the evening gave a stirring address on prohibition which was received with hearty appreciation and endorsement.

On the 4th after the usual morning service the exercises appropriate to the day were opened with prayer and short address by Bro. Culver, the declaration of Independence read by Dr. Haswell;

the Oration by Dr Merrick. The afternoon was occupied by the W. C. T. U. under the leadership of Mrs. M. E. Congdon, who gave a very interesting description of the rise and progress of that most important arm of the temperance service, its present doings and its aims for the future, Mrs. Harris of Petaluma also gave a short address and reading on the wine question and the session closed with a short address on the wine of the communion and the meaning of the term "fruit of the vine."

In the evening, addresses were given by Judge Thompson and the G. W. C. Bro. Russell, the latter unexpectedly and perhaps unconsciously divulging the hitherto carefully locked up secret, that he possesses rare qualifications as a practical and effective speaker. Bro Wade of San Francisco made a very handsomely pointed maiden effort which, the older miners declared showed "rich prospects" of an extensive mine of large future usefulness to be developed in that quarter; Mrs. Congdon gave a short address and the evening closed with a discussion of the "financial aspect" of the wine and brandy interest here and in other countries.

On the 5th Dr. Haswell, Judge Thompson and various others made short addresses, and the reporter left on the early P. M. train; the meeting being still in progress.

This meeting should have commenced properly with a relation of the proceedings of Saturday, the particulars of which were not obtained further than that the members of Enterprise Lodge bore evident testimnoy of the grand drill and training their Lodge has always subjected them to, and their splendid Juvenile Temple surpassed itself a little in the excellence of the entertainment it afforded.

Miss Henrietta Schloss of the temple received a prize for a capital essay which will appear next week in the juvenile department of the RESCUE. The oration by Dr. Merrick was somewhat different from the ordinary addresses on such occasions, for instead of being confined to a comprehensive honied laudation of the acts and facts of this great country, it alluded as well to our short comings and suggested a necessity for radical improvement

Sisters Mayhew, Alsip, Palmer, Fowler, who have all filled the chair of G, W. V. T. were present. Bro. J. E. Fowler provided the annual clam bake and a good speech and a tentful of happy campers from Valley Ford, which always contributes its quota of men and women and substantial help to every good enterprise. Bro. Proctor represented Healdsburg, and Dr. Haswells genial presence and ready, useful, inspiring help reminded us of all the good old reunions we have all enjoyed with him in this grandest of all interests. The editor of the Russian River Flag and several other members of the press were present. The former has been at all the Redwood camp meetings.

An aged gentleman of Kentucky origin who was present for the first time at a temperance gathering, expressed his satisfaction. He said he wanted no more to do with the wine business. He had never attended a meeting in his life where he had heard so much common sense and such an absence of nonsense as here; and, said he, any single one of all the addresses I have heard here would have amply repaid me for the trouble and expense and time which my attendance has cost.

Dr. McDonald of the Pacific Bank was also one of the speakers, and it gave much cheer to the proceedings when it was learned from some of the other speakers that he has become a silent but very active and useful partner in the W. C. T. U. and I. O. G. T. in the work of disseminating a frequent shower of temperance literature all over this state which is to be at once commenced. More next week. This has been got up in a great hurry after an unusual absence of the writer, owing to which our foreman printer thinks the paper is very much better than usual this week.

THE ASSASSINATION.

Everybody has heard of the outrage perpetrated on President Garfield and the nation by a drunken assassin. But it has not perhaps occurred to every person that we have 250 thousand manufactories of murderers and lunatics in full blast and authorized by law to continue their work of death. We ought to consider it the most natural result that the president's life as well as that of every other citizen is constantly in danger, whenever a grogshop-crazed ruffian deems himself injured, slighted or affronted. There are fervent hopes that the president may recover; if he does, we owe no thanks to the grogshop that it has not butchered two of the five last presidents. The rumsellers have done what they could towards that result.

THE ALLEGED BRIBERY

Amid the just indignation arising from the alleged attempt at bribery in Albany, it is well to remember that the whole familiar system of politics based upon "the spoils" is a form of bribery. The spoils system, of which Mr. Conkling is the especial representative, and to confirm which he resigned, is merely a system by which bosses use the public money to buy votes and services. Under the spoils regime, the million and a half of dollars which are paid in salaries at the New York Custom-house are given upon the understanding that the recipients have done and will continue to do certain political work, such as carrying primaries and securing votes for the bosses in conventions. The public money under this system is used to promote private and personal interests, under the plea of the welfare of the party. This is of the very essence of bribery, because it is the payment of money for votes and influence. But it is the meanest kind of bribery, because the briber uses the public money and not his own.

Vice President Arthur said, by implication and by general understanding, at the Dorsey dinner that Dorsey bought the vote of Indiana. The money was raised in part from the enforced "contributions" of government officers. They felt—and the general practice for many years justified them in thinking—that the money so extorted was the price of the place held by the giver. This is the boldest robbery and corruption. We have ourselves known place-holders distinctly warned at conventions by their appointing and removing superior officer that if they voted as they wished to vote, they should be removed and their families left penniless. They were forced by the threat of loss of wages to vote against their convictions. This is corruption quite as gross as anything alleged by Mr. Bradley. That it is reduced to a system is a familiar fact. It begins with the practice of assessments upon place holders—a practice which fixes the price of the place. That is to say, the party bosses and managers give a place upon condition that the holder will agree to return a percentage of the public money which he receives in salary for the expenses of the party. Here, for instance, is a letter addressed on the 25th of October last to the holder of a small national office:

"DEAR SIR.—Our books show that you have paid no heed to either of the requests of this committee for funds. The time for action is short. I need not say to you that an important canvass like the one now being made in a state like —— requires a great outlay of money, and we look to you, as one of the Federal beneficiaries, to help bear the burden. Two per cent. of your salary is ——. Please remit promptly.

"At the close of the campaign we shall place a list of those who have not paid in the hands of the head of the department you are in.

Truly yours, ————."

The letter was signed by the chairman of the State Committee.

So long as politics rest upon this wholly mercenary basis that places are to be farmed out to those who will pay most for them, why should we be surprised by any other kind of bribery and corruption in politics? If it is honorable for a party committee to sell public offices, why is it dishonorable for Assemblymen to sell their votes? If it be right for an appointing officer to promise or to give the emoluments of a public office within his patronage in consideration of personal or partisan service, why is it wrong for him to offer money for a vote? Bribery in the Legislature is the natural logical result of the whole system of venal politics known as spoils and patronage. Mr. Conkling resigned in order to strengthen this system. He substantially asserted that the Senators from a State should control the payment of the public money within it in the form of the salaries of minor officers. He asked the Legislature of New York to approve that doctrine. He expected to impose it upon a willing Senate. He and his henchmen in New York have constantly conformed to it. They have unscrupulously used the appointing and removing power to reward and punish subordinates. Obviously it is a totally corrupt system. It poisons the fountains of free government. But the corruption is quite as vital when it is employed in the form of patronage to control the votes of a Convention as when, by the open tender of money, it is used to buy the votes of a Legislature. If it should be proved that money has been paid to members of the Legislature to sign or not to sign a call for a caucus, to vote for or against any candidate, or for any illicit purpose, let every person proved to be guilty be punished to the utmost. But so long as the people allow party bosses to pay their way with the public money in the form of spoils, they must expect votes to be bought in Legislatures, and politics to be corrupted at every point.—Harpers Weekly.

COMMUNION WINE.

After all that has been written and said about communion wine during the last 20 years in the U. S., it seems strange that churches, elders and ministers will persist in retaining strong, fermented, alcoholic wines on the Lords table.

One Christian woman said lately, At our last communion the whole church smelt like a wine shop," and added, "I have taken fermented wine for the last time." Another said, "it smote me like a knife after I had tasted, and I never will put a drop in my mouth again. A friend of mine a reformed man said, "I would not dare to smell it, let alone taste it, even at the table of our Lord." And so I might multiply instances where brothers and sisters are offended because they have intoxicating wines offered them at the ordinance, commemorating the dying love of the world's Redeemer. More than that: one elder recently in celebrating the ordinance, said that unfermented wine would not do; it is not an appropriate emblem of the life that is in Christ, it is dead. It requires the wine that sparkles And holding it up exclaimed, how beautiful it is!" That sparkle has lured too many, even of the clergy to their graves. It has stamped the motherhood out of many a woman, and slain the father leaving only a demon instead. And I am asked to partake of it as the cup of blessing, when I know it is the cup of Devils.

As a Christian I protest against this great wrong. I never can believe my Lord put such wines on his table, and offered them to his disciples and invoked the blessing of the father upon them. I never shall. Did he not say "whoever looketh upon a woman to lust after her hath committed the sin already. Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer. Apply the same method of teaching to this whole drink business; apply the very principles of the gospel to it, and whoever puts drink to his neighbors lips puts him on the way to become a drunkard, and shuts him forever out of the kingdom of God. Too much of our drunkenness and laxity of public opinion in regard to this matter lies at the door of pulpit and pew! I love the church universal and bear cordial testimony to the nobility and soundness of most of the clergy that I have met.

But there are some exceptions who bring a shameful reproach upon all. They do more to breed infidelity than all the books Tom Payne ever wrote, or all the speeches Ingersoll can ever utter. And I would rather stand in the shoes of the latter before the bar of God than in the shoes of a Christian elder who insists on having fermented wine at the communion table, and after the solemn service pours a drink of what remains down his clerical throat for his stomach's sake and his often infirmities.

IN MEMORIAM.

DIED.– Near Merced Falls, June 23, 1881, Mary, beloved daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Thommason, aged 19 years and a member of Merced Falls Lodge No. 376, I. O. G. T. The lodge passed resolutions testifying their high appreciation of her excellence of character and conduct, and condoling with her relatives and the community in their irreparable loss.

MODERN SCIENCE. ! ! !

An excessivlely spleeny and wrathy letter comes now, calling the RESCUE to account for "battling against our infidel and natural science men and trying to save the time honored bible," and regrets "that" you are so weakminded and insane as to look back to the dark ages rather than to modern science for instruction, and cannot see that science will prevail and old mister Bible must fall back in the rear."

To what particular sin of the RESCUE now the above has reference, must probably remain an unsolved enigma to the world and the editor but it dont at all matter. There is a chance that it was drawn out by an article in the R. of 16 June ridiculing the evidently monstrous fallacies, not of science but of the self advertizing quack charlatans, who steal a title page of science and impose upon the ignorant while plainly advertizing their own ignorance to reasoning men.

Whenever the Bible shall be found guilty of a declaration of which science disproves the truth, it will be weakminded and insane to believe the bible upon that subject. And still that insanity will be of an exceedingly harmless type.

But there is another prevalent form of weakness and insanity which is much more unfortunate and pitiable. It is that blinding bigotry, which leads its votaries to believe that every ignorant tramp, who has learned by heart a few chapters of infidel argument from other men's writings and peddles them round at 25 cents admission as Denton did—,is a truthful prophet and expounder of true modern science, if he only denounces the Bible and ridicules and abuses and belies it and all who think they have reason to believe it to contain valuable instruction for the guidance of mankind.

People who argue on modern pretend ed science, should know something of what it is, but the noisiest do not. A certain class of anything believers, within the last 5 or 6 years. thot they could wade out into science quite safely. They brot Theodore Parker and various other great men down here from the spirit world, to locate and describe it. It took Mr. Parker just 5 seconds to come which with all the rest was accepted as most entirely probable, and that could not be disaproved. But there was as usual an unfortunate hitch. The beautiful world was far beyond the farthest fixed star, they said; and they all agreed in putting its distance at 36 thousand million miles. They supposed that was quite far enough, but science (not quack science) comes in and tells us the nearest fixed star is about 555 times farther away than that. But that mistake never shook the faith of any of the devotees; one such mistake in the Bible will scatter it to the winds forever, when it is found out.

And again no belief or unbelief is profitable or desirable, which excites enmity or anger in its priests or votaries, against their fellow men, simply because they dont see things thru the same medium, which the said priests desire to dictate shall alone be made use of for all men look thru.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.

The Watchword says this society had about the 1st. June several largely attended and interesting anniversary gatherings. One Sunday 250 temperance sermons were preached in Episcopal churches in and around London. Present membership 301,601 with 91,469 juvenile abstainers. Income nearly $70,000 a year. A good work has been done among the soldiers, and 4,839 sailors have signed the pledge during the past year. A womans branch goes for the domestic servants: domestic customs in England are such as to play sad havoc with the sober habits of household servants.

The chairman defended the double basis of the society, which admits two classes, "moderate" drinkers and total abstainers. To old workers this double basis looks absurd, but if it leads any kind of drinkers to think and read and hear and learn about drinking, a harvest of them will come in time into the abstinent class per force. Let us wish their experiment every success, tho the subject is too well understood here for it to be of any use in this country.

It is somewhat singular that the Episcopal church which seemed so long to look upon the temperance reform with lofty disdain, or affected to ignore it entirely, has in a very few years taken the most active position of all the churches in practical temperance work. Not long ago some of us looked upon this body as one of the last and most serious obstacles the temperance reform would have to encounter in its latter conflicts. It is cheering to hope that the ground of this apprehension exists no longer. It is more cheering to believe that the usefulness of this step will extend far beyond the victory of the English local option warfare. It indicates that the spirit of God is moving that church: that its candlestick will not be removed, that it has a future of blessing in store. Whatever of benefit shall come to the people thru this interest in behalf of temperance, the church will reap a ten-fold reflex benefit in the consequences of its obedience to the commands, behests and example of the Master. And that will be occasion of thankfulness and rejoicing for all who love the right.

A PEOPLES' RAILROAD A NECESSITY.

For the purpose of having railroad communication across this continent, enough of the people's money and lands have been contributed in subsidies and extra monstrous impositions of freights and fares, to have paid for a completely well stocked double steel rail track of road from San Francisco to New York; perhaps twice as much. And all the people have for this, is a gigantic hostile power raised up in our midst, which certainly affords us all the transport we want, but does it in such a manner as to impose the most oppressive, unjust and monstrously exorbitant taxes upon every interest and industry, that a free people have ever submitted to. And with the most unblushing defiance of the rights of the people, the railroad power has hired the Pacific Mail Company to double the rates at which it would be glad to do a large portion of our transportation.

There is a very general opinion that a market for grapes that will give the growers $25 a ton will be exceedingly remunerative, and that price assured in the future would doubtless induce five or ten times as many people to go into the vineyard business as are now engaged in it. Here we see at once the necessity of a people's railroad. With that we would very soon have in the grape season perhaps 100 carloads of grapes leaving here every morning, on a quick train for the East. The people's road could carry them at $40 a ton or 2 cts. a pound, and they could be sold in unlimited quantities, at a price that would give the vineyard men four or five cents, or nearly that, a pound. But $40 a ton would not pay 100 percent of the gross first cost of the railroad every year, nor 8 per cent of the first cost water-magnified 12 times: the people would not require such exorbitant profits on their own transportation. The charges are at present from $900 to $1100 a carload of 8 tons or about 7 cents a pound, which is almost equal to an absolute prohibition of a legitimate grape industry, a complete annihilation of the most prosperous industry of the state. If a transport was opened up for our fruit that would pay the railroad on this side of Omaha a dividend of 7 or 8 per cent besides wear and tear expenes, the value of the fruit product of California as it is now, would be multiplied many times. The vineyard and orchard property already in this state would be increased enough in value by trebling its income to pay for the construction of a great many miles of railroad every year. And the vacant lands of the state would soon be reduced to cultivation.

We have had many learned expositions of the actual large expenses of transportation, heavy grades, etc,; but we know that millions of tons are carried by rail 900 miles for $3 a ton, and that the C. P. R. R. Co. proposes to ship wheat by rail across the continent and thence to Liverpool, at a rate that will run off sailing ships now carrying it round Cape Horn at $10 to $15 a ton, We want then no specious argument to be attempted to prove to us that the charge of $112 to $140 a ton for carrying grapes and other fruit to the Atlantic, and $120 a ton for bringing back certain classes of merchandise here, is not something in the vicinity of ten times the actual fairly remunerative honest rate. It is evidently and unmistakably a gigantic robbery of the farmers and people, who at present have no remedy and are obliged to be thus forcibly defrauded by the monopoly which they have created; and which they have endowed with all the present and future profits of the labor of their hands and the surplus products of their lands. Let us make ourselves yokes of iron and wear them resignedly, if we are going to be railroad peons.

A JUSTICE OF THE PEACE in Tehama has a printed notice which he fills up with the names of known drunkards in his township and serves on the liquor sellers there. He deserves the highest commendation for that act and his example should be followed. It is especially commended to Vallejo J. Ps. The form is as follows.

NOTICE.

COMMON OR HABITUAL DRUNKARDS.

STATE OF CALIFORNIA, COUNTY OF TEHAMA; JUSTICE'S COURT, TEHAMA TOWNSHIP.

To ——: Your attention is called to the following Sections of the Penal Code:

SEC. 397. Every person who sells or furnishes, or who causes to be sold or furnished, intoxicating liquors to any habitual or common drunkard or Indian, is guilty of a misdemeanor.

Sec. 19. Except in cases where a different punishment is prescribed by this Code, every offense declared to be a misdemeanor is punished by imprisonment in a county jail, not exceeding six months, or by fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or both.

You will therefore take notice that it has been shown to the satisfaction of this Court, that —— of —— is a —— drunkard within the meaning of the law; and you are hereby forbid to sell, furnish, or cause to be sold or furnished any intoxicating liquors to the said ——, or you will be punished according to law.

Dated this —— day of ——, 1881.

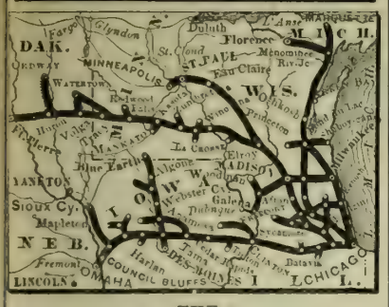
Justice of the Peace, Tehama Township.



ATTEST: ——.

TOMBSTONE. This place which was evidently a temple of drinking and gambling has paid very dear for one barrel of whisky. A barrel of man poison was being opened near a lighted lamp, and the hell within the barrel communicated with the other fire and burned up nearly the whole town. The Chronicle thinks the fire was due to carelessly constructed wooden buildings and greater care should be exercised in future and a good water supply should be at hand. It is a good plan to build a town without any whisky, for whether it burns up with literal fire as Tombstone did or is consumed by the equally destructive fire of internal whisky as Tombstone will be when rebuilt, is not of much consequence, The whisky mill has destroyed the business, ruined the value of the property, prohibited the improvement and utterly cursed the peace and morals and welfare of every community in this state where it has been permitted. Just as well to have whisky burn up a town in one day as to take a year to do it.

A SHORT TEMPERANCE SERMON.—Temperance sermons are preached daily. One does not need to go to New York to find the text, yet the recent suicide there of a trusted man who went to the Bellevue Hospital gate and shot himself, with this note in his pocket, "Bury me in the Potter's Field. Cause, alcohol. Cause nobody's business!" is a sad commentary on the curse of intoxicants.—Ex.

A LEARNED French Senator M. Littre who had taught infidelity for about fifty years, thot best to call in the priest and recant the other day, when he found he had to die. Now let us hear of a man who has earnestly professed and lived and taught christianity for 50 or 25 or 5 or 1 year, who thinks it safest to turn infidel on his death bed.

The following goods have recently

Changed in Price:

The market for tea is very strong, an advance of 1c to 3c per lb. on most grades has been made. We have not changed our quotations.

Sugar has declined ⅛c per lb. Dry granulated is 13c, cube or crushed 13¼c, extra golden C 11¾c, Mariposa C 11¼c, in bbls; less quantities ¼c additional.

Hams of good quality have advanced slightly. Little or no change in California hams.

The market for canned vegetables and fruits is weak, and in some cases a decline is noticed.

Flour is firmer, and nearly all grades have advanced a fraction.

Coal oil has advanced. Starlight is worth $2.80; Continental, $2.65. Low test oils, $2.00 to $2.25 per case.

☞ A large addition to our store-room, made during the last few weeks, will give us much greater facilities for doing business, enable us to fill orders more promptly, and also to buy goods in larger quantities at lower figures, all of which advantages shall be shared by our patrons. If you hesitate to send your remittance direct, send it to the RESCUE or any paper in which you see our advertisement, or to any bank or friend here to be delivered on presentation of shipping receipt. We wish to give you all the security possible, but do not include losses sure to be made by credit sales in arranging our prices.
